14 Days' Free Trial.

¶The most sanitary and up-to-date method ever invented.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

The Champion
SEED CRUSHING MILL

Reg. No. 592,206

This Mill is a great improvement on any other on the market. It is all metal, and fitted with removable plates; it will crush any kind of seed, from Rape to Sunflower, by simply adding or removing plates. It has not to be taken to pieces when a small quantity of seed has been ground and the contents emptied. The seed runs out of side into a receptacle as fast as it can be ground. It can be easily fastened to a bench or table for use, features that are sure to be appreciated by all fanciers. Notwithstanding the superior utility of this Mill over any other, the price is only the same as an ordinary Mill, 1/6 each; by post, 1/9. A few of the old pattern, 1/3 each, to clear. For nest pans, egg drawers, fountains, cages, wire fronts, baths, and all Aviary and Birdroom requisites, bird foods, etc., send for my new illustrated price list.—J. PITCHFORD, London Road, STOKE-ON-TRENT.

FREE. RINGS. FREE.

I am giving absolutely free with every ½ gross of rings, one of my Pedigree Books for 128 pairs of birds until 1,000 are given away, free. My Rings are all embossed and cannot fill with dirt, and have number and year on, or numbered only. They are not cheap foreign rubbish which lame your birds. I pay Union wages, and am also the oldest and largest maker of Canary rings living. I am also maker to the Aberdeen University Bird Migration Dept., and have made for them alone over 40,000 for the smallest bird up to the Eagle. Rings 6d. per doz., 2/6 ½-gross; Pedigree Books, 6d. each.—SAM DRAKE, 31, Haley Hill, HALIFAX.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

What a fine ambition for a British bird lover! Too high? Not if you've got "Nutshell" No. 1, "The Goldfinch." This booklet shows you the simplest way to catch your own, how to treat the Goldfinch when caught, how to hand-rear the young; how to distinguish sex; and answers innumerable other "how's." For those who prefer buying to catching, there is a valuable section, and feeding troubles are completely overcome. The exhibition Goldfinch is described, and it is possible, if the hints are followed, for every fancier of British to have a winning Goldie. For full information as to moulting, and the best show and stock cages, you cannot better "Nutshell" No. 1, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

WORTH ATTENTION.

TO Lark fanciers: special select singing cock Skylark, splendid shop attraction, can be heard 200 yards; I will match him to sing any Lark in this country; he is a real loud contest bird, and been trained for that purpose; steady and a fine specimen of a real Dunstable Lark; 1/6; approval anywhere. Hear, and see, what you are buying; no fresh-caught rubbish; secret of feeding free. Hundreds of testimonials unsolicited: George Holt, Dunstable.

THE Skylark is an easily kept species of softbill, and is unequalled as a house bird, provided it receives proper attention. Look here! The feeding of Larks; the taking and feeding of the young; catching and sexing; moulting; hints concerning young birds; the Lark for contest singing; selecting the right bird; getting the right song; training for song and exhibition; these are the contents of "Nutshell" No. 3, "The Skylark," post free 2½d., from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FOR a full description of two of the most popular softbills, you cannot have a better booklet than "Nutshell" No. 4, "The Song Thrush and Blackbird." With its help you will be able to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition. Included in the work are directions for hand-rearing and the selection of show birds, as well as particulars of cages, "Nutshell" No. 4, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BREED YOUR OWN WINNERS

by letting C. A. House, a leading expert and judge, help you. Get his grand work, "Norwich Canaries." Its tells you all that you need know about the birdroom and cages; how they should be fitted up; breeding, the best time to pair, and what methods to adopt during the incubation period, and how to meet emergencies; moulting, what is needful to bring it to a successful issue, how to feed for colour, and when to stop breeding; exhibiting, how to prepare your birds. Every lover of Norwich can start a stud for himself and breed for profit if this work is consulted. It contains two of the finest coloured plates ever published, as well as a large number of helpful sketches. 1/1 post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

3/- GOOD FEEDING HENS 3/-

To make room for young stock I am offering 50 large, healthy, reliable feeding hens at 3/- each (travelling cages 3d. extra); every bird is in sound health and sent on approval) with pleasure; don't miss this opportunity, but send at once to Joe Thomas, Breeder, Exhibitor and Exporter, Ambler Thorn, Halifax; established over 34 years.

THE "FILUP" BIRD FEEDER.

Boy of 12 years successful with it.

And it has this season been supplied to most of the leading fanciers, including Messrs. Hedder, Sheldon, Midgley, Hawes Bros., Ogden Bros., etc., etc. Read what some of our customers say. Mr. G. L. Sampson, Hon. Sec. Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes:—Enclosed pleased find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your Filup Feeders. The one I had from you last season was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season.

Mr. S. Preston, Member B.R.C.C., 228, Dudley-road, Wolverhampton, writes:—My hen gave up feeding her young when four days old. I started feeding them with the Filup Feeder. Then I gave it to my boy, who is only 12 years old, to feed them with it. He has reared them to five week old, and they now feed themselves. I think it's a splendid invention, and so simple to use. Every breeder should have one; it's so cheap, and a great saver of young birds, and has been a great success to me.

Mr. F. Gifford, 112, Shortlands-road, Sittingbourne, writes: The Filup Bird Feeder has saved me four nice young ones already, so if I go on at this rate it will be worth its weight in gold.

The only way to have a record breeding season is to buy a Filup Feeder. See advt. in Appliance column.

KEEP EYES AND EARS OPEN

so as to detect when any of your Rollers are going wrong. How can you detect anything wrong? You don't know? Well, you ought to, for your lack of knowledge will be disastrous to the singing powers of your birds. "Nutshell" No. 10 gives you this knowledge, and if you don't get it, it will be a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Which bird promises to be good with hollow roll, bell-roll, bass-roll, and Koller? How do you cure a bird of noisiness? What are the best training methods and the best preparation for contest singing? For answers to these great questions in Roller Canarydom, and also full particulars as to correct keeping and breeding, get "Nutshell" No. 10, "The Roller Canary," 2½d. post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SOMETHING GOOD.

There is something here that will interest you, so please read it through carefully, for if you wish to have a successful breeding season, you must have birds of good quality, that are already in breeding condition. This is the class of birds I am now offering; every bird a picked one, that will please you and do you good (no wasters or German rubbish here). Let me send you birds on approval; you will be convinced there is nothing to equal them at anything like the prices. Every bird guaranteed superior quality. NOTICE! To those about to buy a Grey Parrot. There are many points to look for when making your purchase, ways of telling at a glance in what state of health the bird is. Though it is difficult to distinguish sex, there are means. The Grey Parrot is a delicate bird, and the feeding of a newly-imported specimen is therefore a matter of the utmost importance. Then, the Parrot acclimatised, care with its general diet is very needful; there are many foods which it will readily eat, but which must be rigidly avoided. With due care you can make a grand talker of a "Grey," and quickly, too, if you know how. What is a common mistake which Parrot lovers make? The answer to this question, and to every other concerning the keeping of this popular bird in health and condition will be found in "Nutshell" No. 17, "The Grey Parrot," by Wesley T. Page; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.
Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

How the League is Spreading.
Grand Support from New Zealand.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

A Vice-President from Over-seas.

During the ensuing week CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE reaches the first anniversary of its birth, and, although during the year I have received very many letters full of expressions of good-fellowship, and of sympathy with the objects of our LEAGUE, I think I must single out the one published below as that which has afforded me the most pleasure of all to receive. Mr. Thomson's name has been added to our list of Vice-Presidents, as above, and I am sure that all LEAGUE members will join with me in welcoming our fellow fanciers from the other side of the world. Besides Mr. Thomson, our New Zealand members are Messrs. J. Scott, R. Hopkins, Craig, D. McLean, W. Stephens, Allan Binnie, A. Gillan, and J. Stark, all of Dunedin, with an equal number, at least, to follow, as in Mr. Thomson's letter, as below. Mr. Thomson's ideals are our own, and are those which we shall always have in front of us. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has already become, even in its first year of its existence, a power to be reckoned with, and it only remains for those of my fellow-readers of our organ CAGE BIRDS, who have not yet joined our ranks to follow the lead given them, and our LEAGUE will possess a voice that will be heard whenever unduly repressive measures are sought to be enforced against the continuance of the hobby, which is dear to us all.

"Hands Across the Sea."

Dear Sir,—It is now some time since I received your welcome note re CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I have kept the matter in view, and, at a meeting of the newly-formed Otago Canary and Cage Bird Club, I made an appeal to members, with the result that eight paid the fee to join the LEAGUE, while seven or eight others promised to join. I am enclosing the subscriptions, together with my own, as Vice-President. As our club gets stronger, I hope to secure an increased membership for the LEAGUE. It is a matter of regret that our hobby—in the Homeland at least—should be endangered by the bigoted ignorance of misguided enthusiasts. "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." If these people sincerely desire to aid in the preservation of bird life, let them form an organisation to suppress the trade in, and the wearing of, bird plumage and stuffed birds. Here in New Zealand, the law makes it impossible for the bird-keeper to buy the more desirable of our native birds; but the taxidermist can carry on a brisk trade in rare skins and stuffed specimens! Now, it is really not necessary to ask which is better—to be able to purchase the live bird in the bird-shop, or the skin or set-up specimen in a taxidermist's. I am hopeful that the formation of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will eventuate in the inauguration of an EMPIRE LEAGUE OF BIRD-KEEPERS, banded together to promote and protect the hobby, to put down dishonest practices of unscrupulous dealers, to enlist the patronage of members for those dealers who keep their birds under proper sanitary conditions, and to disseminate a knowledge of up-to-date avicultural methods amongst bird-keepers in general. It is high time that bird-dealers of the description of Poll Sweedlepipe should be effectually discouraged, as well as the avicultural methods of birdkeepers of the type of the mercurial Mr. Bailey.

I shall be pleased at all times to forward the interests of the LEAGUE. Hoping to have some further subscriptions to forward at an early date.

Very faithfully yours,
M. THOMSON, Hon. Sec.
(Otago Canary and C.B. Club).
Dunedin, New Zealand.

Look Out for Next Week's Notes.

To signalise the opening of a new year, I hope by next week to be able to make a full announcement of our innovations in the way of Membership Certificates, Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals for competition among our members at next season's shows, etc. The new arrangements have necessitated a revision of our leaflets, setting forth the aims and objects of the LEAGUE. These leaflets are now in the hands of the printers, and I shall be pleased to send a copy to any member forwarding a stamp for postage, or a copy will be sent with the receipt for renewal subscriptions. Local Hon. Secs., Secretaries of Societies, and any member who would like some copies for distribution among his friends, may have a supply post free, upon application.

Early Members' Subscriptions Now Falling Due.

The subscriptions of the first of our members to join will now be falling due, and I should be obliged if members will send these along. If paid before the date of actually falling due it will not make any difference, for the renewal receipts will be dated for one year forward of the date when the subscriptions are actually due, and not from the date on which they may happen to be paid. Members will save much unnecessary trouble to myself if they will forward their subscription without waiting to be asked individually.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

Nesting in the Wheels.

A train of some seventy coal trucks has, during the strike, stood in the siding at Maidenhead Station, and yesterday, in the wheels of five successive trucks, shielded by a bank, eleven Thrushes' nests were discovered. In one the hen bird is sitting on four eggs.—Taken from the "Daily Mirror,' and sent by Eric Lycett (aged 9), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

The Grateful Jackdaw.

A Jackdaw that had been made a great pet of by a lady, often sitting on her shoulder and eating from her mouth, one day flew into the room, and, perching on her shoulder in the usual way, dropped a fat green caterpillar into her mouth, no doubt thinking he was giving her a choice tit-bit. It was very kind and self-denying of him, but the lady did not appreciate the gift as she ought to have done.—Taken from Aunt Louisa's Book of Animal Stories, and sent by Albert Armes (aged 13), 1, Eugene Place, Ladywood Road, Birmingham.

*A Clever Canary.

A poor woman whom we know has a very clever little Canary. The woman lets some water trickle into a basin, and the Canary begins to sing; and then it puts its head close to the bars of the cage and says quite plainly: "You beauty; kiss me, you pretty creature." Mother was not told beforehand what the clever bird said, but she knew in a moment what it was. The woman does not try to teach it anything else, because she is afraid it might forget what it knows now.—From "Little Folks."—Sent by Emily Wakeman, 5a, Wilton Crescent Mews, Belgrave Square, London, S.W.

*No Place Like Home.

While walking with father last summer through the path alongside the River Teify, our dog "Jack" pointed down the side. We thought that a water rat was there, but to our surprise it was a young Bullfinch. Father took the bird home and hand-fed it, and it turned out to be a hen. Last winter he gave the loan of her to a friend for bird catching, and she escaped. The following day father was working the garden, and what flew on his back but his pet Bullfinch? She had flown home the distance of a quarter of a mile. Wherever I roam, she pipes, there is no place like home.—Sent by Gwladys Griffiths (age 10), Tyrhiw Cnwce, Kilgerran, Pembrokeshire.

Use of Bird Lime.

At Stoke, Staffs, before Mr. C. Lynam (in the chair), Mr. T. James, Mr. H. Leese, and Mr. J. Woolliscroft, George Underwood, Bird Street, Stoke, and John Turnock, Newcastle Street, Penkhull, were summoned for using lime for the purpose of taking wild birds during the close season.—P.C. Duncan stated that he found the defendants in a field close to the Cottage Homes. They had a decoy bird in a cage, and were using bird lime.—Defendants pleaded guilty, and were ordered to pay 4s. 6d. costs each, and to forfeit the decoy bird.

Fire Caused by Birds' Nests.

A fire broke out in the roof of North View Lodge, Market Street, Portmouth, on Wednesday last week, owing, it is supposed, to a spark setting fire to some old birds' nests under the eaves.

Bird Protection in France.

A new society for the protection of birds has been founded in France by the Societe Nationale d'Acclimatation de France, thanks to the enthusiasm and energy of M. Albert Chapellier. This will be known as the Ligue Francaise pour la Protection des Oiseaux. It is issuing a bulletin, in the first number of which the President, M. Magaud d'Aubusson, outlines the programme of the new organisation.

New Cage Bird Society Formed.

The Hornsey, Wood Green, and District Cage Bird Society is really an offshoot of the Wood Green Fur and Feather Society, and the cage bird fanciers have concluded that the time has come for a special society. The inaugural meeting was held at Bedford's, High Road, Wood Green, on Thursday of last week, and about thirty members were notified for a start. Mr. Pomeroy was elected chairman, with Mr. Cobden as deputy. The committee consists of Messrs. Game, Clay, Howie, Bates, Rippin, and Surridge. It is proposed to hold meetings on the first Thursday in every month, and the annual subscription will be 2s. 6d. Mr. P. Brooks, of 3, Trinity Road, Wood Green, was elected hon. secretary, with Mr. Pledger as assistant.

I am in receipt of the beautifully bound volume of Cage Birds which you so kindly sent me, writes Mr. W. A. Wilson (Leeds). Sincerely thanking you for same and wishing Cage Birds every success.

Mr. Fred Hammond, Bradford, who is in the office of the American Consulate at Bradford, informs us that a large number of the Consulate's accounts and reports were on the ill-fated "Titanic," and had consequently all to be re-written.

At the annual general meeting of the Deal, Walmer, and District Fanciers it was decided to hold their seventh annual show on Nov. 27 and 28, writes Mr. W. H. Thompson. The secretaries submitted balance sheet to meeting, showing that the society was in a very favourable position, with £7 11s. 3d. at bank and £25 9s. 4d. stock account.

A Country Diary.

A little bird picked up at Aruside recently proves to be a Waxbill Weaver-finch (Estrilda astrilda), a native of Africa, but commonly kept as a cage bird. Its feet, tail, and plumage generally indicated that it had been in captivity; it had either escaped or been released. If someone had intentionally let it have its liberty they had made a mistake; its featherless scalp and general appearance showed that it had run the gauntlet of the beaks of some of our native birds—probably Sparrows. Why Sparrows and some other birds will attack and often kill a stranger is hard to explain, but it is even harder to understand how they know the difference between an escaped foreigner and a rare passing migrant. A possible explanation is that a bird which has grown used to cage life is bewildered when it finds itself at liberty, and is less able to evade its persecutors than one which has never known confinement. It is generally cruel to release foreign cage birds, and never serves any useful purpose.—"Manchester Guardian."

The Bird's Nest.

(Child's Song.)

O blackie, blackie, I ken your nest,
Ower in the auld thorn tree;
But, blackie, blackie, ye needna skirl,
Aud busk up your tail at me.
Your nest sae spruce and eggs o' grey
Are safe as a bank might be.

O howlet, howlet, I ken your nest
Up in the tall pine tree,
And gin I could come at the howlet's nest,
The eggs would belang tae me;
For howlet, howlet, ye herry the nest
O' Ilka bird ye see.

O robin, robin, I ken your nest
Under the ivy tree;
But wha would meddle a Robin's nest
Should ne'er be a frien' tae me;
The Wren and Robin are God's wee pets,
Sae treat them w' charity.

"I had no less than 17 letters in reply to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS of April 13th. I have sold all my surplus stock and have nothing left to sell."—A. H. Campbell (Harrow-on-the-Hill).

"Kindly thank through CAGE BIRDS all who answered my advert in CAGE BIRDS. I had so many replies I could not answer all separately. Wishing C.B. every success, as one of its many regular readers.—J. Goodchild (Clare).

Amusing Case of Homing Instinct.

A few days ago a "Daily Mail" correspondent told how a Robin, having discovered the larder at a rectory in Gloucestershire, was guilty of many thefts, until he was caught by the cook, who "gave him a good talking to." On the second conviction she soused him in a pail and then stretched gauze over the window; but all to no effect, for the Robin went back again and again. The sequel is now reported. She caught him again in the larder, put him in a small basket on the handle-bar of her bicycle, and rode away two miles from the rectory before releasing him. The Robin flew away, but reappeared in the garden on the morning next but one after his adventure.

Hard Luck for the Farmer.

The Tawny or Brown Owl is described as a very wicked and destructive bird, but it is also a scheduled bird, and a North-country pigeon fancier has just been fined for killing a fine specimen of this particular breed. The Owl took an interest in the fancier's chicks, and paid the penalty. The fancier told the magistrates that it was a most serious matter to have one of his chicks, valued at 7s., destroyed by the wicked Owl, and he produced a pictorial magazine which showed an Owl doing great destruction among the poultry; but the Bench considered it their duty to let the birds have a chance, and if the mother of the chicks could not protect her family, so much the worse for the owner.

An Appreciation.

I got a pleasant surprise, writes Mr. T. S. Mabon, when I opened my Cage Birds last Friday and found my Scottish National winner inside. Thank you very much for the favour you have done me, for I deem it such seeing there are so many good birds on the show bench. Your artist must be very smart, as it could not have been more like him. He also won first prize at Lochgelly in a class of 28. I have taken up your valuable paper weekly ever since its first issue, and have found it a great help.

I am glad to say the results of my advert. in CAGE BIRDS were all that could be wished for, as I got replies from Scotland and the Isle of Man. You may be sure if I want to part with any more birds I shall certainly send my advert to CAGE BIRDS.—D. Pendleton, Liverpool.

Please withdraw my advt. in "CAGE BIRDS," as I have sold all my birds.—Arthur Foulds (Manchester)

TWENTY YEARS OF CANARY BREEDING.

THE METHOD I HAVE FOUND THE BEST.

By JEFFRY JEFFRIS (Southall).

IN writing this article, I propose to give the method I have adopted as the outcome of some twenty years of Canary breeding, and one which I have found undeniably successful. It is not exactly for the old hand, but rather for the benefit of the beginner, who has not been over successful, that I am penning these lines. I do not intend to deal with the different varieties of Canaries, but am supposing the fancier has selected whichever variety has taken his or her fancy.

In the first place, it is no good pairing your birds until they are quite ready; that is, the cocks must be in absolutely full song, and almost getting through the wires of the cage after the hens, who are flying and hopping about gaily, and calling to the cock birds. About the middle of March, or from that to the beginning of April, your birds being in condition, you may safely put them together.

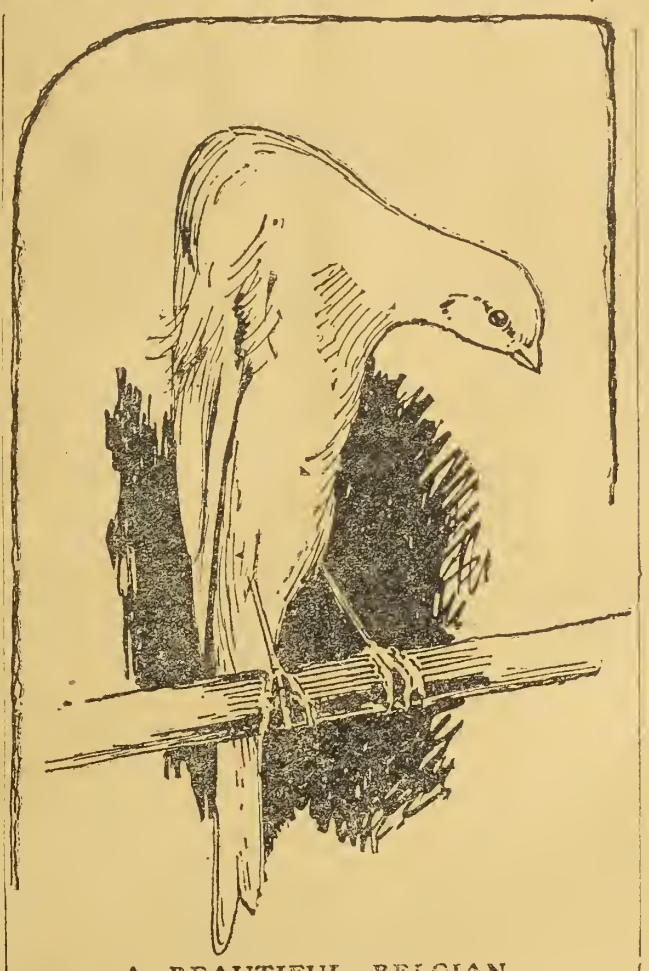
How to Feed Your Pairs of Birds.

Having paired your birds, you must supply them with canary seed in the hopper, one teaspoonful of egg-food every other day to each pair, and, on the days you do not give egg-food, a teaspoonful of German rape one day and a teaspoonful of niger another. Feed so until the hen has laid her clutch of eggs, and then during the time she is sitting give canary seed only. On about the fourth day after you have paired up, put in the nest pan, having previously put a lining into same. It is best to stick this in with either flour or starch paste; some fanciers sew the lining in, but I have found that sometimes a hen will get her feet entangled in the stitches, and this may mean a broken egg or two. Place the nest-pan on a hook at the back of the cage, between and a little higher than the perches. I say a little higher than the perches because some hens, if they can see a perch when sitting, will fly straight off the nest to it, and very likely bring out an egg with them; if the perches are a little below the top of the nest-pan, they have to rise in the nest before they can see a perch, and this, therefore, considerably reduces the likelihood of an egg or young bird being dragged out, some hens being rather careless in that respect.

Supply your birds with a piece of cuttlefish bone, plenty of sharp gritty sand, also bake egg-shells in the oven and powder them up; these will help to make the shells of the eggs you are anxiously waiting for. Of course, you will give them some nesting material at the time of putting in the nest-pan. This will keep the birds quite busy for a few days, first putting it in tho nest-pan and then pulling it out again, until her ladyship settles down in earnest. You will generally find that about a fortnight elapses after pairing, before the first egg is laid, sometimes a little longer, but do not be over anxious, providing the hen keeps in good health.

The Best Cure for Egg-Binding.

I have never had one single instance of egg-binding in the whole of my career, but the best cure for this is to get a jug of boiling-water, place a piece of muslin, or some light fabric over it, catch the hen and hold her over this for a few minutes, when in nine times out of ten the egg will pass from her all right. Do not hold her so that the steam will scald her, but a couple of inches or so over the jug. I have touched upon this matter because cases do occur at times, and I know from others that this is the best cure. If you find the hen looking very mopy, her feathers ruffled, and with a swollen appearance round the vent, which is firm to the touch, lose no time, but resort to the jug.



A BEAUTIFUL BELGIAN.

Winner of many prizes. The property J. D. Horrill (Barnstaple).

When the first egg is laid, you will take this away, and substitute a dummy one, doing this each day until the third egg is laid. In the evening of the day the third egg is laid, take the nest-pan out of the cage, and put the nesting material into shape; this is easily done with a hot fowl's egg. Canaries are not, as a rule, good nest-builders. Do not put too much material in, or her ladyship may take exception to it. Well sprinkle with Keating's Insect Powder; it will not harm the birds, but will keep down that pest, red mite. Return the three eggs, and replace nest-pan.

If you want to run the cock with another hen, remove him at the same time. But in this you must be guided by circumstances; most hens will set and rear a young brood by themselves, but some will not sit a day without the cock bird, whilst some will sit all right, but will not feed their young unless the cock is present.

The Value of a Good Splash.

We will now return to the sitting hen. She may lay one or two more eggs after you have set her, but do not interfere with her beyond giving her fresh seed and water each day. On the tenth, eleventh and twelfth days hang on the bath, and she will probably have a good splash in it, which will help to soften the inner skin of the eggs, and thus enable the young birds to liberate themselves more easily. If the hen will not bathe you must dip each egg in a cupful of luke-warm water on these days, once each day. On the thirteenth day you must supply some egg-food, as by that time, if all goes well, the young birds will be hatching out.

For the first three days use yolk only with an equal bulk of powdered Osborne Biscuit; after the third day you can use the white as well as the yolk. You must also supply German rape and hemp seeds. Give the hemp whole, as this keeps the hen off the nest longer shelling it, and thereby gives the youngsters more fresh air, and so helps to strengthen their coustitutions. After the third day, give a little green-food, such as watercress, young lettuce, or young dandelion leaves; but be sure there is no frost on it. A good plan is to keep the green-stuff in the warm kitchen all night, or to rinse it in warm water; if you do the latter, be sure to dry it perfectly before giving it to the birds. Gradually increase the quantity each day by giving it at first once, then twice, and then three times a day. You will also, if possible, give the egg-food fresh three times a day. By doing this, it induces the hen to feed more.

During the very hot weather you must take care there is no stale food of any kind left in the cage; also keep your cages and utensils absolutely clean. I do not mean you to worry the birds unnecessarily, but simply to keep them clean, and in a perfectly sanitary condition; it will pay you in the long run.

As the Young Become Restless.

At the age of about three weeks the youngsters will generally be getting restless in their nest, and probably one or two may venture as far as the edge of the nest-pan. Each day will see them more forward, and get first on the perches and from there to the cage bottom and peck about generally. At the age of four weeks they can be transferred to a cage by themselves. Generally they can feed well then, but if one or other is going about the cage with its feathers ruffled and "calling" to be fed, put it in a nursery cage for a day, and let the old birds attend to it. Generally this will be sufficient, and it will feed itself all right afterwards.

When the young are transferred from their parents, you must supply them with egg-food, the same as you have been doing, for the first week, then gradually decrease it until at about seven weeks you are giving just a little each day. Also you must supply canary, summer rape and hemp seeds, all crushed, from the time they leave their parents, until the age of six weeks. when they will be able to crack the hard seed. Then discontinue giving hemp. One word about hemp: Crush this fresh each day and do not leave any from one day to the next in the cage, and at no time give an excess.

OUR TIMELY HINTS.

HUNDREDS POURING IN.

*It is quite impossible even to acknowledge the hundreds of postcards now reaching us under this heading. Four prizes of 2s. 6d., each (cash), or our books to value, at option of winner, are given weekly to the senders of the best four Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POST-CARDS, with sender's name and address at foot, and reach us by Monday's post. Winners.

*The Outcast.

On a morning of inspection it sometimes happens that a hen casts out of the nest one of her newly-hatched young. When the hen is by herself it is rarely molested, and it is astonishing the length of time they live when found on the cage floor. The young outcast, which appears to be dead, should be gently placed in the palm of the hand, and vigorously breathed upon. In a large majority of cases it will be restored to animation, and when symptoms of life are observed it should be placed back in the nest, where the warmth of its mother will restore the wonted appearance of the poor outcast.—A. Dennis (32, King's Road, Cudworth, near Barnsley).

*To Buyers of Hemp Seed.

When you buy hemp seed you will sometimes find the shell very green, but the kernel good. If you wish to keep the hemp good, try this method:—Choose a fine sunny day, spread some paper on the ground, then spread your hemp seed on it; leave it so for a few hours, turning the seed now and then, and you will then find that the seed will keep good up to the last.—F. G. Ball (Shotton, Chester).

*Taking Care of Nesting Material.

Having bought your material, look over it and remove any hard spiky bits of moss, which would very likely make pin-holes in the eggs; also remove any dirt. Then place in a pan, the cowhair as well, and pour boiling water over it; add about a teaspoonful of strong solution of permanganate of potash, and leave until nearly cold. Wring it as dry as possible with the hands, and then finish drying it in tho oven. When dry, store in airtight tins, placing a piece of camphor in each tin. This is worth the extra trouble, as it makes the material soft and pliable, and the hens make a better nest with it. It also helps to keep the red mite away.—J. A. Pearce, (148, Winston Road, Stoke Newington).

To Remedy a Cracked Egg.

Take the egg between your forefinger and thumb as soon as cracked. With a small brush enamel it over just where it is cracked to keep it airtight. If not airtight, it is of no use. I have been very successful with this method with fertile eggs.—J. P. Andrew (Whitemoor, near St. Austell, Cornwall).

*To Frustrate an Egg-eating Goldie.

When breeding Mules, it is often found that Goldfinches especially are apt to eat the eggs of the hen Canary if one is not on the spot to take the egg away as soon as laid. No doubt many fanciers, like myself, have to be away at work very early in the morning, before the hen has laid her egg, and often find, on returning, that the egg has been eaten, or a small hole pecked in it. Tho best plan I find to obviate this is to get the Canary hen to build her nest inside a little box (such as a small travelling box used for sending birds away), with about three wires taken out. The Goldfinch will be afraid to enter such a dark place, and the nest and the eggs will be kept safe.—F. A. Hinder (Cross-hayes, Malmesbury, Wilts).

A Hint to Smokers.

Great care should be taken to thoroughly cleanse the hands after smoking cigarettes or handling one's pipe each time before giving watercress, etc., to the parent birds to feed their young.—H. E. Smith (62, Tranquil Vale, Blackheath).

Wild-Bird Life.

The Mystery Bird and His Mate.

That curious little bird, the Wryneck, has been heard and seen for some time, and now the Cuckoo has arrived. In the minds of bird lovers the two species are closely associated, the former having earned for itself the name of the Cuckoo's mate. With the coming of the Cuckoo commences the summer months, for no matter if we see the Chiffchaff, Wheatear, Willow Wren, Pipits, and other migrants, it is not until the Cuckoo has "told his name to all the hills" that we feel that the army of visitors is actually with us, and that the most pleasant time of the year is beginning. The soft, far-reaching notes of the "mystery bird," will be heard by thousands, both old and young, and welcomed by all as a song of hope and gladness, associated with warm, bright skies, sunny meads, and quiet woodlands.

All Too Short a Stay.

The Cuckoo is a strange mysterious bird, whose life history we are only of late years beginning to understand. Arriving in April, and departing again in July, his stay with us is all too short, and when we miss his call from the sounds of the country side we feel the summer months are passing far too quickly. No record exists of the bird making any attempt at nest-building on its own account. It is quite content to deposit its eggs (singly as a rule) in the nests of smaller birds, for them to hatch out, and act as foster parents to its young. We now know that if a young Cuckoo is hatched in a nest containing other young ones, it will, when but a few days old, eject the other occupants, so that it receives from the parent birds the whole of their attention and food. Our forefathers firmly believed that the young Cuckoo not only swallowed all the other chicks, but finally devoured their foster-parents, a mark of ingratitude which we now know to be false. In the same way they believed that the bird changed to a Hawk in the winter its resemblance to that bird while on the wing accounting, no doubt, for this delusion. It has been proved that the Cuckoo does not lay her egg direct into the nest of the victim, but having dropped it on the ground, picks it up again in her beak, and carries it to the selected nest. This knowledge of her habits clears up the mystery of her eggs found in the nests of such birds as the Common Wren and Willow Warbler, which build for themselves domed nests. The eggs are small for the size of the bird, and vary widely in coloration.

The Long-eared Owl.

The Long-eared Owl comes forth in the evening, and is busiest in the hours between daylight and dark. Its flight is swift and noiseless, as the bird sweeps the woods and meadows with hungry eyes. In the whole range of Nature there are no more wonderful eyes. The very existence of the bird depends on them, and they are made to collect every random ray of light. Mice appear to be the chief food of the species.

Flocks of Carrion Crows.

The Carrion Crow is not supposed to be a gregarious species, but in the Alps they occasionally gather in huge flocks. They will settle on the banks of some quiet stream to drink, and then wheeling round and round, perch in the pine trees for the night. One can almost imagine he is watching a flock of Rooks, although no Rooks are in sight; they are seldom seen in some of the Alpine valleys.

Snow Buntings Not Plentiful.

Snow Buntings have not been particularly plentiful this past winter. They generally frequent tho verge of the snow, their pie-bald plumage being specially suitable for hiding them as they fly from place to place in search of food.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, exeept enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order far sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee af sixpenee,, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this souree will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (Landon).

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

HOARSENESS (Uncertain).—The bird has been accustomed probably to a warmer room than yours, which would account for the hoarseness, or it may have a naturally hoarse voice, as some hens certainly have. In any case see that she is quite free from cold draughts and extreme variations between day and night temperature. Every second day for a week give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut sopped in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternating days add 20 drops of whisky, six of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil to the drinking water, and shake well together. I think you may safely venture to mate her at the end of the week, even if the apparent hoarseness has not disappeared.

OUT OF SONG (Miss D'Alton).—If the bird is really in good health, it will douhtless begin to sing very soon now. Its silence is probably due to the moult taking a little more than usual out of it. Treat as follows for a fortnight: Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days twice each week give a pinch of the seed mixture, and every day a spray of chickweed or two dandelion leaves. Keep gritty sand on cage floor regularly. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

MISFORTUNE (M.U.M.).—I'm afraid your troubles are chiefly, if not wholly, due to wrong treatment. If you mean that linseed, for instance, forms a part of your staple seed diet this item alone would account for much trouble among your stock. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" and see if you cannot discover other points in which your management is faulty. First of all see that the birds are not exposed to cold draughts, nor yet overheated, nor subject to rapid and extreme fluctuations of temperature. Keep cages strewn with clean, gritty sand, and when hens are mated provide cuttlefish regularly. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful per bird of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape and teazle. On the days when summer rape is given add also a little egg-food, or the egg bread, and well sprinkle it with a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame, and give two leaves of dandelion or a good sized spray of chickweed per bird every day. For one week give the rhubard and salt aperient advised to "Miss D'Alton" every second day, and in the next week give the gentian, etc., tonic mentioned in same reply. If not considerably improved in two or three weeks write again and report progress made. The handbook mentioned above will tell you all about testing eggs, etc.

SITS PUFFED UP (W. Long).—I see no reason why you should destroy birds without making an effort to relieve them of what may, after all, be some trivial ailment. Read reply to "M.U.M." and adopt the same treatment for your birds for a fortnight, but add to the egg-food given four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion each time. Also see that cold draughts and extreme fluctuations are avoided, as one or other of these causes may be responsible for the trouble, and you cannot expect to remove it until the causes are removed. Report progress at end of fortnight, and I will advise further if necessary.

LIMIT OF BREEDING AGE (New Beginner).—It it impossible to state any definite age at which a Canary ceases to breed. It depends solely upon the health, stamina and activity of the individual bird, and this again is intimately connected with the treatment it has been subjected to during life, and especially its recent life. But very few really healthy and well-kept cocks will have passed their period of usefulness at five years old. I have no doubt the bird you mention would breed successfully if you mated him with a hen in breeding condition and left them alone. When the hen really sets to work nesting he will not, I fancy, be found wanting, however much appearances may be against him when first mated. Try it.

HOW LONG (C.W.).—Again it is not possible to lay down any definite rule as to how long any pair of birds must be together before the eggs laid by the hen will be fertile. If both birds are in good breeding condition it is quite possible for any egg laid 30 hours after being put together to prove fertile. On the other hand it is not uncommon for a pair of birds apparently in the best of condition to be together several weeks and copulating frequently and yet not an egg prove fertile. The question of fertility holds mysteries yet to be fathomed.

WHEN TOO OLD (M. C.).—I cannot tell at what age a cock Canary necessarily ceases to he fertile. It is impossible to lay down any definite rule on the point. I have myself bred successfully with a cock at ten years old, and others I believe have gone one better than this. But all birds will not breed up to that age. It all depends upon the individual. So long as a cock is in good health, vigorous and active, and sings well, he may be mated quite confidently irrespective of age. See reply to another querist on this subject this week.

A LITTLE BETTER (League Member).—Thanks for report. Continue the same method of feeding advised in last reply for another month, after the end of the first fortnight give it a liberal allowance of green food in variety, and, if available, offer a mealworm daily. After the first fortnight give 20 drops of Chemical Food in the drinking water four times a week for a month. The opening and closing of the beak is due to excessive nervousness. You need to be very patient and gentle with this bird in order to gain its confidence. Avoid frightening it in any way if possible, or a catastrophe will probably occur. You might use finger drawers pushed in between the wires whilst giving such small quantities of food, or give all the food in the egg-drawer, to avoid putting hand in cage.

FOUR IN HAND (J. G. M.).—(1) Bathe foot well in very warm water—not too hot for comfortable endurance—in a saucerful of which you have mixed a teaspoonful of extract of Wych Hazel. After bathing for few minutes, gently prick the "ripe" part of swelling with a clean needle, carefully press out contents, then renew bathing for a few minutes. Dry gently, and anoint with Lanocylin. Repeat bathing and anointing daily for few days. Keep cage floor and perches as clean as possible. (2) Cannot dogmatise as to cause of this hen's death. Opinions after death, unless backed by a proper post-mortem examination, are of little value. I suspect it might have been due to constipation, which might have been easily remedied. You should have given details of your method of feeding. (3) It is the experience of many to have a full clutch of clear eggs in the first round from a pair of birds apparently in good health. It may be due to a great variety of causes, some of them quite unavoidable. There is no reason why the second clutch should not prove fertile. Feed the birds rather liberally, and give two leaves of dandelion daily prior to going to nest next time. (4) You must have been rather unfortunate in your dealings. Surely it is not difficult to get a good pair of Norwich if you are prepared to pay a reasonable price for them. It is rather late now to purchase stock birds, so I would advise you to wait until end of breeding season, and then ask some well-known breeder advertising in our columns to quote you price for a pair of young birds that will suit you, and have them on approval, depositing the price with our Editor as per rules of Deposit System.

EGGS NOT HATCHING (A Beginner).—You omit to say to what stage the embryos in the eggs had apparently developed. If they were fully developed, ready for hatching as it were, you might have assisted them by immersing the eggs in a cup of warm water once or twice on the 14th and 15th days. It sometimes happens that the embryos die at an early or even at any stage of development from congenital weakness, but in the early season it is much more likely to be the result of temporary chill caused by the hen staying off the nest too long at some time, or it may be caused by the hen bathing vigorously and returning to nest with saturated plumage. This latter occurrence is often very useful during hot weather later in the season, but at this season it is just as likely to prove fatal to the embryo chicks. Mate the birds again, remove cock as before, and do not return him until hen is ready to go to nest again. You will probably succeed better next time. "Canary Breeding for Beginners' would be of great help to you.

ILL AFTER LAYING (Griffo).—This hen is probably one of those over-prolific creatures which rarely reach a quite successful finish. In addition to the staple seed diet, give her a liberal daily supply of chickweed, young flower heads of groundsel, or watercress, but strictly avoid dandelion for this hen. Every third day give half-a-teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw, and on the following day a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet and teazle. Limit dietary to this solely. Keep cage strewn with clean, gritty sand, and provided with cuttlefish. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to drinking water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food every third day until she has gone to nest again. Mate her again, if still in good condition, when this reply appears.

SLOW STARTERS (Novice).—It is clear that both the cocks referred to are not in breeding condition, and should not have been mated with these hens, as they have only wasted the first or what should have been first, clutches of these hens. As the season is now in full swing, the cocks may freshen up at any time, and it may not be quite safe to separate them unless you had others in good condition to replace them. If you have no substitutes for them, you can only leave the birds together, and trust to luck for the future. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day add separately a small teaspoonful of summer rape for each pair, and also give a teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape and teazle, with just a sprinkling of linseed. Give a free supply of dandelion and chickweed daily. This should soon bring cocks into condition. When hen is going to nest again you must shut off the cock that destroyed the eggs. Do this each night when an egg is expected next morning, and return him to hen after you have removed the egg. On the third evening, when you will put hen to sit, remove him, and do not return him again until hen is ready to go to nest for another brood. The hen will hatch and bring up young better without him.

TROUBLE WITH EGG-BINDING (L. E. H.).—There must be some unusual influence at work to make your result so different this year from other seasons, if, as you say, your treatment is identical. Are the hens old or young, and have their winter quarters been free from damp? The latter has penetrated to quite unusual places in the late winter and early spring, and may have had some effect on your stock. See they are now kept under healthy conditions, and feed as advised to "Griffo," except that you should give a staple of plain canary seed, and give half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird separately every second day. Avoid giving dandelion to these hens. When you are expecting them to lay next time add 20 drops of gin and six of glycerine to the water every second day until eggs are laid. You would do well to provide yourself with CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, or go one better and treat yourself with "Our Canaries," which would help you in every difficulty.

NOT SINGING (Mrs. Cooper).—I am afraid I cannot tell you the cause of your Canary not singing, without more particulars about its circumstances and condition. Does it appear to be healthy and active, or wheeze, pant or lose feathers, and are you sure of its sex? Try the following for a month, and if not successful write again and give these particulars. Staple diet, a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Rest of dietary same as advised to "Griffo," except that you may also give dandelion, and add equal proportions of sesame and gold of pleasure to the maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece, for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

TWO SLOW ONES (John Holland).—Are you sure you have a true pair of birds, and not two hens? Does the cock sing? If not, catch the birds, blow up the feathers on the abdomen, and note shape of vent. If there is no marked difference between the two you probably have two hens. If you are satisfied one of the birds is a cock feed them as advised to "Novice" in this issue. See that they do not get cold draughts from the window, and keep cage strewn with clean, gritty sand. Also give dandelion as green food; it is common enough now almost everywhere.

A DOUBTFUL ONE (Lover of Song).—I am strongly inclined to think this bird is a hen, in which case nothing will increase its vocal powers, or make it sing. It might perhaps work itself up to a sort of twitter under excitement, but even this is not certain. Further, I should be inclined to doubt its age, as an 11 months old bird should not not have an overgrown beak which neither sugar nor cuttlefish will wear down. The beak is easily remedied. Nip off the overgrowth with a sharp pair of nail or embroidery scissors. You might also try the treatment advised to "Mrs. Cooper" for two or three weeks, and then write and say if it has produced any result.

IN BAD CONDITION (Doubtful, New Southgate).—Glad to hear the bird previously enquired about has improved so much. Give now a staple of plain canary seed, and add separately every third day a pinch of summer rape, next day ditto of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape and teazle, and the next day half a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and well sprinkled with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. Give a little chickweed, groundsel, or dandelion daily. Allow it to bathe now when it will, in fine weather. Continue to feed thus for another two or three weeks. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week. When recovered, the ordinary diet given in our handbooks, or the Nutshell booklet No. 5 will be most suitable. A little looseness, provided it is not excessive, is nothing to be anxious about. With regard to the other bird, I am inclined to think it is a hen. It should have been in full song now. To stop any undue looseness curtail the supply of green food, give a little extra rape, and a pinch of teazel and hemp. See that your hemp is sound and good.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A CAGE (A. B. C.).—Wash the cage very thoroughly with a hot, strong solution of some first-rate disinfectant (such as "Kerol," "Izal," or "Jeyes"), letting it soak well in. You can then leave it for a time, afterwards (as you suggest) enamelling it. I should think you might use the cage when wanted in the autumn with safety.

TWO HENS (J. O. R.).—Give the Canary hen a supply of broken-up old mortar, also crushed eggshells which have been dried in the oven, and cuttlefish—mix the three things and let her take her choice. She will lay in due course, unless there is something organically wrong, or she is an old, "worn-out" hen. The hen Greenfinch might nest this month (May). Let her have dandelion (seeding heads and young leaves), shepherd's purse, and chickweed—all easily obtainable—pretty freely, and with her seed mixture give daily a fair amount of white sunflower seed and a little hemp.

AS MEDICINE (Billie Bray).—The tinctures you mention are very good tonic medicines, and quite suited to the case of your Mule. They should help him to throw off the effects of the cold and "buck him up" generally. I think you might with advantage make his menu a trifle more generous as a regular thing.

"LOST ITS VOICE" (R. Cleverley).—You ask for a remedy for your Goldfinch, which "all of a sudden has lost its voice." But how am I possibly to tell why it has done so when you give me no information as to whether it is looking ill, has a cold, seems wrong in the bowels, is off its food—in fact, describe no symptoms, and do not mention its food. The loss of voice may be due to one of several things—the bird, for instance, may have ceased to sing because his "Little Mary" has suddenly commenced to trouble him, in which case it would be useless of me to prescribe a cough mixture. I feel sure you will see my hopeless position, and send along fuller details. In the meantime, you cannot do wrong by giving three or four doses of dandelion juice (taraxacum), obtained from a chemist. Get one ounce, and stir a teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily.

A PIPING BULLFINCH (Bullie).—The season for trained piping Bullfinches (that is, birds piping a tune, such as "Pretty Polly Perkins"; or even two tunes) is the autumn, when a number arrive from Germany. A good bird is always valuable, the price ranging from about three pounds up to "fancy figures," for what may be termed star artistes. It is quite likely that you could obtain a really good piper now; try an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. Hear it pipe, of course, before you pay your money.

TWO CREEPING THINGS (Ivetlaw).—I have had both ivy and Virginia creeper in several of my own outdoor aviaries, and have seen them in scores of aviaries belonging to other people, and I have never heard any complaint concerning their harmful nature, so I think you can safely use them.

A GREENFINCH'S EYESIGHT (W. H. C. B.).—I am afraid the case is hopeless, and that the Greenie is permanently blind in the left eye; but I do not think the right eye will be affected, or you would have noticed signs of it before this. Evidently the nerve is paralysed, or destroyed. It is a pity.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/8); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (1d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpall, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A MATTER OF POLICY (J. A. P.).—I think your best plan is to leave out the cock Linnet until the hen Canary is ready to get on with her second nest, i.e., has reared (as I hope she will) her first brood of Canaries. The introduction of a strange bird, such as a Linnet, to the hen while she is incubating might cause her to desert the eggs, or smash some of them in a moment of panic. Everything depends upon the hens, and one needs to know their dispositions; you can do to some what you dare not do to others. Further, the Linnet might give her trouble. On the whole, therefore, it is much better to keep the Linnet by himself until the hen wants her second clutch of eggs fertilising. Indeed, there is nothing to be gained by doing otherwise.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

BACK-YARD AVIARY (Quong Sing).—I do not keep queries by me, and I do not recollect the size of your aviary. Send me a postcard giving this, and I will reply. My reply really reads as if I had given you your choice between the two, and not the two kinds. Your aviary ought not to be less than eight to nine feet long to keep all three kinds together, and it should be four or more feet high. As regards the small parrots, I have sent you a sketch I think the Green Cardinal might go in with the rest. I have found all species of Cardinal (except perhaps the small yellow-beaked species) well able to look after themselves, even with Parrakeets.

FOREIGN WITH BRITISH (A.W.A.).—Put in pairs of the following: Zebra Finches, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Ruficauda Finches, Cape Canaries, Common Avadavats, Green Avadavats, Grey, St. Helena, Orange-cheek and Golden-breasted Waxbills, Bronze and Purple Manakins, Silverbills, Java Sparrows, Bengalese, Green Cardinals, Striated and Sharp-tailed Finches, Red-headed Finches, Grey and Green Singing Finches. The above would make a nice start and give a good variety of colour. As opportunity occurred you could add pairs of Indigo and Nonpareil Buntings, but I do not advise you to put in the Bramblings. I consider seed hoppers of some kind the better arrangement, throwing the leavings from these on the floor, when most of the seeds will be picked up.

AILING GREY PARROT. (A.C.).—Isolate this bird at once from the others, it is suffering from prostration, possibly infectious, following the voyage. Give it three drops of Dinneford's Magnesia, direct to the beak from a quill, repeat the dose in about five hours; afterwards give twice a week for a month. Give it chilled water, well coloured with chemical food, two or three times a day, but do not let it overdrink at first. I expect you are giving boiled maize, if so continue it, but lightly dust with flowers of sulphur before supplying to the bird. Also give a little sop daily—(I expect it is a young bird)—prepared as follows: Take a crust of stale household bread, sprinkle with sugar rather thickly, pour over it as much boiling water as bread will absorb, then soak into the bread half a teaspoonful of chemical food. Also supply seed mixture, ripe fruit, and nuts. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the seed. Keep the bird warm and out of draught, yet where it will get light and air. A light spraying with quassia solution, rubbing (dusting) in a little insect powder (for it is evidently troubled with parasites) will help matters—droppings should be removed from cage at once and buried. If the bird dies the cage must be thoroughly scalded out before being used for another bird.

LOVEBIRDS OR PARRAKEETS (H.J.E.).—I am sorry to have had to keep you waiting, but I have been out of town so frequently that I have found it quite impossible to get up to the museum to settle the question of species. You have had it under observation some little time now. Will you kindly send me at once which it most favours of the various foods you are supplying?

WHAT BIRDS (Foreigner).—Your birds are evidently Grey or Common Waxbills. They are not free breeders in an aviary, let alone a cage, but certainly I should give them a cocoa-nut shell (not a husk) nest. Put in a little moss and hay, and leave more about the cage, and it may come off. Supply canary, white millet, spray millet, greenfood, grit and water; keep them in a roomy cage, with twiggy branches for perches, and they should do well. Our Nutshell, "Waxbills," 2½d. post free from our manager, will help you.

AILING GREY PARROT (A. B.).—You do not give me any idea as to how you have been feeding the bird, but do not give any tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Seed mixture, ripe fruit, shelled nuts, green food, and an occasional piece of plain biscuit should be the staple dietary. If you have been giving boiled maize, continue to do so, but dust it with flowers of sulphur before giving it to the bird—it must be prepared fresh daily. If it will eat it, give a little of the sop as under—Crust of stale household bread, sprinkle with sugar, pour over it what boiling water it will absorb, then let about 20 drops of Byno-phosphates soak in, and when cool supply to the bird. For a month at least put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water, but you must not use a metal drinker. Once a week, in lieu of the phosphates put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water. Do not subject it to draughts or cold winds, but let it have all the light and air possible. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. You should get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager; it would help you.

BUDGERIGARS AND BRIT. AND FOR. FINCHES (H. C. C.).—Finch-like birds, whether British or Foreign species, are never permanently safe with Budgerigars or other Parrakeets, sooner or later the Finches get killed or maimed, though sometimes, for a couple of years even, nothing happens, and if you strictly limit the Budges to, say, a couple of pairs, nothing serious may happen. Among British Finches I have found the Chaffinch, Greenfinch and Bramhling very combative, and dangerous to the "smaller fry" even in a roomy aviary. With, say, Linnets, Redpolls, Siskins, Twites, Goldfinch and Bullfinch, you could keep, Zebra Finches, Cut-throats, Bronze Mannikins, Silverbills, Green Singing Finches, Avadavats (Common and Green), Grey, Orange-cheeked and Golden-breasted Waxbills—you ought not have, however, more than a score in your small aviary—all the foreign species named vary in price from 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per pair.

WHAT IS IT? (A Reader).—It is the common Blue Tit. Supply it with hemp and sunflower seeds, shelled nuts, live insects of all sorts (from a beetle to a maggot), bits of suet and soft food. They are very active little birds and need a roomy cage with twiggy branches for perches. It should soon become tame enough to fly round the room (windows and doors closed, of course), and it would capture many flies, and possibly spiders also, from out-of-the-way corners, while enjoying a little liberty.

BUDGERIGARS IN OUT-DOOR CAGE, ETC. (Amadis).—The odd cock is causing the mischief, I expect. Either procure him a mate, or sell him, the latter preferably, as three adult pairs are sufficient, especially when they rear broods, for your cage. The bird house would comfortably accommodate about thirty birds, but for breeding purposes, say, seven pairs at most. To your present stock add pairs of Bronze Mannikins, Silverbills and Bib Finches. They will all thrive on the same diet as you are giving to the birds you possess—suspended from the roof and hung round the sides of the house, say, a dozen and half nest receptacles, such as husks, travelling cages, and various small boxes. Supply hay, grass and moss as building material, and you should successfully breed some of them at any rate.

ARE THEY NUNS? (Log Chip, G.C.).—Yes, they are Black-headed Nuns (Mannikins). Fully adult cocks have a patch of black down the middle of the abdomen, which the female does not possess, otherwise they are similar in plumage. Mannikins are not free breeders, but give them a nest-box, say, 6in. square, covered in all round, except the top third of the front. Diet: A mixture of canary and white millet in equal parts; a spray of millet, to be renewed when picked clean of seed; greenfood, grit and water for drinking and bathing will about supply their simple needs. If they go to nest and hatch out any young then supply a little soft food, but they will rear their young largely on seed and greenfood.

INCUBATION PERIOD (New Year).—Thirteen days usually, but I have had young Zebra Fiuches hatched out in twelve days. Supply a little soft food as soon as you see this reply, and scatter a few ants' "eggs" about for them to pick up; also supply spray millet and greenfood liberally, and the young should be successfully reared.

JAVA SPARROWS (M.U.M.)—No, it will do no good to let the hen take turn about with the respective cocks. Undoubtedly the white hen died egg-bound. Get another hen, either grey or white, for the odd cock. If he is with other birds cage him separately; put a little Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water twice a week till he brightens up, and on other days half a teaspoonful of hyno-phosphates. Give it a millet spray, it will help to keep him occupied picking out the seed. Flowering (seeding) grass, groundsel and chickweed should also be given now freely; even if he does not eat much, the little he takes in picking it over will be good food for him. I should also give him a few crushed oats and a little paddy rice.

AFRICAN PARROT (F. J. H.).—Give this bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the ordinary supply of drinking water every fourth day (give four doses), and on the intermediate days put half a teaspoonful of hynophosphates in the drinking water. Let the supply of greenfood and fruit (apples or banana) be liberal; as much as it will eat. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed. Give the bird as much fresh air as possible; it can go out of doors a little, but not in a cold wind or exposed position, and the sun must not be allowed to shine directly on to the cage at any time. When out of doors, keep a piece of white cardboard, a little larger than the top of cage, with a slot in the centre, to pass over the cage ring; it will be out of reach of the bird, and while giving all the shelter necessary, will yet let the bird get the full benefit of the sun. I am of opinion that the indisposition will be but temporary.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (C. H.).—The crushed oats only intended to be given in small quantity. Keep the birds apart a little longer, and continue the treatment already advised; when this indisposition has passed, keep them in separate cages, but the cages placed side by side before putting them together again. Continue the treatment already advised till the cock is quite fit again. Seeding grass is quite plentiful now, and gathered about noon is quite safe to supply to the bird; let it have as much as it will eat. So long as they are kept out of draught Budgerigars do not require heat; they are better in the room with you, but keep them in a cool part of it where they will get plenty of light and air. Bringing birds from cool into warmer quarters will often throw them into moult, when the change is at all pronounced, but the shedding of the plumage will pass in due course; the bird should soon be fit again.

DEAD PARROT (A. C.).—I am sorry reply arrived too late to be of service; but the case was really hopeless when you applied. Ordinary diarrhœa is usually due to indigestible food in the bowels, which must be cleared away by doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (to be followed by hyno-phosphates to tone the bird up, both to be given in the drinking water; but very often diarrhœa is merely a symptom of some really malignant trouble, septic fever, etc., and cannot be prescribed for in a general way; but each individual case must be dealt with. In all cases the bird should be kept warm, and should be given a few drops (five) of aromatic sulphuric acid in the drinking water. Also dilute three drops of tincture of opium with one tablespoonful of water and offer this for the morning drink, and again during the afternoon. Re the swelling, I can only say foment with hot water and paint with neat whiskey, also rub with embrocation if the swelling is hard, but if the swelling contains pus, then foment as above, and as soon as the swelling is ripe it must be carefully lanced and the pus exuded, then the place must be well cleansed and anointed with some antiseptic ointment. Drugs must not be given in metal drinkers.

PLANTS IN AVIARY (Retlaw).—Neither Virginian Creeper nor Ivy will harm the bird, but I expect the Parrakeets will make short work of them. The only way to keep anything green in a Parrakeet aviary is to sow the ground periodically with cereals and grasses, and if these are soon eaten, well, you are giving the birds wholesome greenfood and exercise.

AILING GREY PARROT (M. Dooley).—It is mainly a matter of diet that will put this bird right. Confine the diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, greenfood, nuts and plain biscuit. Give the following seed mixture: One quart each Canary seed and oats; one pint each white millet and hemp, half a pint each grit (not sand), paddy rice, maize, dari and sunflower seeds—the whole to be thoroughly mixed. Also keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the supply of drinking water; if the bowels become too loose only give once a week, but continue it for a month or longer. On the days you are not giving the laxative put the same quantity of hyno-phosphates into the drinking water. If the bird does not bathe, spray it with a "mist" sprayer twice weekly, choosing genial days and keeping it out of draught. Supply wood in some form for it to cut up and play with.

KEEPING A SUNBIRD (Para).—Yes, the cage will answer well enough so long as you do not stand it in a draught, and at this season the temperature of the ordinary living room will be sufficient, but in the winter it should be kept where the night temperature does not fall below 50 deg. For diet: Sop, ripe fruit (mainly grapes, supplemented with Tangarine orange), and small flies, spiders, etc. Prepare the sop as under: one teaspoonful each of honey, condensed milk, and as much Mellin's Food as will lie on a shilling, mix with a little boiling water, and add a few fine crumbs of sponge cake, stir the whole well together; only a little is taken, grapes being the mainstay. A Sugarbird is not so fragile, requires the same dict, but these are very fond of banana, and more sponge cake in the sop, and after they are acclimatised a night temperature of 45 deg. or less will not harm them (if in no draught). My bird's water was often frozen when I went to attend to it in the morning, but it appeared none the worse for it, and is now in lovely feather. A pair have been out of doors in my aviary for nearly a fortnight, and are looking grand.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (Ada Barrow).—You must continue the treatment. With the genial summer weather near it will soon tone up. Give it greenfood daily; seeding (flowering) grass is plentiful now, and is quite safe to supply if gathered about noon. Keep a millet spray in the cage, and replace it when all the seeds are picked out. Its vivacity will return as the indisposition passes; the symptoms you gave are not those of old age; with the latter there is a more gradual decline followed by a total collapse. Let it have all the light and air you can, with entire freedom from draught.

DAMAGED BEAK (J. R. F.).—I do not think you can do anything for the bird's beak; if it has broken it you must leave it for Nature to right itself—you can do nothing even if it is scaling. I have Parrots whose beaks scaled periodically (not annually), and never had a serious case, or where it incommoded the birds to any serious extent; of course, if there is any sign of a sore or bleeding, the Friar's Balsam is about the best applicatiou. The running nostrils are a different matter. Bathe or spray with a dilute solution of glyco-thymoline once or twice daily. Give every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water, and on other days put half a teaspoonful of hyno-phosphates in the water. Continue this treatment for a month and then report progress. Keep a tin of dry seed mixture—canary, oats, hemp and sunflower seeds—in its cage, also a piece of ripe cuttlebone, and supply fruit daily, nuts fairly often (shelled while the beak is tender), and a little of any kind of green-food it will take.

TO GO WITH BUDGERIGARS (F. J. Gardner).—Blue-wing and Madagascar Lovebirds and Cockatiels all usually agree with Budgerigars, and thrive on the same treatment, but the two former line their nests with leaves, bark, etc., or even the exhausted millet sprays. When they show signs of going to nest supply a live branch, and leave the birds to take what they want therefrom, and keep this up till you see they are no longer carrying material into the nesting receptacle. All Parrakeets' nesting receptacles should have concave bottoms, but for Blue-wings and Madagascars this is not necessary. It will be wise not to put or keep Finch-like birds in this aviary.

Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Week-end contest, held 28th, Prince Albert Inn, when 20 birds sang. Quality singing only. Judges, Messrs. A. Lorriman and A. Turner. 1st, Madden; 2nd, J. Chippendale; 3rd, Playforth.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality, held old bird house, King's Head, Shannon St., Ap. 27, when 24 birds sang, and some very good singing was heard. 1st, Wigfield; 2nd, Stead; 3rd, Butler. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor; also on 28th, when 30 birds faced the judges: 1st, Chadwick; 2nd, Stead; 3rd and 4th, shared H. Wigfield and Butler. Judges, Hardcastle, Naylor, and Sissons.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

BOLDON COLLIERY.

Contest held April 27th in the Workmen's Club to members only. The club officials gave a £1 prize. There was some extra good singing. Result: 1st, 2nd, 3rd, F. Furlong.—F. Urwin.

BLACKBURN LARK F.A.

Third contest of season at Forrest's Arms, Garden-street, when 11 birds contested for three prizes. Some excellent singing. The following were the successful competitors, and their respective times (10 mins. hanging): R. Airey, 9.53; F. Lea, 9.1; J. Heys, 8.14. Mr. Airey's bird was again in good form, and has now won all the three contests and also a Burnley fancier's sing three weeks ago.—Fred. Lea, Sec.

TYLDESLEY LINNET CLUB.

Open contest May 4th, when the following clubs will be represented: Tyldesley, Salford, Blackburn, Leigh, Athertou. I hope some of the new schemes will be adopted for quality, if possible, at this contest.—J. Harrison, Sec.

BUSLINGTHORPE.

Quality singing contest for Linnets held Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe, April 27th. 1st, Sellars; 2nd, T. Chippindale; 3rd, Sellars. Also April 28th. 1st, Green; 2nd, Ward; 3rd, Sellars. Judges, C. Clayton and Biss. Our host, Mr. Fishwick, is giving away the running-up medals May 5th. 1st, Ward; 2nd, Sellars; 3rd, J. Chippindale.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

First members' sing April 27th, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, when 21 birds entered for five copper kettles. 1st, J. Bromilow; 2nd, C. Dobson; 3rd, J. Statham; 4th, H. Brown; 5th, D. Bentley. Timekeeper, T. Hayhurst; birdman, C. Dobson; judges, Jones, Dobson, Topping.—Rd. Hayhurst, Sec.

DURHAM.

A Linnet singing contest will be held at Mr. Geo. Atkinson's, Thinford Inn, near Ferryhill, on May 11th. 1st, cup value £2 2s.; 2nd, copper kettle; 3rd, set carvers; 4th, clock; entrance, 1/-; 3d. back. First birds up at 2 p.m. Judge to be chosen by competitors on the day of contest.—Wm. Fairless, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

Linnet contest at Woodman Inn; 17 birds faced each other, and some grand singing was gone through. 1st and 3rd, Piper; 2nd, Nelson. Also April 28th, open contest, when we had a very good afternoon's singing. 1st and 2nd, Piper; 3rd, Wilson. We heartily invite old and new members to rally around us.—Wm. Beard, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest held George and Dragon, Bridge-street, before a good company of fanciers and friends: 41 birds entered for three good prizes, four minutes' sing. 1st, W. Nelson, 99; 2nd, W. Ratcliffe, 57; 3, S. Morley, 54. Also April 28; 29 birds entered for three prizes, three minutes' sing, and Mr. W. Nelson again carried off 1st and 3rd, making the total of 20 firsts this year. 1st, W. Nelson, 83; 2nd, J. Kirk, 57; W. Nelson, 53. Open sing May 4th, when we hope to see some good time singers from other clubs; three and four good prizes to sing for. Sunday singing always open.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

KIPPAX.

A members' sing held April 27th at Commercial Hotel, when 13 birds competed. Result: 1st, J. Liversedge, jun.; 2nd and 3rd, O. Pollen; timekeepers, J. Wallace and R. Plows. An open-to-all-Yorkshire time sing on White Saturday, birds to sing 5 seconds, each break to count. Three good prizes: Copper kettle, pair carvers, and alarm clock. We hope to see fanciers from other clubs, and we give all a hearty invitation to bring their birds and help us to make it a success. Entrance, 6d. per bird, first birds up at 3 p.m.; four minutes' sing. Timekeepers for open sing, R. Plows and O. Potters.—R. Plows, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

Open contest for time and quality held Boat House Hotel, April 27th; 33 birds entered from Lancashire and Yorkshire districts; four prizes in each class. Some very good singing was done. Winner for quality: 1st, C. Ward; 2nd and 3rd divided, J. Green and R. Howcroft; 4th, W. Cain. Time: 1st, R. Statham, 151; 2nd, J. McAllister, 113; 3rd, J. Poole, 77; 4th, Poole, 72. Judges, Messrs. Lunn (Leeds), R. Howcroft, J. McAllister (Leigh). Timekeepers, Kennedy, Disley, Cootes. Tappers, Messrs. Cain and Poole. Birdkeeper, J. Green. Mr. Ward's bird did some splendid work for quality, and R. Statham's for time made remarkable breaks of 54—30—30, which has never before been heard at these headquarters. Our club desires me to thank Messrs. Ward, Lunn, and Binns for their patronage, which we shall return with a visit to Leeds Club. Affiliation contest May 4th. Members are requested to attend with the five birds (compulsory). Meeting at headquarters May 5th, 7.30. Subscriptions now due; if unable to attend, kindly forward by post.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AFFILIATION OF LINNET CLUBS.

Linnet contest at the Union Arms, Castle Street, Tyldesley, on May 4th, open to all England, for quality and time. First pair of birds up at 2. All affiliated clubs will be compelled to enter 5 birds each. Any further information may be received from J. Harrison, 1, Lime Street, Tyldesley, or J. McAlister, 1, Brunswick Street, Leigh.

ARDWICK AND MANCHESTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A general meeting held April 22rd at Onward Hall, Mr. W. Robinson presiding. A good muster assembled to hear a lecture on birdy problems by Mr. W. Downing. Mr. Downing opened with a little humorous reference to Noah, who, he said, was one of the first bird fanciers. It was interesting but rather unprofitable, to speculate upon how Noah got his green food, and how he dealt with the perennial problem of the red mite. One of the problems the old-time bird fancier had to meet consisted of the crude pictures of birds one met with, and he sometimes had to guess what possible variety they could represent. Mr. Downing related his experience of wild birds, and dwelt on the pleasure to be derived from long walks through the fields, listening to the melody of the many birds to be met with. Dealing with the general management of British birds, Mr. Downing stated that he had often come across people who fed their birds upon potatoes and scraps left from the table. The modern fancier was much more humane and better educated, and understood the requirements of his pets, and always endeavoured to keep them in good health. Nothing was better than the opportunity for discussion presented at fanciers' meetings. Novices could gain knowledge and become proficient in bird-keeping by association with older fanciers. With regard to the feeding of Canaries, it was usual to make canary seed the staple diet and vary the other seeds according to the variety kept. On the question of breeding, of course birds could be bred in aviaries as well as in cages, and he had tried both methods. In Canary breeding he mated up the Canaries in the usual manner in one room, and as the nests were built he carried them into another room and hung them up letting the birds loose. It was not surprising that the results were not as successful as he anticipated. In the first round he had 22 young ones. The next round was much worse, and he only secured in Mule breeding one doubtful Greenie-Canary. This finished aviary breeding for him. The greatest drawback in aviary breeding, to his mind, was the difficulty of having several hens feeding the young at the same time. The necessary egg food, hemp seed and green food had to be supplied, and the sitting hens had access to all this good food, with the result that they got fat and lazy and would not rear the young. He was of the opinion that cage-breeding could not be improved upon. His method was to give yolk of egg for the first three days, and afterwards equal quantities of it and cod liver oil food. In mixing this he took a quantity of cod liver oil food, moistened it, added a little sugar and a pinch of salt, then added the egg food and mixed it all up together. For green food he used dandelion at first, and afterwards lettuce, commencing as soon as the young were hatched. He had gone on to watercress, but lost young wholesale through it. Some people thought there was a disadvantage in using dandelion on account of its readiness to go soft, but this could be prevented by putting the end of the root into a drinker, the leaves projecting through the bars of the cage; this kept it fresh until it was used up. He had not had a bad feeder for three years, for he fed all his birds from the inside of the cage, and through the constant putting of his hand in the cage got the birds so accustomed to it that they were not in the least nervous. It was a great advantage to grow one's own dandelion and to have a constant supply of young tender leaves. When the speaker first commenced to grow his own he gathered roots from many places and transplanted them in his garden. When he came to gather some he found, to his surprise, that the Sparrows had taken it all. He now grew it under glass in frames. Reverting to the subject of breeding, he had bred from double yellow and double buff, and the progeny of this mating were before them that evening. Their quality seemed quite satisfactory. He had tried in-breeding, and had good results from it; his advice to the novice was not to in-breed for the sake of in-breeding. It would be well if this had some special object in view: to fix good points and breed bad ones out, and for this purpose birds required matching as well as mating. The lecturer was kept busy answering questions until the meeting closed at 10. The president, Dr. Twigge, then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Downing, which was seconded by Mr. Buckley and carried unanimously.—J. Spencer, Sec.

Some Hints on the Keeping of Canaries.

Sir,—I am writing these few hints on the keeping and breeding of that beautiful bird, the Canary, in the hope that it will help novices and those who are thinkiug of going in for this delightful hobby. I started keeping Canaries four years ago, although I kept Linnets, Larks, etc., long before that. A friend gave me a copy of Cage Birds, and that gave me a craze for Canaries. Now, the first thing to be considered is where shall we keep them? Perhaps you have a spare room; if you have, so much the better; if not, the kitchen must do. Well, we will have to buy some cages. Have these all the same pattern, as they look far better than four or five different patterns. We shall want some box cages, and, of course, breeding cages. Look up Cage Birds, and you will find pleuty of advertisers who make them. Have single breeding cages, as they are far better than the double—that is, to my way of thinking. I have loose fronts to my cages, and only one door, as doors in the sides are too convenient a place for our greatest bird pest, the red mite, to breed in. I prefer the cages to be enamelled inside and varnished outside, as you can clean them with much more ease than when they are distempered. The next thing, if we have got room for it, is a flight cage—one about three feet long, eighteen inches wide, and two feet deep, as this is a good thing for keeping your birds in proper health and feather. Now we have got all the cages, we must have the birds. Perhaps you will know of a dealer or a private fancier living in your town; if not, look up Cage Birds for the well-known breeders. When I say "breeders," I mean those who really breed their own birds, because there are some who wait till they get an order, then they have to run all over the place to get you the birds. I advise you to send your money to the Editor of Cage Birds and have the birds on approval; thus you will safeguard yourself against fraud. Now that we have the number of birds we want we are eager to make a start. But don't be in a hurry. Think of the cold evenings we have in March. I think that April is the best time for the novice; we have then a much better chance of enjoying good luck. We must feed the hens up. I find that a little mixed seed given three times a week, egg food about twice a week, and a little maw seed will be a grand thing for the hens; and if you can get a little dandelion (the young leaves) it will greatly help. Always see that your birds are in grand form before mating them. If your hens are fit, they will be flapping their wings and calling to the cock bird, while he in his turn will be singing madly. We will suppose that the birds are all ready for pairing. Put the cock in with the hen. If they fight—well, it won't hurt them; it is their way of settling matters, and after a bit you will see them feeding each other. Now put a little dried hay or grass into the cage, and if you see her taking it to the nest pan, supply her with a nest bag. Sometimes the eggs are laid about a fortnight after, sometimes a month after; but never mind, don't meddle with them; if you do, good-bye to your success. When the hen lays her first egg, take it away and put a dummy one in its place. On the night when the third egg is laid take the dummies out and put her own eggs back again. On the evening of the thirteenth day give her a little egg food, but don't disturb her; you are sure to hear the little ones if you have had luck. When they are about four days old, start feeding them on green food, chickweed, lettuce, of dandelion. When the young are twelve days old the nest pan will be found to be getting rather dirty. Change it for a clean one, because that is the first place in which you will find red mite. When the young leave the nest, keep the bottom of the cage nice and clean, because if the young pick up any stale food it will be sure to upset their bowels, and death will follow very quickly. When your birds start feeding on hard seed, give canary seed only, a little mixed seed once a week; but still give them a little egg food four times a week. Now we have got the young on to hard seed we can start a second round; but don't have any more than three nests from one pair of birds; two would be better. I will close with a few "Don'ts." Don't forget to buy the best birds, if your pocket will allow; don't have small cages or dirty ones; don't start pairing up too early! don't worry your birds, or disappointment will follow; don't buy cheap foods—the best is cheapest in the end; don't forget to buy Cage Birds; and, lastly, don't forget to join Cage Birds League.

Coco-nut Fibre for Toucans' Cages.

Sir,—I have a Toucan which I have kept in a cage 4ft. long, 2ft. wide, and 2ft. high. I had the same trouble as you mention in your article of last week in keeping it clean. Now I use cokernut fibre. I clean it out once a week and just rake it over every day, and it is always sweet and sightly. I find it a great boon for my softbills.

Phosto for Cage Birds.

Sir,—I should like to say a few words on the merit of "Phosto" for cage birds, and I wish it to be understood that I have not one penny interest in the "Phosto" business. Some might say: "Oh, yes, it is manufactured at Emsworth, and Silk is interested in the affair," but I wish to say I am not in any way. Mr. Hartley, of this town, is the manufacturer, and, of course, you know it was such a success with poultry. He was talking to me one day last year about the success it was with chickens. I asked him whether he thought it would hurt Canaries, and did he think they would thrive on it the same as chickens? He at once said: "Yes, I am sure they would." Then I can tell you, Mr. Editor, I was a bit shy in starting, but I thought I would give it a trial, and I did on hens feeding their young, and, believe me, I never saw hens feed so well before in all my life, and you know I am not a chicken at the job. To tell you the truth, the young didn't know how to die. All the hens went off the scratch feeding grand. I bred more young last year than I have ever done before, and not a weakly bird amongst them. I continued the "Phosto" right through the moult with the colour feed, and I can assure you I have never had them moult better. They seem to shake their plumage off much quicker, and then the colour comes so much better for it. I do not know whether Mr. Hartley intends advertising it for Canaries. All I can say is he ought to, as it is a jolly good food for Canaries, and reared the strongest and best youngsters I have ever seen. I used it in a powder form, and gave half-teaspoonful to one egg, with the usual bread crumbs.

To Cut Glass Without Trouble

Sir,—This is an exceedingly easy method of cutting glass, and can be put into practice by anyone. Take a pair of scissors—they need not be very sharp—and the piece of glass you wish to cut, and put both below the surface of some ordinary cold water you have standing ready for the purpose. Cut through the glass as you would cloth. Readers will find the idea is worth knowing.

Robin Building in an Occupied Room.

Sir,—A Robin has built a nest in my house on an ordinary chest of drawers in a bedroom in which two maids regularly sleep. The only concealment for the nest is a photograph in a frame leaning against the wall. Four eggs were laid, and two little birds have been hatched out. The room is used frequently by the maids who sleep there, and is lighted by electric light. Perhaps this may interest some of your readers.

How Linnet Contests are Conducted.

Sir,—I see in Cage Birds of this week that "T. M." is asking how Linnet singing contests are conducted. The following is the Durham method of conducting time-singing contests:—Firstly, the contestants are drawn in pairs, the names being put into a hat, the first and second out sing together, and so on, if there is an odd bird, the last out gets a bye. After the draw the birds are hung in a window in pairs, according to the draw, the cages facing each other for five minutes; the bird that sings the longest and best of each pair earning the right to sing in the second round. Should the second round contain an odd number of birds, the bye should be first drawn for, the winner, if any, of the first bye not being in this draw. If any competing owner has more than one bird, steps must be taken to prevent these being drawn together in the first round. Each competitor may put up his own bird, the choice of sides in the window being settled by the spin of a coin or some other agreed method. Should neither of the birds sing within the limit of time, they are both out of the competition. No talking is permitted in the contest room, any offenders being sent out of the room, and if either of the owners interfere with the proceedings his bird or birds are put out of the contest altogether. The start of the contest is generally arranged so that the whole business can be got through in daylight.

The First Swallows.

Sir,—In reference to a question raised by a correspondent elsewhere as to the late arrival of the Swallows "foreboding a severe spell of wintry weather in the near future," I should like to remark that I cannot see how the early or late arrival of these visitors to our shores can in any way be regarded as a forecast of our weather. Have we not known their early arrival followed by weeks of cold, severe weather? And when we have had a prolonged summer they have remained with us weeks later than they otherwise would. The only meteorological surmise that I think can be arrived at from their late arrival in England is that the weather in the countries where they have been "wintering" is such as does not compel them to seek more congenial quarters.

A Mixed Family.

Sir,—With real surprise and much pleasure I noticed my article on mule breeding in the special number of your valuable paper this morning. I am pleased to inform you that I have a very nice Siskin and Canary Mule on the perch nearly four weeks old. It was hatched in a nest with two Canaries. When the hen had laid her first egg paired to cock Canary I introduced the Siskin, with the result:—Three eggs, two young Canaries, and one Siskin Mule. The same Siskin has paired with three other hens, now sitting on fertile eggs. The Siskin was purchased from a Beccles fancier on Jan. 30. In connection with my own profession, I find a knowledge of birds very useful, and in the homes of the working class I do all I can to encourage the hobby. If the husband loves birds, and is encouraged to do so by his better half, then it helps to keep him at home, and is a prevention against his spending time and money in undesirable places. When I enter a home for the first time, and find a bird in the house, it always helps to break the ice, and has enabled me on many occasions to find at once a topic of conversation. Some of my Sunday School teachers are ardent fanciers, and I shall always do my little best to help the progress of one of the most interesting hobbies possible for men to indulge in. The man who loves birds and animals is thereby calculated to make a kinder father and better husband. Thanking you most sincerely for what I consider a very real honour.

Hybrids with Alien Parentage.

Sir,—I read with great interest the splendid article on hybrid breeding by E. A. Morris in your last issue, and sincerely endorse his remarks concerning exhibiting hybrids bred between two British birds. How often we read in reports of shows, "second, good Goldie-Bullie, splendid specimen, not the size of winner." I am afraid that too much consideration is paid to size at the present time, in preference to colour and markings. In my opinion this is most unjust to the fancier who exhibits a genuine British hybrid, although I am quite willing to admit you get some hybrids bred from Britishers larger than others, but that is not the point of the argument. Why should there not be separate classes at our shows provided for hybrids bred between British and Continental specimens? Surely a true fancier would enter his bird in its right class. If he entered the parents of a bird bred between Siberians in the British classes, we all know what he would get. Hoping to hear further opinions on this matter.

How May a Brass Cage be Brightened?

Sir,—Will some reader kindly tell me how I can make a large flight brass cage which has become corroded and dirty, fit for Canaries to live in? I find scrubbing, etc., does not clean it sufficiently.

Amateur.

Crows or Rooks?

Sir,—Would you or any of your readers enlighten me about the habit of Crows, through the correspondence column of your valuable paper (of which I am an interested reader)? Which sex is most plentiful—male or female? A pair of Crows began some time ago to build in a high tree not far from my residence, but to my surprise they had not gone far into building when they ceased. I would consider it a favour if you could enlighten me. I may say I am much interested in your "Wild Bird Life" column. Wishing your paper every success.

Nonnester.

[If our correspondent really means Crows, and not Rooks, he will be referring to the Carrion Crow, which is an entirely black bird, and not the Hooded Crow. Carrion Crows are said to pair for life, and we have never heard that there is any preponderance in numbers of one sex over the other. The Carrion Crow is not at all a common bird, it being generally shot on sight, for, although it will eat practically anything it is especially fond of eggs and young birds as a diet, and it is universally detested as a rapacious nuisance. In the district (Kilbirnie) from which our correspondent writes, the Carrion Crow as a nesting bird would be even more than ordinarily rare, for a diagonal from the Clyde to the Dee roughly marks the northern limit of its nesting places. North of this, its place is taken by the Hooded Crow, a bird which has a considerable amount of grey in its plumage, and is not likely to be confounded with the Rook. Rooks are not so clumsy in general appearance as Crows. They keep strictly to trees for nesting, while the Crows often build on cliff sides. Rooks, also, are more gregarious than Crows, and are seldom seen in solitary pairs. After the second moult the bare patch on the front of the head infallibly distinguishes these birds from Carrion Crows.—Ed.]

The Meaning of "Noggin."

Sir,—You are quite right in answering "Perplexed." Four noggins make one pint.

A Few General Remarks on Bird-keeping.

Sir,—It may be of some assistance to other naturalists if I give some of my experiences, chiefly regarding the advisability of keeping foreigners and the migratory species of English softbills indoors during the winter. From what I have observed, I feel sure that all birds prefer to be kept warm in such a variable climate as ours. I do not say they will not live and survive the changes of climate in many places, but on a cold, damp soil I find they invariably die of pneumonia. Last winter I kept Green Mexican Jays, Hangnests, and Sihias in a heated aviary with large outdoor flights. The windows were opened all day, but rarely did they avail themselves of the opportunity of going out. During the wet summer of 1910 there was no heat inside, and only on very sunny days did I see them outside. They preferred to stay indoors. It is a very light aviary inside, having vines, etc., growing, but in the flight were trees and many shrubs; and it was well sheltered from north and east winds, facing south and west. The small African Finches, of which I have a large collection, most certainly do best with me in large flight cages. I have tried them for many years both outside and indoors. While they were outside I continually lost the hens, principally from egg binding. If this occurs while they are in a cage and easily get-at-able, you can at once aid the little sufferer. If outside, they are in a large aviary, and it is impossible to catch the birds without frightening them; in many cases, too, the trouble is not discovered until it is too late to do anything with. They also love the warmth. Many I have kept alive indoors for three years or more, but never have I succeeded out of doors in the winter, even when part of the aviary was heated. They will breed in the cold season, and then the hens succumb from egg binding or pneumonia. I take all my softbills and foreigners in at the beginning of September. As a rule, though, if the nights are warm, I am guided by the weather. But in no case is it later than the end of that month. The only birds left out are the Bullfinches and the common and hardy kinds of British birds. I have one very large cage 6ft. by 4ft., with a part match-board roof. In it I keep the softbills, as they have been together all the summer outside, and they agree very well. They comprise Wheatears, Pipits, Stonechats, Buntings, Blue Tits, Blue-throated Warblers, and Siskins. This cage stands in the greenhouse, where all my pet birds live in winter and in separate cages. The various prize-winning birds I have had are those that have only been out of doors from May to September. Directly their moult is over I bring them in. Everyone knows that the sun and air assist the birds' moult and bring their bright colours out. A few words regarding the African Waxbill. Considering how cheaply these charming little birds can be bought, I wonder they are not more generally kept. When they are first obtained keep them separate from other birds, in a large airy cage in lots of sun. Give a big flat bath and put in it enough Condy's fluid to colour it. This will help them if they have contracted any disease on their journey from Africa. If you live in the country a nest of ants will delight them, and their funny ways with the ants are most entertaining. Red, white, and spray millet also canary mixed, chickweed grass in seed, and lettuce; they will eat all the foregoing with avidity. If grass seed is not available, give them the sweepings (sifted) of a hay loft; they will find therein many small seeds which they will relish. Cordon Bleus, Nonpareils, Bengalese, and Avadavats will eat mealworms. All change of food is of value. Give them plenty of fresh air. Mine stand in a large sunny window, which is wide open all day. At night a light covering is thrown over the top of the cage. These tiny birds are very intelligent, and know your voice very soon, calling to you when you enter the room. Some of the Avadavats sing sweet little songs, and I really consider them some of the prettiest and most amusing of birds. Draughts will kill these birds sooner than anything, so do not put them between a window and a door and forget to shut the latter, or your pets will soon die. Give plenty of fine gravel and some cuttle fish grated, also a sprinkling of maw seed now and then. At times a little soft food is liked. I will conclude with the hope that these stray notes may be of interest and use to my fellow-fanciers.

Ought Closed Rings to be Abolished?

Sir,—Being an old reader of "C.B.," and seeing the correspondence this last few weeks on the closed ring, and many of our fancier friends hitting it so hard, I would like to give my experience on ringing young Canaries. Now, everyone that breeds many young birds, and those of good stock, for exhibiting purposes, you must keep a record how they are bred; if not, we would be very soon mixed up. And now, "Old Fancier," A. Potter, and others that have given their views, know there is nothing better than ringing to refer to your birds as how bred. I myself have used them many years, and I am a working man and a collier, and find no difficulty in ringing, and as for birds carrying their young from the nest, I have never seen or heard anything like it before, and I smile at "A Looker-on" on his remark in this week's "C.B." Anyway, I think that the closed ring is the best thing that ever came before the Canary Fancy. I state my reason, having been in the pigeon fancy, and it's a game not worth a candle if you do not use the R.P. or H.P. rings. Now, take for instance, if "C.B." was to get a closed ring made specially for them, say, marked "C.B.," then number of ring, and year, sell them, and offer prizes for best birds rung with "C.B." rings at shows, don't you think it would go? I have a copy of "Homing Pigeon" in front of me at present, and look what they offer in prizes at races for birds rung H.P.:—One race from Birmingham, £160 in prize money. That's on Saturday, Aug. 17, and £300 from Bournemouth on Sept. 7, and if your birds are rung with Birmingham ring, entrance free On Saturday, Aug. 17, a race from Huddersfield, £150 in prize money; Bournemouth, young bird race, on Aug. 31, £555 in prize money; and Bournemouth open race, £300 in prize money, and birds wearing H.P. National rings entrance free; and to every club purchasing twenty-five 1s. rings will be given a handsome cruet or set of carvers; with thirty-five rings, a guinea silver cup; and with every order of forty-five rings a massive H.P. National silver shield, and one bird can win £855 for 1s. ring. Prize money guaranteed, and paid promptly. Now, don't fanciers think that the Canary fanciers are as strong and such sportsmen as the pigeon fanciers? I do, as I have had a share of sport, but I prefer the Canary Fancy, and the closed ring for Canaries is bound to take on. Anyway, I am going for it, and it is a safeguard for the novice, and I say it is simple enough to ring a young bird; but, of course, you must not pull the leg sideways, as that does the harm. So I will close now. Hoping I have not taken too much of your valuable space, as it is my first letter, and hoping fanciers will think it over and answer it in a sporting manner, as if I can answer any question I will do so, as I don't like to stand in my own light.

Disappointments of a Would-be Parrot Keeper.

Sir,—I should be glad if you would again allow me a space in your columns—this time not on behalf of my chief hobby, the Canary, but on what I may term the Parrot fancy. Now this last twelve months I have had a longing for a Parrot, so I took it on my hand to correspond with parties having a grand Parrot for disposal, and succeeded in having exchanges with them for Norwich and other Canaries of various quantities to meet their value. In all I have had four deals, and four disappointments. The first I got to hand some twelve months ago, and it turned out on arrival to be a Ring-necked Parrakeet. I kept it about three months, but lo! the screechings day long, week through! I am afraid its talking abilities were as far off as Jupiter. The next time trying an exchange for a Parrot, for Canaries agreeably, this one arrives (another Parrakeet), but rather minus the ring on neck, this one after a month's good treatment, bethought itself to give up eating absolutely. The reason I could not explain, but I tried every kind of medicine; up to small hours in the morning to save life, but no, it finally died in peace almost without a struggle. No use; I determined on a Parrot, so once more succeeded in a Canary exchange—I believe up to four in number. Now for my third arrival—"presto!" another Parrakeet. This one yet on hand, which I fancy will talk before many years go by; it attempts very well at three different words—one in particular, "Polly," which it masters fairly well. Of course, it must commence with something. I will confess on her behalf. Now for my fourth deal or exchange—this time from Leytonstone. This was to be a Grey Parrot—make excellent talker. I felt a little elevated at a good Grey Parrot coming this time, so I met four London trains at Bradford station from 5.30 p.m.; she arrived about 8.30 (three hours waiting). However, I took her home and got her hung up, still somewhat suited with the deal, but next day about half a dozen of my male friends called to see her (very probable customers if suited), but three of them burst out and says in our Yorkshire dialect: "Does ta know what tha has gotten?" I said: "Yes, a Parrot." "Nay, lad, doan't freet thi sen, it's a hen Cockatoo, or what cums through Horsetaria. Whenever that talks, o'll gi tha more than tha asses for it. It might perform and happen do thi a few summer-salts; tha's been hed, but try to lewk over it"—which, of course, I have now about settled down to look over it. I can quite see that we shall have to save up for a few years to something like £5 to £10 for a Parrot, however passionately you may long for one. As I passed the door of one friend of mine with my fourth Parrot in my hand, he says: "What now?" I said: "A Parrot." "Do you want a Parrot cage?" I said: "Yes, if you don't want it." "Wait half a minute." He brought out a Parrot cage, saying "take that home same time; it may be useful. I have had enough of Parrots." "Thanks very much; I will take it home; nothing lost by it." Now I have three cages and two Parrots—beg pardon, I mean one Parrakeet and one Cockatoo, magnificent screecher, thorough nutmeg grater! I am given to understand there are a lot more empty Parrot cages, if I care to call for them, in this city. I feel heartily sorry, though not by myself.

A Useful Guard.

Master H. Weston, Binsay, near Oxford.

I have sent a small sketch of a safety nest-pan holder. A bracket is made as letter A, and wire is put round as in sketch. This is now screwed to the boards of the bed place shown in C. The nest pan is placed on the bracket. This fixture prevents the young birds crawling from the nest and falling to the floor. The board (letter E) is a landing for the hen when she has flown up and wants a place to settle on.—H. Weston.

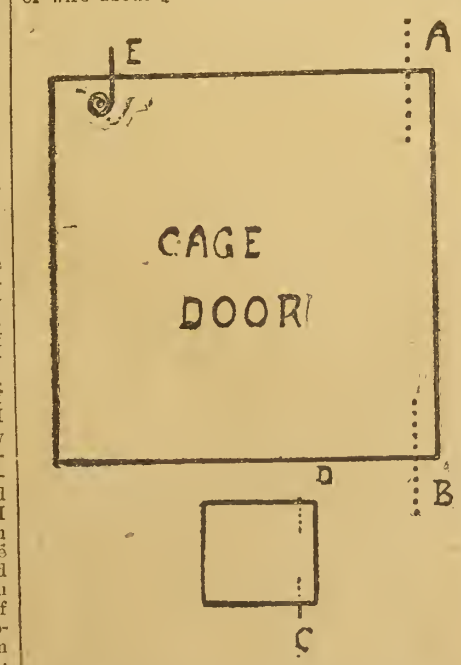
A Cheap and Simple Hinge for Cage Doors.

Mr. T. Thompson, 8, Mill Lane, Walsall.

The following will be useful for those who make their own cages, as it costs nothing, and makes a neat job of a cage door. First cut your door out the desired size; then, in the piece cut out for the door, push two pieces of wire about ¼in. from the end and about ¼in.



in the wood, and leave about ¼in. sticking out to fit in cage side, as shown in sketch. Then, in cage side, bore a hole B for the piece of wire C to fit in, and at A cut a small groove with penknife for wire D to fit in. Then plug the slot A up tight with a small bit of wood, and that holds door in position, and can be taken out at any time to search for red mite, which are easily trapped in such places. E is the catch for the door.—T. Thompson.

The Meating Off Process.

THE feeding habits of the 'Creeper being simlar to those of the Gold-crest, there is little to add, beyond the fact that spiders and various eggs and chrysalides forming the bulk of his natural diet, the collection of such by the method I have already described is especially advisable for the 'Creeper. Every care should be taken to prevent any escape of these species, as apart from the difficulty of recapture, even in a room—and only those who have experienced such can have a proper idea of a 'Creeper's powers of evasion—there is a grave risk of injury, especially by violent contact with a window pane, to which they will invariably fly; and many will, if they succeed in secreting themselves behind some picture or heavy article of furniture, remain there concealed.

The show cage may be either cork lined, or, if it is preferred, dark maroon baize cloth may be substituted for the more cumbersome bark. I prefer the latter myself, but in either case pay particular attention to the food and water vessels, using the hinged in preference to the removable variety, as the former precludes any risk of escape while being attended to at shows.

Insectivorous Fruit-eating Species.

I will now deal with a species, the diet of which is twofold or varied, viz., insects and fruits. The majority of our summer migrants come within this category, but I shall deal with two only, and the latter because of a different method of taking. The first is the White-throat, more familiar, I dare say, by the local name (derived probably from the call note) "Wheetie," or "Wheete pee." This latter (the alarm note) has been the undoing, or rather the reverse, of many a poacher; its value to the gamekeeper as indicative of the presence of something or someone is second only to the "cockup" of a disturbed Pheasant.

I regret to say that an erroneous idea prevails here that this is a predatory species, and sucks the eggs of other birds. I have, when a boy, combated this fallacy but often in vain, though I have gone the length of wagering my best peerie, or plunking taw, that 'Sparrows' eggs placed in close proximity to the nest of a White-throat would be untouched. Many hundreds of eggs and young of this most charming songster have I seen ruthlessly sacrificed to this most stupid idea. I trust you will all use your influence to assist me in combating this slaughter of the innocents, as I find the belief still obtains even with those who are old enough to know better, and of course the sayings of the elders are accepted by the youngsters as gospel truth.

There are two species of White-throat, the Lesser and the Greater, and many fanciers have a difficulty in distinguishing between these. Briefly, the Lesser is, as the name implies, the smaller of the two. And the richness in tone of colour of its upper surface, and the purity of white on its throat (whence both derive their name) are never equalled by the Greater. There is, however, one feature which admits of no doubt being entertained in deciding to which of these species an individual belongs, that is, the wings. In the Lesser species the primaries, or first flight feathers, are longest; the wing is therefore pointed like that of a Finch or Canary. The Greater species has the wing rounded like a Partridge, the primaries being shorter than the secondaries, or second flight feathers.

The latter species are much more common than the Lesser. Their habits are very similar, but the nests differ, that of the Greater being open like a Hedge Sparrow's, and generally elevated above the ground, while the nest of the lesser is domed like a Wren's or Willow Warbler's, and generally concealed in a tussock of grass or herbage. My further remarks may be taken as applicable to all the Warblers.

Last week's exquisite Spring Special Number met with a great reception, and is now quite SOLD OUT. We may be able to secure a few copies from our returns, and should any of these come to hand will gladly send a copy on to any fancier who cares to send us a halfpenny stamp for postage.

Taking Whitethroats in the Early Autumn.

Taking the White-throat first, there is a method of taking the White-throat when he arriyes on our shores. This method is so singularly effective and ingenious that I fear that for me to explain the modus operandi would lead to its prostitution for the sport it afforded, and as I have a decided opinion as to the taking of birds out of season, more especially by certain people who cannot properly attend to them, I know you will pardon this omission, which I have only mentioned, lest it be thought I did not know about it. I will therefore confine my taking methods to the early autumn months, when these species are preparing to depart to other climes, at which time the above-mentioned lure is quite ineffective.

While watching a mixed flock of birds bathing, I noticed that these small insectivorous species did not mix with the others, but chose a small and very shallow pool to which they returned each day with unfailing regularity. Understand, I do not mean a flock; it might be a number ranging from a single individual to a group composed of the parents and their progeny. I found also that if disturbed they at once, when the cause was removed, returned to complete their ablutions at the same place, despite the existence of thousands of equally suitable pools in the vicinity. If therefore I required a White-throat, I should endeavour to ascertain where the species were bathing, and I should place some unlimed grasses in a horizontal position and in a manner which would ensure any bird using that pool coming in contact therewith. Next day, if the weather were suitable, I would be on the spot, and the limed grass would be quickly substituted for the unlimed, for which he would probably have that contempt which familiarity breeds. Such would prove his fall.

Two Other Methods of Catching.

This method cannot be commended to those whose duties or inclinations prevent their rising early, so I will describe another method, which may be applied later. While watching White-throats foraging, I have noticed that aphides were particularly sought for; this was evidenced by the interest they took in the underside of the large seedheads of green hemlocks, which are subject to attacks by this pest.

The method of application is to approach the clump of hemlocks where the birds have been located, and making a few slits in the stems of a few of the most blight-laden hemlocks; insert grasses therein horizontally, just clearing the under-surface of the head of the plant. Then by making a detour the birds may be gently driven on to the set. Or the "touch-down" may be applied. I have repeatedly taken White-throats by all three of the above-named methods.

The treatment of this species when first caught is very similar to that I have already described for the Gold-crest, but being a summer migrant, and a fruit eating species, the former renders it essential that a certain degree of heat be maintained during the winter, where he is kept, and the latter calls for the inclusion of certain fruits, in addition to the insect menu. Opinions differ as to what is the best degree of heat for these species, and I have seen some fanciers boasting of the extremes of cold their birds could endure without dying. Substitute hunger for cold, and their boast would be equally applicable and senseless.

A RECENT ADDITION TO THE LONDON ZOO.

By THEO STEWART.

NOTE that quite lately an Indian Racquet Tailed Drongo has been presented to the Zoo. Judging from the interest apparently attached to the announcement, the bird appears to be a valuable acquisition, and unknown to many aviculturists. This may be so. Personally, I have kept Drongos for years, and my collection, which is limited to a dozen or so rare softbills, always includes two at least of these peculiar Shrikes.

The Racquet-tailed Drongo is not often imported; the Hair-crested Drongo still more rarely, and those specimens which do arrive alive are frequently short-lived. Yet the Drongo is not a delicate bird; when once acclimatised, he is hardy enough, but the acclimatisation is a matter involving considerable trouble, and very few live to be cage moulted and develop the bird's chief beauty, the "racquet." These long tail-feathers, or rather wires, are always broken off in transit, the confined space of the small bamboo cages in which they are brought home, and the natural restlessness of the bird accounting for their more or less damaged condition.

In addition to bad plumage, the bird is usually in a very debilitated and emaciated state, and at first seems inclined to refuse all food save mealworms and grubs. If these are supplied ad lib, there will follow the certain result of sickening the bird of them, and death comes tacitly and takes him where he never sees the sun!

The Food for a Newly-imported Bird.

A really good insectile food is indispensable, anything short of the best is absolutely useless to the Drongo family, and will be invariably refused. Meat, raw or cooked, small dead birds, and mice are all valuable in tempting the appetite and keeping the bird in condition, and fruit should be given daily. Cooked vegetables should be avoided, with the exception of mashed potatoes. Indigestible portions of food are ejected in the form of pellets. Once "on food," the way is straight, but a Drongo is a somewhat expensive experiment for a novice.

The Drongo Described.

When clothed and in his right mind Dissemurus Paradiseus is a handsome fellow—Black, with dark steel blue and green reflections—the feathers under the tail and wings are spotted with white. The tail proper is forked somewhat, and the two outer wires are tipped with the curious fan like expansions which give the bird his name. A good crest ornaments the head, and the feathers on the neck give the bird the appearance of having a mane; legs very short and feet small; beak powerful enough to give a vicious pinch if so disposed.

In "undress," however, I do not know any bird which presents a more woe-begone appearance. He puts me in mind of the description given by my old friend Rabelais, "A garment of blue and cold, with nothing before and nothing behind, and sleeves of the same!"

Some authorities state that, being a bird of the air, the Drongo has a great horror of coming to ground, and can only eat comfortably when on the wing. I can only say that my experience, and that an extensive one, has not borne out these statements.

His Vocal Abilities.

The Drongo is undoubtedly a wonderful mimic—his voice being marvellously clear and flexible. He possesses, too, some very fine notes of his own, but as a copyist of other bird's songs, he reigns supreme. I have no hesitation in giving him the palm for intelligence; he is too intelligent, in fact. But one fact is overlooked by his admirers, he is a demonical yeller! Even though, and this is almost always the case, his yells are simply to draw attention to his wants, and will cease at once on being attended to or soothed (unlike those feathered demons, the Cockatoo tribe) and are never uttered but for the fun of the thing, it is, nevertheless, a trying drawback to an otherwise charming compauion, and when two or three Drongos gathered together are afflicted with the same desires, the result is not Paradise!

Again, the Drongo is a most persistent bird, and unless one is prepared to practically live with him, one should refrain from possessing him. He may be, nay is, a whole aviary in himself, but he is not by any means sufficient for himself. He demands the light of his owner's countenance, and being deprived of it, will speedily take wing even to the land that is very far off. A Drongo always has the last word.

One of my Drongos has formed an unhappy attachment to a cock Shama, and sits by him warbling a peculiar and not altogether attractive love song. The Shama is not at all proud of his conquest, but it is an amusing sight, even to their somewhat blasé owner, to see the absurd little "Nightingale" feeding his coal-black companion with worms, reminding one somewhat of the Robin and the Cuckoo.

Puki's Accomplishments.

"Puki," my Drongo, has a character — not a very good one, I am afraid. He speaks several sentences clearly, sings a short song, can call a taxi, in fact, has a most extensive repertoire of various whistles, street cries, etc. He can imitate any bird within hearing, can howl like a child, and bark like a dog. He has a special fondness for hideous noises—the scream of an angry Pie, the hoot of an owl, and the shriek of a Macaw fill him with an exquisite joy, and when you demand the reason of the uproar, he answers in a strangely gentle, quite feminine voice "It's Puki-Puki."

When startled, Puki invariably says "Gee whizz." When both startled and angry he genially adds "Curse you"; and when in a regular passion, he utters a most extraordinary and weird malediction in a low clear voice calculated to make a monk shake in his shoes! I sometimes find it necessary to remind people who speak without first taking thought that Puki is within hearing, and that his memory is uncanny. All Drongoes, however, are not equally gifted, though I never had one that failed to say a few words.

The bird is not one to be recommended to all and sundry as a pet. The difficulty in "meating" him off, the many and varied demands he makes upon his owner, to say nothing of the initial expense in obtaining him, for he is a fairly rare bird, prohibit him from ever gaining the popularity he merits. A charming bizarre companion, a most intelligent pet, the Drongo is but summed up in the words of Thackeray, when speaking of his Irish friend:

"An awful blackguard, but a dear fellow."

MANSFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Horse and Groom Hotel, April 27th. Young bird show was fixed for the last Saturday in June, when a well known judge will officiate. Fee, one shilling per cage; prizes on the sliding scale. Will all members try to come to the next meeting, as we have a lot of work to get through. We are having 16 classes at the Y.B. show, and we hope that fanciers will rally round and make this show a success.—B. Gabbitass.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S

General meeting held April 27th at the Three Tuns, Eastwood, Mr. J. Martin in the chair, before a poor attendance. We have arranged for 30 classes at our first feather show, 8th June; Mr. W. Vardy judge. Second show, 20th July; Mr. E. Fox judge. With such well-known judges we are looking forward to having two bumping shows. Special general meeting May 11th, at the Queen's Head, Riddings, 7. Let us have a good attendance of members.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held at the College Inn, on April 27th, Mr. W. T. Turner chairman. Decided to allow members to pay up half their yearly contributions, and to enter for cups at the next meeting held on May 25th as work has been so bad lately. Nest feather show July 13th, at Mail Coach Inn; Mr. F. Gregory (Ecclesfield) judge. All members to show at least three birds or forfeit entrance fee for three. J. W. Jones and J. Russum were elected members. A discussion took place on the closed ring question, some were in favour of it, but the majority were against. —B. Bailey, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

General monthly meeting held April 27th, at Old Boar's Head Hotel, Manchester, Mr. A. Leach in the chair. Only a moderate number attended. After the ordinary business a discussion took place as to where we should hold our next annual show. Eventually this was deferred to the next meeting. Three new members were enrolled. Mr. Massey promised to give a lecture at our next meeting, so hope members will turn up in good force.—Andrew Percival, Hon. Sec.

BERMONDSEY AND ROTHERHITHE F.A.

General meeting held at headquarters; Mr. Geo. Crawford in chair, supported by a good number of members. The first business was nominations of judges for our forthcoming 1912 shows. Proposed and carried that the secretary purchase five cups, medals, and five young stock medals, and in due course purchase a challenge cup for competition at next annual show. The medals are to be presented at next general meeting, and all members please attend on May 16th, 8.—John Clark, Sec. and Treas.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held Drill Hall Ante-room, April 25th, Mr. T. Wildridge presiding. Mr. D. Young, assist.-sec., asked to be relieved of his duties, and Mr. Martin Kelly was unanimously elected in his place. Secretary read letter re advertising show. The matter was adjourned until next meeting. Following two classes were added to show schedule: Boys and girls under 14 years, and a 5s. selling class A.V. Agreed that there be no novice classes for members, but that a special be reserved, one for each section, for the best bird shown by a novice, a member who has not won more than one first prize in open competition to constitute a novice. The president then intimated the resignation of the secretary, who, owing to changes at his work, would be unable to continue as secretary. The resignation was accepted, and it was agreed that a special meeting be called for the 4th May to elect new secretary. It had been intended to go over schedule, also to have a debate on the Norwich Plainhead, questions to be asked by Mr. A. Harris and answered by Mr. W. Grewar, but as a good number present were employed on night-work, and would have to leave early, it was agreed to defer it till the special meeting in Bay Horse Tavern on May 5th, at 6, when it is hoped there will be a full turn-out. Two new members, Messrs. C. Harris and M. Kelly were elected.—W. Whiteford, Sec.

NEWTOWNARDS C.B.S.

Headquarters, 11th April. A good attendance of members. Officers were elected for 1912:—President, D. Finlay; vice-president, Wm. Montgomery; treas., R. Copeland; committee, A. McDonald, James Calhoun, Alex. Doggart, H. Robinson, A. Montgomery, John, McKee; sec., F. Robinson, 126, Greenwell St., Newtownards. Second annual show, on 27th and 28th December. Mr. A. Chalmers, Kirkinfloch, judge.—F. Robinson, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting, April 27th, at Mr. Lumley's, Mr. S. Foster in the chair. Decided, to hold a table show every month up till annual show. First show, May 25. Classes: Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, and A.O.V. British. Mr. M. Stobbs (Annfield Plain), judge. Decided, to choose judges that are not members, so that it will give every member a chance of showing. The offer of Mr. W. H. Butler of Stanley, of an electro-plated teapot for most points won at table shows was accepted, and a vote of thanks was passed to the donor. Seven new members elected: Messrs. J. Hunter, J. Calvert, W. Robinson, R. Coates, W. Sbield, W. Smith and W. Gowland. Decided, to try and get a cup for annual show, and several donations were promised towards the fund.—R. Peart, Sec.

BONNYRIGG C.B.S.

Meeting held April 27. In the absence of Mr. Jardine through illness Mr. Weigley occupied the chair. The following were appointed to judge our show on 26th Oct.: Scotch, Nor. and Brit., Mr. W. Rodgers (Collinton); Bord., Mr. John Watson (Selkirk). First Feather show, July 6, Mr. G. Brown (Leith) to be asked to judge.—James Hamilton, Secretary.

SCOTTISH NATIONAL C.B.S.

Committee meeting held April 27th, at which there was a good attendance of members. Mr. James Winter (President) in the chair. The final arrangements for smoking concert were gone into. The report as to tickets sold was very gratifying indeed, showing that the gathering will be exceptionally well attended by fanciers and others. The talent promises to be of a high order, which will certainly make the evening's entertainment one worth being present at. All fanciers heartily welcome. Tickets may be purchased at the Hotel. The date of the concert is May 4, at 7, in the Union Hotel, 112, Lothian Road, Edinburgh. Tickets 6d. each.—J. R. Meikle, Secretary.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Council meeting held 22nd April, Mr. Dowling in chair; good attendance. Decided, to give, four Norwich classes at open show on Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st. Patronage was granted to Holywood C.B.S., also South County, Dublin C.B.A. Mr. P. O'Connor elected a member. Decided that at all future shows the Yorkshire Union cage label be used; also that drinkers be painted or enamelled black outside, and white or unpainted inside. Auditors were appointed. Decided to put up a British bird cup for competition at open show, to be won outright in the one season, four birds (of any variety) only to be nominated, competitors to be members.—C. Holley, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW & WEST COUNTIES.

Monthly meeting held Good Templars' Hall, Ingram St., 27th April. President Knox presided over a good attendance. Minutes read and adopted. The handsome special given by Mr. John Young, Glasgow, for the member who secured most new members during the last three months was won by Mr. J. H. Adam with a total of 12. 7th December was confirmed as date of annual show. It was agreed to ramble to Balloch, Loch Lomond, on 18th May. Train leaves Glasgow Central at 2.5 p.m.; it is hoped that all members will endeavour to be present. The committee have under consideration a programme of sports, which will include boating, swimming, foot racing, etc. Specials were handed in by Messrs. Macfarlane, Rankin, Pettigrew, Adam, J. Young, Glasgow. The judging competition proved very exciting, and the secretary, Mr. Walter Connelly, just won from Mr. Jas. Rankin, the points being 18, 17, the latter gaining the sweep. Mr. John Young, Glasgow, provided the prize, Mr. Connelly choosing cream dishes. The following classes were arranged for next meeting on 25th May. Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Lesser Redpoll, Mealy Redpoll, or Twite, and Buntings and variety. Mr. J. Steel, Overnewton, elected a member.

MANCHESTER AND NORTHERN COUNTIES O.S.

Meeting, headquarters, April 15th, Mr. Bladon, our President, giving us a very interesting lecture on Ornithology. Among the points brought out was the high intellect, the great strength, the acute sight, the good memory, the adaptability to circumstances, and the general influence of birds. We had the reason for their exceptional voice explained at some length, also the general structure of the frame and muscles, etc., the structure of nests, and the nesting sites were dealt with, also the general habits of the different species; altogether those who were present were treated to a very interesting and instructive lecture. A discussion took place after the lecture, and a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Bladon brought the meeting to a close. Next meeting, May 6th, when Mr. T. Harrison, of Altrincham, will give us a paper on Greens and Colour Feeding. Friends are cordially invited.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held April 22, the Chairman (Mr. James Jones) presiding. The following were elected stewards for the members' show on Whit Monday next: Messrs. James Jones, George Jones, J. L. Sweeney, R. E. Griffith, C. O. Parry, R. Green, Edward Jones, J. W. Jones, and R. W. Taylor. A copy of the schedule was submitted, and confirmed.—John Wynne Parry, Hon. Sec.

SWINDON F. AND F.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Baths, Milton-road, April 24th. Present: Mr. H. R. Halliday (in the chair), Messrs. A. Ireland, J. T. Edmonds, J. Smith, J. Benuett, A. D. Winter, T. Wilkins, H. A. Northover, J. Tarrant, F. Brooke, G. Gorton, E. Jefferies, S. Lewis, K. Hunt, E. W. Trotman, A. Ireland, jun., and W. J. Moran. New member elected, Mr. H. Smith. Letters were read from the judge and Mr. Penketh booking Nov 27th for judging and penning at our open show; also from the vice-presidents accepting office. The members were very pleased to see their worthy chairman, Mr. H. R. Halliday, back again after his long illness.—W. J. Moran, 2, Brunswick-street, Swindon. (As we do not cater for pigeons, part of this report has had to be deleted. —Ed. "C.B.")

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Third list of new members: Messrs. W. Archibald, J. Thomson, J. Nairn (Kirkcaldy), D. Campbell, T. Preston, J. Rodgers (Slateford), J. Carson (Dalkeith), James Orr and John Orr (Glasgow), J. Cook (Cowdenbeath), W. Craig (Walkerburn), A. Croshie, G. Park (Galashiels), J. Thomson (Tranent), R. Johnston (Musselburgh), A. Lang (Bo'ness), J. Morrison (Edinburgh), J. Newbigging, W. Duns (Duns), A. Pennycuick (Leith), J. J. Wyness (Airdrie), R. Laidlaw (Hawick), A. Steel (Kelso). We have now issued our recall notices, and the response from fanciers joining is very encouraging indeed to the officials. There are still a few weeks before closing date is reached. I have a few copies of membership tickets on hand, and any fancier wishing one with a view to joining, kindly make application, and it will be sent at once. Thanks to all rendering assistance. —C. R. Drysdale, Esq., hon. pres.; W. Thornton, Esq., hon. vice-pres.; J. R. Meikle, sec., 51, Lothian-road, Edinburgh.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY (National Derby) O.A.

Continuation of membership 1912: W. Allan, J. McLamour, G. C. T. Hope (Edinburgh), R. Winstoue (Musselburgh), J. J. Wynnes (Airdrie), J. McMahon, Neil Lyle, W. Lees, John Orr, James Orr, C. Biye, J. Muir, J. J. McIlwaine, W. Wilson, N. R. H. Cooper (Glasgow), J. Winstanley (Govan), J. Little (Barrhead).—R. Wright, president; J. Hogg, vice-president; Thomas Smith, secretary and treasurer, 10, Lochside-street, Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

The first meeting of the new council held April 27th, at Market Tavern, Bradford; Mr. F. Armstrong (president) in the chair. The president thanked the council for the confidence reposed in him, and hoped that the business of the year would tend to ultimately benefit the Union and strengthen it in all aspects. He promised that each question would receive his attention impartially, from whatever society or member it was brought forward, and expressed a keen desire that all would work amicably together in the interest and welfare of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. Minutes of previous meeting were read, and arising from these the case of Mr. E. Radley, who sought to recover his entrance fees for two birds entered at Laisterdyke Show, was dealt with. After an explanation had been tendered by the secretary of Laisterdyke to the effect that the labels were sent off same as all the others, and that they were fully entered up in catalogue, it was unanimously decided that the society were in order in retaining the entry fees. Queensbury C.B.S. having decided not to hold an open show as previously arranged on November 30th, were allowed to withdrawn on condition that they pay their share of the judges' fees for the ensuing show season. Mr. F. Hammond read a letter in respect to Mr. C. Pickup, and his claim for birds lost in transit to Ireland. Decided to leave this matter over. Mr. C. Ross, of Manningham, previously suspended by the Council, applied for reinstatement, having paid up all dues and demands; decided to remove the suspension from this date. The case of Hebden Bridge and C.V. and defaulting member was left over until next meeting, that their delegate may attend and explain. Dewsbury C.B.S. applied for admission to the Union, and they were unanimously accepted to membership. The question of members using closed rings, and whether they would be allowed to compete at Union shows was next brought up, and, as was expected, led to a lively discussion. The Council came to the conclusion that closed rings would come under the heading of a distinguishing mark, and therefore decided that all rung birds would be debarred from competing at Yorkshire Union shows. Members of the Union are earnestly requested to bear this in mind to avoid future disappointment. City of Bradford reported a member for non-payment of subs., and it was decided to suspend him from the Union until he pays. The resignation of Bolton Woods C.B.S. was allowed to be withdrawn. One of the members of that society, who had been requested to attend the Council meeting and refused, was suspended until such time as he does appear. The Council decided, after a very close vote, to reduce the number of novice gold medals, and will offer for competition in the novice classes at Union shows during the season 1912 and 13 nine gold medals for the Yorks. section and three for the Nor. section, to be won under similar conditions to last year. Mr. F. Hammond was unanimously elected treasurer. Decided that the levy per member be same as last year, namely, 8d., that being considered sufficient to carry on the business of the Union for the ensuing year. The new rule passed by this year's ballot that "Four gold medals be given in open competition at Union shows for intermediates, any person having won a trophy to be debarred from competing, novices excepted," was referred back to each Union society. The rule in its present form is not quite clear, so that if societies will give their own definition on the rule and instruct their delegates for the next meeting, this competition can then be put into proper working order before the handbooks are printed. Another question referred to each Union society is one relating to items of finance appearing on the ballot papers. This, in the opinion of those best able to judge, is not a satisfactory way of dealing with such questions; they should not appear on the ballot papers, and a resolution was carried that this matter be placed before each society with a view to obtaining their sanction to invest the sub-committee with full power to keep these questions off the ballot paper and settle them either in Council or committee as thought best. Delegates should attend their society's meeting, and after getting instructions come prepared for the next Council meeting when these two items will be placed on the agenda. Secretaries will greatly oblige by paying attention to Rule 9. Anyone desirous of advertising in the Union handbook should communicate with me at once; charges as before: 7s. 6d. full page, 3s. 9d. half page, 2s. 6d. one-third page, 2s. quarter page, and 1s. breeders' cards.—H. Hill, Sec.

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, eats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 25s 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.— By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

An Accomplished Magpie,

And its Owner.

MRS. LAWRENCE,
(Of Holloway).

THE beautiful Magpie pictured on this page is one of the very best ever seen on the Show Bench. On its first two appearances it has won 3rd L.C.B.A., and 2nd and Special Crystal Palace. An account of the accomplishments of this fine bird, written by its owner, will be found on page 434.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE "FILUP" BIRD FEEDER.

14 Days' Free Trial.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

FOR a full description of two of the most popular softbills, you cannot have a better booklet than "Nutshell" No. 4, "The Song Thrush and Blackbird." With its help you will be able to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition. Included in the work are directions for hand-rearing and the selection of show birds, as well as particulars of cages, "Nutshell" No. 4, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London.

THE Skylark is an easily kept species of softbill, and is unequalled as a house bird, provided it receives proper attention. Look here! The feeding of Larks; the taking and feeding of the young; catching and sexing; moulting; hints concerning young birds; the Lark for contest singing; selecting the right bird; getting the right song; training for song and exhibition; these are the contents of "Nutshell" No. 3, "The Skylark," post free 2½d., from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

THE "FILUP" BIRD FEEDER.

Boy of 12 years successful with it.

And it has this season been supplied to most of the leading fanciers, including Messrs. Hodder, Sheldon, Midgley, Hawes Bros., Ogden Bros., etc., etc. Read what some of our customers say. Mr. G. L. Sampson, Hon. Sec. Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes:—Enclosed pleased find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your Filup Feeders. The one I had from you last season was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season.

Mr. S. Preston, Member B.R.C.C., 228, Dudley-road, Wolverhampton, writes:—My hen gave up feeding her young when four days old. I started feeding them with the Filup Feeder. Then I gave it to my boy, who is only 12 years old, to feed them with it. He has reared them to five week old, and they now feed themselves. I think it's a splendid invention, and so simple to use. Every breeder should have one; it's so cheap, and a great saver of young birds, and has been a great success to me.

Mr. F. Gifford, 112, Shortlands-road, Sittingbourne, writes: The Filup Bird Feeder has saved me four nice young ones already, so if I go on at this rate it will be worth its weight in gold.

KEEP EYES AND EARS OPEN

so as to detect when any of your Rollers are going wrong. How can you detect anything wrong? You don't know? Well, you ought to, for your lack of knowledge will be disastrous to the singing powers of your birds. "Nutshell" No. 10 gives you this knowledge, and if you don't get it, it will be a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Which bird promises to be good with hollow roll, bell-roll, bass-roll, and Koller? How do you cure a bird of noisiness? What are the best training methods and the best preparation for contest singing? For answers to these great questions in Roller Canary-dom, and also full particulars as to correct keeping and breeding, get "Nutshell" No. 10, "The Roller Canary," 2½d. post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

LOOK YOU HERE.

There is something here that will interest you, so please read it through carefully, for if you wish to have a successful breeding season, you must have birds of good quality, that are already in breeding condition. This is the class of birds I am now offering; every bird a picked one, that will please you and do you good (no wasters or German rubbish here). Let me send you birds on approval; you will be convinced there is nothing to equal them at anything like the prices. Every bird guaranteed superior quality. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers (the king of all songsters), cocks 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; a few hens, same strain, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; specially selected loud singing cock Canaries, the real noise makers, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6 each; feeding and muling hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; champion Yorkshires, bred from and related to noted winners, fine upstanding, tight feathered cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; typical racy hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. A CHANCE FOR BEGINNERS to solve all the intricacies connected with the breeding and exhibiting of Yorkshire Canaries is now offered at 1/1½ post free. "Yorkshire Canaries," by H. W. Battye, illustrated by H. Norman, and A. J. Simpson, is a notable work. It is replete wth all that is needful for the beginner, and is extremely valuable to old hands. The chapter on the selection of stock is alone worth the money, and there are 14 other chapters equally rich in valuable hints. See those on Breeding Cinnamon Marks; Crossing; Dressing or Faking; Don'ts for Breeders. "Yorkshire Canaries," the unrivalled manual for breeders of Yorkshires. 1/1½ post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

NOTICE! To those about to buy a Grey Parrot. There are many points to look for when making your purchase, ways of telling at a glance in what state of health the bird is. Though it is difficult to distinguish sex, there are means. The Grey Parrot is a delicate bird, and the feeding of a newly imported specimen is therefore a matter of the utmost importance. Then, the Parrot acclimatised, care with its general diet is very needful; there are many foods which it will readily eat, but which must be rigidly avoided. With due care you can make a grand talker of a "Grey," and quickly, too, if you know how. What is a common mistake which Parrot lovers make? The answer to this question, and to every other concerning the keeping of this popular bird in health and condition will be found in "Nutshell" No. 17, "The Grey Parrot," by Wesley T. Page; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds, 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above hook post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 2nd, at Lockhart's Cafe, Nun Street, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in the chair. Correspondence was read from Mr. Shepherd, of Biggleswade, our late vice-chairman, thanking the members for the pipe which they presented him on his leaving Newcastle. Members elected: Messrs. R. Bertram, Newcastle; A. Hay, Tweedmouth; W. Affleck, Newcastle; J. Ross, Ashington; W. Espie, Gosforth; J. Brennan, Newcastle, and W. Cross. Mr. Gill, Curator Hancock Museum, gave a very long and instructive lantern lecture on "Bird migration." He dealt with the subject in a masteriy manner, and showed that he had a thorough grasp of bird life. The large company present (the largest this year) were all delighted with the way Mr. Gill spoke and expressed his views; just a nice, homely talk. The pictures, about 40 of them, were all splendid, and those who were not present missed the treat of a lifetime. It is not given to every society to get gentlemen like Mr. Gill to come amongst them and impart knowledge that it has taken years of study to obtain. At the close Mr. Gill answered in a satisfactory manner a number of questions that were put to him. On the proposition of Mr. T. Robson, seconded by Mr. MacPartling, and supported by Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Gill was heartily thanked, and in replying, said he would be pleased to come and give us another lecture on some future occasion; so, members and fanciers, keep your eyes open and don't miss the next one. Mr. Voutt was also thanked for manipulating the lantern. We hope to have a lecture at the next monthly meeting, June 6th, at our headquarters, 65, Grainger Street, 7.30 p.m., by Mr. A. Brown. Subject, "Norwich Plainhead." Next committee meeting, May 16th, 8 p.m. Tickets for Nest Feather show, June 22nd, are now ready; members can have same by applying. Will members please note that the picnic is on Whit Monday, May 27th, to Bothal. Train leaves Central, 1.36 p.m.; meet in station not later than 1 p.m. Will those who intend going please let me know before May 24th, how many railway tickets they require. We also want a guarantee of 50 for the caterer for tea; if we cannot get this number we will have to make the best arrangements we can, as there is no place in the village where we can get tea prepared. Those coming to station after 1.10 p.m. run the risk of having to pay full railway fare.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

Curious Habit of Wrynecks.

When the hen Wryneck is sitting, the cock bird is unusually noisy, as if trying to attract all the attention to himself, but as soon as the eggs hatch and the young require feeding, he is silent as possible.

Food of the Green Woodpecker.

The food of the Green Woodpecker consists of ants and the various kinds of insects that infest timber. It is said by some to eat acorns and nuts.

The Wary Redshanks.

Redshanks have now returned to the marshlands to breed. They are particularly noisy birds, and will take wing long before the intruder gets near their haunts. They fly round and round with their long legs hanging down, uttering their loud double note. So clear and piercing is this that all other birds within the district are disturbed and on the alert.

Birds Want Rain.

The continual dry weather appears to be affecting the food supply of some of our insectivorous birds. Blackbirds, Thrushes and Starlings hardly look so happy and sleek as they generally do at this time of the year, and the writer of this note has lately picked up some half-dozen birds that were mere skeletons, nothing but feather and bones. A few showers would be very welcome.

Twitterings.

Mr. A. R. Coe, of 18, Calderdale Road, Clapham, S.W., writes that he has taken over the Hon. Secretaryship of Clapham C.B.A. in the place of Mr. A. L. Priest.

Secretaries of Societies in Wales should note a letter from Mr. A. E. Brown, of the Welsh C.B.C. in our correspondence columns.

We are having our annual all England show in the Ambulance Drill Hall on 8th and 9th November. We have engaged Mr. C. House to judge, writes Mr. C. Whitehead, Rochdale O.C.

Mr. Enoch Tams, Longton, writes as follows:—I have in the past two weeks received orders from New Zealand, South Africa, Natal, France, Iceland, Canada, all of which named CAGE BIRDS.

Complimentary.

Mr. R. Mitchell, of Bournemouth, writes as follows:—Being a reader of CAGE BIRDS from almost the first. I must congratulate you on the splendid spring number just issued. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success, which it deserves. Should like to see the Rev. Farrar's witty and instructive articles, "Through a Bird-room Window," published in book form when completed.

Don't miss next week's "C.B." It will contain a beautiful surplus coloured plate gratis.

Will secretaries and fanciers please note that Mr. T. Bentley has removed from High Street to Booth Street, Cleckheaton?

Mr. Wm. Butler, of Stanley, is appointed judge for our Nest Feather Show on July 20, writes Mr. Wm. Forster, sec. of Pelton Fell and Dis. C.B.S.

Your last spring number absolutely eclipsed all others of the past, and the coloured plate and art supplements were excellent, writes Mr. F. Hobart (London).

I am sorry I forgot to write last week to say how much I liked the Spring Number, writes Mr. H. Rees, and must say that the panel coloured plate is the finest I have seen—truly a work of art.

Mr. S. Lambert is not now connected with the Guisbro and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Hood, 92, Charlton Terrace, near Boosbeck S.O., Yorks. Any further communications should be addressed to me.

We write to let you know how highly pleased we are to see our photograph along with so many fanciers and readers of CAGE BIRDS. Wishing you good luck and a splendid future with CAGE BIRDS.—McGregor and Boyd.

We have secured Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, as judge of Norwich and British, and Mr. J. McLennon, of Piers Hill, Edinburgh, Belgian and Scotch Fancy, at our forthcoming show on Nov. 22, writes Mr. Samuel McCollum, hon. sec. Lurgan C.B.S.

Mr. Wm. Whitehead writes as follows:—Will those interested please note that I have resigned the secretaryship of the Lochgelly and Dis. C.B.S., and address all communications in future to Mr. Wm. Grewar, 7, Parkview, Lochgelly, who is the new secretary.

I have been appointed hon. sec. of the Wallasey C.B.S., writes Mr. T. Edwards, 4, Park Way, Wallasey, and in conjunction with the officers I intend to make a special effort to revive the palmy days of this club. As it is the only one of its character in Wallasey, "the new county borough on the Mersey," we have hopes of increased membership. I shall be pleased to forward to intending members any further information they may desire if they will apply to me.

It was certainly a complete and agreeable surprise to me, writes Mr. Sampson, on taking up my copy of your paper on Friday evening last to find one of my Borders in the illustration on the front page, and I must congratulate your artist on his very correct delineation of the bird. It is a yellow, not a buff, and won at Wimbledon in the yellow cock class; it also won 1st and diploma at the L.C.B.A. Show. Thanking you for the appreciation given to my favourite bird in your valuable paper.

It has given me great pleasure (writes Mr. E. R. Roberts, of Penygroes, to see the illustration of my yellow Border cock (2nd London C.B.A.) in your paper, "C.B.," this week. Please accept my thanks, with same to Mr. Norman, for the lifelike drawing. He has only been shown twice—2nd L.C.B.A. and 2nd Crystal Palace—in latter show beaten by his brother (same nest). I am pleased to say he is doing well at breeding, and I have very promising youngsters by him. Wishing you and your paper every success.

New Midland Norwich Club.

I have arranged for a meeting with a view of forming the Midland Counties Norwich P.C., to be held at the Crown Inn, Broad Street, Birmingham, on May 18, at 7 p.m., writes Mr. H. T. Collier, of 110, Ahhey Road, Bearwood, Birmingham. Will all fanciers interested who have any suggestions to make kindly attend or write to me?

Softbill Lovers! Note.

Mr. C. W. Law, Hon. Sec. L. and P.O.S., writes as follows:—The London and Provincial O.S. are having a paper on "Softhills," by Otto Puck, Esq., at The Raglan, on Thursday, 16th, at 8 p.m. Mr. Puck has kindly promised to bring a stock cage of his own pattern, also some living specimens of Softbills that have been caged from six years downwards, to demonstrate his remarks. The committee warmly invite all those interested in birds to join them on this occasion.

Norwich Club Show.

The Club show of the Norwich Plainhead Club, writes Mr. G. E. Wilkinson, of the Notts O.S., will be held in conjunction with our open show at Nottingham on November 9th and 11th next. There will be three N.P.C. cups to be competed for in addition to a number of other valuable specials. There will be ten classes for champions and six for amateurs. Mr. W. Vardy will judge. We hope the Norwich exhibitors will combine to make this a record show.

Farewell Dinner to Well-Known Grimsby Fancier.

Mr. W. H. Moore, a well-known exhibitor of Norwich Canaries, was the guest of the evening at a complimentary dinner at the White Hart Hotel, Grimsby, on 25th ult., prior to his leaving England for British Columbia on the 2nd inst. A goodly muster sat down to the dinner, Messrs. W. Clews and H. Harding representing the Grimsby fanciers. An excellent musical programme added to the enjoyment of the evening. Councillor Jonathan Taylor, in a few well-chosen remarks, expressed the friendship and respect in which Mr. Moore has always been held by his fellow-townsmen, and Mr. H. Gifford, representing the South Ward Unionist Association, endorsed these in presenting Mr. Moore with an umbrella suitably inscribed. Altogether Mr. Moore had a "send off" which will live long in the memories of those present.

We have secured the services of Mr. J. Raynes to judge our annual show, Nov. 23, 1912, writes Mr. W. Hopwood, sec. Denton C.B.S.

In our notice of Kippax open singing contest last week we announced this for "White" Saturday. This date, of course, should be Whit Saturday, May 25.

Having been elected secretary of the Chopwell C.B.S., will all secretaries and fanciers please address all society correspondence in future to me, writes Mr. W. Tomlinson, 2, South View, Chopwell, Co. Durham.

Mr. Dan McArthur, Edinburgh, writes as follows:—I am glad to see that 1912 is showing such good weekly issues; an improvement upon even such fine issues as we have had in past years. Mr. Steel's paper is very interesting indeed.

I beg to remind the members (writes Mr. J. Greaves, sec. Yorkshire C.C.) that the latest date for the sending in of ballot papers re election of officers for 1912-13 is May 13. Please fill in and send at once to 70, St. Margaret's Road, Bradford.

I had a very pleasant surprise last Friday morning, writes Mr. H. Wood (Dover), in seeing my winning Border cock on the front page. It has now four more firsts to its credit; has never been beaten yet, but was wrong classed at the late Palace Show for something. Wishing you and CAGE BIRDS every success.

Your paper has been a very great help to me, writes Mr. Hainsworth, Neston. The Illustrated Idea column and the Timely Hints column especially contain hints and wrinkles in nutshell form, which are worth pages of matter such as one often reads in books, and we novices are helped rapidly on the road. As a printer, I must say that the plates in "C.B." Annual are fine indeed.

Kindly note that I have sold all my surplus stock of Lizards through your valuable paper "CAGE BIRDS." I am sure it is the best paper for bird fanciers; always full of good sound and useful information....I have taken "CAGE BIRDS" ever since it commenced and found it a great help.—W. Lawton, Glossop.

Owing to the great many enquiries for Bullfinches advertised, I am unable to reply to all, which speaks highly for your paper.—W. Hughes.

Will the members of the Edinburgh Norwich C. and M.B.S., writes Mr. John Welsh, please note that the ramble at Musselburgh which was fixed for May 11 has been postponed owing to unavoidable circumstances. As soon as other arrangements are made for a later date, which will probably be in about three weeks' time, I shall, through the medium of CAGE BIRDS, give the members all information.

We have on various occasions called our readers' attention to the marking rings supplied by Mr. G. B. Leclair, and must congratulate him on their beautifully rounded and perfectly smooth edges and general neatness; they are one of the best samples we have seen. Besides the flanged pattern, he also supplies his open rings without flanges to meet the desires of fanciers who prefer them. Experienced breeders are well acquainted with the merits of Mr. Leclair's rings, which have been many years on the market.

In our correspondence columns will be found a letter from a New York reader who is in want of a few eggs of British Finches for rearing under Canaries. We publish Mr. Gambo's letter in case some reader may be able to oblige him. Of course, in many districts the taking of wild birds' eggs is prohibited, but in some localities the unchecked increase of seedeating birds is not looked upon as an unmixed blessing and there may be a reader in such a place who will be willing to supply Mr. Gambo with what he requires.

Due this week, ten tons Sandiford's Royal Red Feed, the finest in the world. All records broken last season with birds moulted on same at every leading show in England, including Crystal Palace, where seven out of the eight champion 1st Norwich never saw an ounce of any other colour feed. In Cinnamons every 1st, 2nd, and 3rd were moulted solely on Royal Red. In Yorkshires, birds that do not count for colour, above half of 1st winners were moulted on Royal Red. Specials given to every society using 28lbs. or over. Send for samples and prices.—Sandiford, Colour Food King, Preston.—Advt.

Rings a Distinguishing Mark.

There would appear to be considerable feeling that rings should not be allowed on Canaries competing for prizes on the show bench. Last week our report of the first meeting of the new Council of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. contained the notification that in the opinion of the Council closed rings came under the definition of a distinguishing mark, and that birds so rung were to be debarred from competing at Yorkshire Union shows. It will be seen from our Club Reports column that other societies are adopting the same resolution.

The Shama in the States.

We hear from Mr. Jas. A. Blow, of Philadelphia, that a very large demand exists in the United States for that accomplished songster, the Indian Shama. Mr. Blow has had great experience in the keeping of this charming bird, and sells more Shamas, he tells us, than any dealer in the U.S. A most interesting letter on the Shama and its treatment appears in our correspondence columns this week. We note that in this Mr. Blow uses the expression, "Mocking Bird's Food." The Mocking Bird, of course, requires in captivity the same treatment as a Shama, but it would be interesting to hear from Mr. Blow what are the ingredients of this "Mocking Bird's Food."

COUNTRY RAMBLES FOR BIRD LOVERS.

We are having an afternoon ramble in Shurry Woods on the 23rd inst. for the purpose of studying bird life, writes A. Afrigan, Hon. Sec. Ramsgate C.B.S., 21, Thanet Road, Ramsgate. Shall be glad to hear from any friends living in the district who would like to accompany us.

The Country Ramble of Poplar Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. H. W. Cook, will take place on Sunday, the 12th May, to Laindon, Essex. Train from East Ham Station at 9.42 a.m. Members and their friends heartily welcome.

The Wimbledon Society are having a country ramble on Sunday, May 19. The district chosen is Ashtead Woods. Leave Wimbledon at 10.20. Fare 10d. return. Luncheon 1s. 6d., and tea 9d., will be provided. It is hoped that a good number will be present. Any fanciers who would like to join us will be welcomed, and ladies are invited. Full particulars may be had of the organiser, Mr. H. Dixon, 14, Claremont Avenue, New Malden, Surrey.

We are having our ramble to Hildenboro and Tonbridge on Sunday, May 12th, write Messrs. Barton and Barton, Joint Hon. Secs. New Cross C.B.S., 8, Amersham Grove, New Cross, S.E., when we expect to have Mr. Norman with us. We shall be pleased if fanciers would write us for particulars, or meet us at New Cross, S.E. and C. Rly. station, at 9 a.m. sharp; train fare about 4s.

Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A. are having their annual ramble on Sunday, May 12, to Wilmslow. Friends invited meet 2.15 train, London Road Station, writes Mr. J. Spencer, hon. sec.

For Clapham C. B. Club ramble see Club Notices page 440.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Lockhart's, Briggate, Mr. H. J. Mennard in the chair. Mr. E. Hattersley was elected a member. The evening was spent listening to an enjoyable lecture by Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford) on British Birds.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

Further Striking Testimony:—

Mr. J. Boyce, of 34, Hampstead Road, Brighton, writes: "I am using 'Phosto' for Canaries with good results. Last year midway through breeding season I was advised to give it a trial. Up to that time my birds had been doing very badly. But from the commencement of my using it they improved. The old birds continued to feed well throughout the hot months, and the youngsters were very much stronger."

MULE BREEDING MADE EASY.

The writer declares for methods he terms "unorthodox" and which make mule-breeding easy for all.*

By REV. F. RICHARDS

Condition and How to Get it.

How can the young fancier tell if his Finches are in condition? The true knowledge comes along the rugged road of experience, and the journey is not accomplished without heavy expenditure. There comes a time in the expert's life when he is able with almost clear certainty to understand whether his birds are fit and anxious to breed. This knowledge cannot be passed on through the columns of a paper; it is just the minute and constant accumulation of years of close study.

We can, however, lay down several main features, and give some broad hints that may help the novice. First, let us take the brown Linnet. His beak will in colour turn a dark bluish tint, and his song become quite vigorous; but that is not sufficient. If you see your brown Linnet pull himself up and assume the shape of a miniature pouter pigeon, you can be absolutely certain.

What is the best method of getting birds into such condition? The writer has found the most successful method is to allow the birds to sing themselves into breeding fever. Once again reverting to "Canarydom," it is often advised to remove the cocks out of the sight of the hens in the earlier part of the spring, because the vigorous singing, etc., brings hen Canaries forward too soon. If you prefer to put your Finch in with the hen in December, January, or February, you will get precious little singing; on the other hand, always keep more than one cock Finch of the same species, and if in health, and as nature awakes from her winter's slumber, the birds will come into song, and one will provoke and challenge the other, until literally you can get your birds to sing themselves into breeding condition many weeks earlier than would otherwise be the case.

Another practical plan is to run two cock Finches together for a few minutes every few days as the season approaches. What are you saying—two cock Finches? What next? You will find that the birds will answer each other's call notes, and you will perhaps find one drawing himself together, and commencing to sing his full song. In this way you can stimulate and excite nature, and as a consequence bring about that wonderful alteration in the size and shape of the vent of the cock bird, without which you need not expect to be successful.

The writer has brought brown Linnets into condition in this way, until two cocks placed together have sung at and around each other on the bottom of the cage, with wings down and tail spread—and, oh, such glorious song! Those birds did breed.

The Best Male Parent.

Which is the easiest to breed with, Goldfinch or brown Linnet? For the beginner the Goldfinch, because if in condition when placed with hen Canary he will commence to sing to her—and often, if ready. She calls, and the agreement is soon mutual. The brown Linnet does not do this (unless you have an old experienced muler; then he will be as keen as any cock Canary). You require a cock Canary or a Mule to start the business. After the first nest all will be smooth working. A further important point—many breeders fail here, although possessing a good Linnet—the Linnet requires head room, that is, all the perches must be low, and the nest pan low down, because he does not fly straight on to the hen like the Canary or Goldfinch, but flies up several inches over the calling hen, and then comes down. You can readily perceive therefore that high perches, etc., interfere with success.

Can the hen Canary be urged forward in the matter of eggs? Yes, the writer thinks so decidedly. He believes that the hen has such control over the egg production as to be able to delay or keep back the development. One need hardly state a well-known fact to prove this, viz., if your Canary sits ten days and the eggs are clear, remove the nest and eggs, feed her, and put her back in three days. You can then have a nest built, and get a second clutch a week after. But if the first eggs had been fertile, and the hen a good mother, six weeks would elapse between the first and second batches of eggs.

The writer has proved on many occasions the following plan. Granted your hens are in health and showing signs, the very best method is to place the nest pan in the cage, then put a small bundle of nesting material inside the cage tied tightly together. Let the hen pick it to pieces. Put a second lot in if the first has been used up. This plan seems to bring the hen into condition, and hastens the egg development more than anything else. It has been tried by the writer during 12 years' experience. You Canary breeders, take this tip this season.

Mr. Curley (Paddington) in a fancy dress costume made up of pictures from "Cage Birds."

I feel I have tried your patience long enough, but before closing I should like to say that I firmly believe the above methods applied to Hybrid breeding between two British birds would also be more likely to meet with success than the usual plan of placing two birds together and waiting and hoping for them to come into full breeding condition simultaneously. And to back my opinion, I have pleasure in appending an account of a very strange yet intensely interesting experience. Should there be any doubt in the minds of my readers, it will afford me pleasure to submit the names and addresses of three fanciers—members of a large and well-known ornithological society—who were eye witnesses of the facts stated, on several occasions. The happening may also help to clear up the mystery attached to the non-success of the cock Bullfinch as a fertiliser of eggs when put with the Canary hen.

A Curious Experience.

On April 21, 1910, I noticed a Bullfinch hen in a dealer's window in a large cage swishing her tail, and picking up little bits of material in her beak. I knew that meant readiness. I purchased the bird, also a Greenfinch cock that was with her. After arrival at home, and watching the birds for a few days, I came to the conclusion that the Greenfinch was not inclined in the same direction as the Bullfinch hen; I therefore removed him, and put in a cock Goldfinch, which was in high condition. I did not see signs of any special affection between them, although as fast as I inserted short lengths of fibre between the wires her ladyship came and took some, and holding it in her beak, hopped from perch to perch showing all the signs of wanting to commence domestic duties. Now comes the curious accident. In the room I had a cock Chaffinch with a white beak, and therefore clearly out of all condition for song or breeding. One afternoon having finished my reading, I turned to remove a bath from the door of the Chaffinch's cage—not wishing it to have a bath with not time to dry before dark set in—and in removing the bath the bird escaped through the open door of the cage, and flew on to the front wires of the cage in which the Goldfinch and Bullfinch resided. As soon as the Bullfinch hen saw the Chaffinch she began to call. The cock Goldfinch flew in at once, and pairing took place before my very eyes, and while I was standing in front of their cage not many inches away.

A Happy Thought, and the Result.

You can easily imagine my surprise. That night I commenced to think over the problem. What caused such an effect? The Chaffinch uttered no sound. Like a flash it came to me that the colour of the breast of the Chaffinch is very much like that of the cock Bullfinch. Next day I was soon up and away seeking a cock Bullfinch. I purchased a wild-caught bird for three shillings, and brought it home. My purchase was at night. I kept it down in the cellar until the next morning. After breakfast I went for the bird, and, putting it into a small (all wire cage), I entered my room, and going up to the breeding cage, I held the cage containing the cock Bullfinch on my hand close to the front of the breeding cage. As soon as Mrs. Bullie saw Mr. Bullie and without any preliminaries, she called. The cock Goldfinch again answered, and paired up. Then the hen went for Mr. Goldie, but he had plenty of room, and got out of her reach. I took the cock Bullfinch away, and repeated the operation several times that day. Next day I did the same with a similar result each time.

I was so impressed that I journeyed out of town to a mule breeder of 27 years' standing, and related my story. His reply was, "Well, if it had been any other person I should not have believed it." I pressed him to come to my house. He did, and I told him to sit in the chair—not 3 feet away from the cage—and wait. Then I proceeded to the cellar and brought up the Bullfinch cock. I repeated the method, and he saw exactly the same results. Then I said, "I will put the cock Bullfinch in." I did, and he went for the Goldfinch. But Mr. Goldie got up into the far corner on the wires out of reach. Then there ensued one of the most curious scenes I have ever witnessed. The cock picked up building material, and the hen did likewise. She called, and the Bullfinch set about answering; but oh what a process! He did not pair immediately, but started scraping and bowing, drawing closer and closer. Then with slow deliberation, he mounted the back of the hen Bullie. But before he could proceed further, the cock Goldfinch came at him from the wire, striking him full in the breast, and knocking both birds off the perch, on to the bottom of the cage. We waited, watching with breathless interest. Presently the Bullfinches commenced their antics again. The hen called, and the cock Bullfinch got on the perch on the right side of the hen, but before he could complete his movements, the Goldfinch flew on to the perch the left side of the hen, and pairing took place in the immediate proximity of the cock Bullfinch. (He was too slow, and to my mind his nature and actions are similar not to the barnyard gentleman who acts with promptness, but like the drake and duck, precision and slow movement.)

Is it a Reason?

Now, does this explain the reason of the non-success of cock Bullfinch and Canary hen? The hen ceases to call before the Finch has completed his elaborate preparations. Of course, we looked for Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids, but unfortunately the hen was nearer laying than I anticipated, and one morning I found her dead with broken bits of egg-shell attached. I fear the Goldfinch interfered with her while she was in the act of laying. (I never had a bird so fierce and rank as this Goldfinch was.)

I will now conclude, trusting you may have had patience to wade through this article. I have endeavoured to impart my own knowledge, and I hope the few jottings from my my personal observations may be of some little help to others, and perchance be the means of encouraging old fanciers who have had no success, to take up the most interesting of all hobbies, viz., Mule and Hybrid breeding.

*To Cure a Slipped Back Claw.

Many young birds are spoilt for ever showing through having a slipped back claw. The following has proved successful in several cases: Cut all perches triangular shape, so ^ and after covering them with rubber tubing, place them in cage a little closer and lower than usual, also cover sand tray with plenty of bran, so that it will be soft to the birds' feet. Now get threepennyworth of tincture of arnica (from any chemist's) and paint the affected part every night, and in a short time you will find the slipped claw work to its natural place. Work bird gradually to hard perches again by letting it run for a day or two on hard perches and then back to rubber. Several fanciers round here have cured their birds completely by this method.—R. Booth (119, Kirkstall Street, Ardwick, Manchester).

To Preserve a Partly-used Egg.

Only keeping a few pairs of birds, I find the best way for keeping boiled eggs when not using all in one day is to place the part not wanted in the shell in an egg cup. Stand the egg cup in a saucer with a little clean cold water, then turn a clean tumbler over, and change the water very day. The egg will keep fresh for a week.—Mrs. J. Grover (465, Manor Cottage, Sompling, near Worthing).

To Breed Cock Youngsters.

A tip for readers who like myself like to produce most cocks when Canary breeding. In pairing up always mate 2 year old cock to 1 year old hen, by doing so cock bird is the strongest and is most likely to produce male young.—G. Hall, (59, Walshaw Road, Eten, Bury, Lancs.)

*An Easy Method of Soaking Rape Seed.

A good method of soaking small amounts of rape seed is to buy a penny tea infuser and fill it with seed instead of tea, and place in a cup of water. This is better than covering the seed with water in a jar, as the water is so easily changed without the fear of pouring any seeds away.—Douglas E. Sayce, 5, Toward Terrace, Sunderland.

To Cure a Bird of the Habit of Re using to Perch.

Obtain an old Norwich show cage, and remove the front. Then place in cage, a tin, or zinc tray, about ½in. deep and same size as cage bottom. Half fill the tray with water, and sprinkle over with chaff, taken from the seed boxes. The cage bottom will then present an ordinary appearance. Now replace the front, and fix two perches. About 1 inch over each perch make a seed and water hole. Hang on the vessels also a grit tin within easy reach from the perch. Keep cage level to prevent water from being spilled. Now put in the bird, and in a few days he will be cured of the annoying habit.—W. H. Teat, (Ancester, Grantham.)

*May Hints.

This month is generally a busy one for most fanciers, as it is the month in which birds should be trained for show. Spring migrants, if required for exhibition, should be caged up in a show cage for a few days to train them to the perches. It spoils them if they crouch down on the cage floor, especially if they do this after they have moulted. The perches should not be placed high up, but rather low down, so that they will have to get on them. Mealworms may be given, and any other live food, as this will benefit them. Green food must be given in plenty. Groundsel and dandelion should be gathered when ripe. Lettuces are excellent, and should be procured this month. Let the birds have plenty of fresh air and sunshine, as this is essential to success. Hard boiled egg mixed with a little milk and fine biscuit into a creamy consistency, to which is added a little lettuce chopped up, is excellent for rearing Finches, and they will be strong and healthy.—C. Bruce Tabernor (Myrtle Bank, Tyldesley, near Manchester).

An Accomplished Magpie.

On our front page is reproduced a drawing by Mr. Norman, of the beautiful Magpie, which we saw for the first time at the L.C.B.A. Show, and afterwards at the Palace, and also the portrait of its owner, Mrs. Lawrence. Mrs. Lawrence kindly sends us the following notes:—

"I have had my 'Musical Magpie' some time now, and I believe he is the best bird of his kind living at the present time. He can whistle all sorts of tunes; laughs, imitates all kind of birds, and can play the banjo and violin, at least, he can imitate these instruments so perfectly that people who have heard him find it difficult to realise that the instruments themselves are not being played. I have been offered £5 and more several times for him, but would not part with him; he is so intelligent. He is passionately fond of music, and when I am playing the piano he walks around the whole time accompanying my playing with his own violin and banjo chords. I have, however, never been able to get him to articulate a single understandable word. I hope to show him a lot during the forthcoming season; up to the present he has been shown only twice, taking second at the Horticultural Hall, and third and special at the Crystal Palace. My great ambition is so to improve him that one day he will beat the Choughs, and secure a first. His food consists of "Melox," meal-worms, nuts, and a little raw meat. He is nearly always in good condition, and I attribute this to the quantity of baths he has—always one a day, and in the warm weather two or three.

I may add that I am breeding a few Norwich Canaries this year, and look for all my information to your very excellent paper, CAGE BIRDS, and I always look forward to Friday to get my copy. May your circulation double itself in the forthcoming season, as it richly deserves."

OUR LITERARY COMPETITION.

Result in British Section.

The task of awarding the prize for the best essay among the large number of very excellent contributions sent in the British section has been one of no little difficulty. After close consideration, it has been decided that it shall go to

MR. ROBERT COBAIN,
Crawford's Burn, co. Down.

for a very practical article entitled "My experiences with our two smallest Finches and two favourite Buntings." Mr. Cobain had a close run for his prize from Mr. A. A. Goodall, with an extremely practical and well-written article on "The Blackcap."

The awarding of the four guinea prize for the best article in all sections is now being attended to, and the result will be published next week.

BORDERS ARE BOOMING DOWN SOUTH.

Mr. Herbert Stevens delivers his brief for the bonnie little Border Fancy Canary.

There is no doubt to my mind that the "wee gems" are the cream of the Canary World. Who, that has studied them, would not hold a brief for them? Their fascinating, jaunty and gay carriage, their free, perky poise of head, their pretty, moulded figures with tight silky plumage; richness of natural colour, and pleasant song, are qualities which appeal to the fancier. A great day is coming for this variety, and the time is not far distant when the Southern shows will hold their own in regard to the Border Fancy Canary with the North, both for quantity and quality. One has only to peruse the present-day schedules to see how this pigmy of Canaries is catching on down South.

The management of this variety does not vary much from that of the Yorkshire, except (let us thank our lucky stars) that it has not yet become necessary to colour feed them.

Suitable and Adaptable Cage.

The first point to consider is a suitable room; one facing South, with a fairly good light, should be secured for preference. I find that very suitable cages for this variety are those of box shape with three compartments. These are very useful when breeding the birds, as you can put a pair in each end division, and the middle compartment can be used for the young ones. It is advisable to have a door at each end, as well as in the fronts, as it is more handy for putting in the nest pans, etc. Without the partitions, these cages make very good flights. A drawboard is unnecessary, it being only a harbour for insect pests. If the cages are blacked outside and enamelled sky blue inside, they set the birds off to the best advantage, and this point is well worthy of consideration, as it means better prices when disposing of any of your surplus stock to visitors.

Before commencing in this fancy, one should read up all he can, from an expert's book on the subject, and visit some of the shows, in order to get into his mind's eye the ideal bird. Then he could make a very good start by having some birds sent on approval from reliable breeders and exhibitors—this can easily be accomplished by using the CAGE BIRDS "deposit system"—say, a pair of greens, a pair of clears, and a pair of lightly marked or clear birds bred from variegated parents, a yellow and buff in each pair. With these birds it would not be necessary to introduce fresh blood for some time, which would enable you to obtain a thorough understanding of your stock, and get the birds well in hand, and eventually build up a very good strain.

I recommend this procedure, as I know that many a man who has commenced in the fancy has been "choked off" altogether through paying a good price for birds that have proved not worth their keep.

The staple food should be Spanish canary, with a little German rape added, and an occasional pinch of a good mixed seed. In the summer a little green food, such as dandelion, lettuce, or watercress, and in the winter a small piece of sweet apple, say, three times a week. During the winter, as well as during the moult, linseed should be given with the canary seed.

I do not recommend artificially heated bird rooms, as I am of the opinion that the birds have much more stamina if cold bred.

Commencing to Pair.

The time to commence pairing is about the end of March or beginning of April. If you have the birds ready to put together by the first week in April, that is quite time enough. About the end of February a little egg food given to the birds, and also a small quantity of inga seed (to the hens) twice a week, will help get them into condition for breeding. When the cocks are in full song and the hens are ready to set about domestic duties (which will be seen by their flapping their wings and persistent calling to the cocks) put them in the breeding cages, one in each compartment with a wire slide between. This obviates fighting and plucking, which sometimes leave you with very unsightly birds.

They will soon be feeding one another through the wires, and then is the time to draw aside the slide and let them in together. Supply nesting material and lined nest pan, and after a few days you may expect the first egg. Remove each egg until the evening of the day when the third one is laid; then replace them, well dusting the nest with insect powder.

In from twelve to fourteen days the young should arrive. Do not disturb the birds or nest, but if you give a little egg food the hen will leave the nest, and you will be able to ascertain what good fortune is yours. For the first three days give yolk of egg mixed with cod liver oil food, and after give yolk and white of egg with the cod liver oil food. Gradually increase the cod liver oil food until the proportion is two to one of egg food, and continue these quantities until the young birds are on the hard seed, which will be in from five to six weeks. After the first few days a little green food should be given; this can be continued until the young leave their parents.

When the Young go "Thick."

I recommend cod liver oil food, having been very successful since using it. A small quantity of milk sop sprinkled with maw seed once a week is a very good thing to give the young after they leave their parents, to keep them in condition. It is not necessary to wait until the birds are "thick" before giving them sop. Prevention is better than cure. When the birds enter their first moult is the time they require close attention. Continue giving a little egg food from the time they leave their parents until they complete the moult. If they should go "thick" and you find they have inflammation of the bowels—a disease which kills off many young birds at this time—give them three drops of the following mixture in their drinking water:—Laudanum, Tincture of Rhubarb, and Spirits of Camphor, say ½-oz. each. This not only stops inflammation, but, being unpleasant to the taste, prevents them from drinking too much water, which they are very apt to do at this time.

"Pink! Pink!" Can now be heard everywhere.

Mr. Robert H. Wright, Junr., chats about the cheerful Chaffinch.

The Chaffinch Described.

The Chaffinch is so well known that it hardly needs to be described here, but as there are a goodly number of people, bird faddists included, who do not know a Chaffinch from a Bullfinch, some description will not be out of place. With its blue head, lovely pink breast, brown and green back and dark wings, relieved by dashes of pure white, this bird is a fairly common bird in the country, and its cry of "Pink, Pink" is perhaps well known everywhere. Its beak is conical, like all the birds of this species. It is white in winter, but becomes dark blue in the breeding season and remains so until the moulting season. The colour of the beak, therefore, shows whether or no the bird has begun to sing. The hen Chaffinch cannot be confused with the cock, for she has neither the song nor the pretty plumage which makes the Cock Chaffinch such a favourite cage bird. She is a little smaller, brownish grey on the head, back and upper parts, and dirty white underneath. The beak in summer is greyish brown and in winter whitish grey.

The Chaffinch is one of our seedeating birds, although it certainly destroys a great number of insects when they are to be got. When wild, it lives on seeds and grains, insects, buds, and the tender leaves of plants. Groundsel forms a tit bit and indeed is relished by all the Finches. The Chaffinch is very neat and clean, and should always be provided with a bath.

His Cage and His Food.

The Chaffinch is generally kept in four-cornered cages, which should be at least nine inches high. Chaffinches do not often fly high, but prefer to be able to turn quickly, therefore an ordinary box cage with two spars on a level with each other, suits them best. The show cage for the Chaffinch should measure 12 inches in length, 10 in height and 5 in depth. The front should have a curve at the top of about an inch. The cage looks well if painted black outside and a comparatively dark shade of green inside.

When in captivity, the Chaffinch does well, in the matter of food, on summer rape, although it is advisable to let him choose his favourite seeds, as different individuals have different tastes and habits. A little crushed hemp given him in the Spring has a great effect in inducing him to sing, and a piece of apple or some groundsel in the winter helps the process of digestion. Mealworms, flies, and ants'-eggs are relished, in short, if the bird is fed as nearly as possible as if it were in its native haunts, the more it will please and satisfy its owner.

An "Ideal Home."

The Chaffinch's nest is usually pointed at as the model of nestbuilding. It is a beautiful round structure composed of small twigs and moss, lined with hair and feathers and covered outside with lichens in order to make it less conspicuous. It is placed high up in the fork of a tree and would seldom be found were it not for the noise the parent birds make, when, by chance, anyone ventures too near the little home. The female lays four or five bluish grey eggs covered with copper coloured stripes and spots twice a year. The first brood consists usually of males, the second of females. If it is desired to handrear the young Chaffinches, they should be taken when the tail feathers have begun to grow and fed on bread crumbs and soaked rape seed, not forgetting a drop of water now and again. They are easily kept in health till the moulting season when many of them die.

At the Autumn moult, nearly all Chaffinchs' feathers assume a lighter hue, but birds that are accustomed to cage life, and have been properly fed, take on the brighter Spring colours about October and are therefore ready for showing in all their glory. Great care should be taken of the birds at the moulting season, and they should be given a liberal supply of nourishing food. Variety should be one of the chief features of the bird's diet. Privet berries help to intensify the bird's colours and should be given at this time.

The Chaffinch is liable to suffer from diarrhœa, which may be cured by putting a rusty nail or a little saffron in the bird's drinking water. The bird also sometimes suffers from obstruction of the rump gland. This is relieved by applying an ointment made of unsalted butter and sugar to the affected part. The Chaffinch occasionally becomes dizzy if kept in an all wire cage, but this can be stopped by putting a cover over the top of the cage. The scales on the Chaffinch's legs sometimes require to be removed. This operation requires a great deal of care, and a very sharp knife should be used. If a piece of cuttle-fish bone or a stone is not within the reach of the bird, its beak is apt to grow too long, especially the upper mandible. The point of the beak should then be cut with a sharp pair of scissors, or with a small file to the part where the blood vessels end. If the bird be held up to a strong light, the veins of the beak will be distinctly seen.

A Show Specimen.

A Chaffinch fit for show should be a large bird, of robust shape and well rounded breast. The tail should have a very slight fork; the bird itself should stand well up on the perch. All its colours should be well defined. The forehead should be black, the top of the head and the neck as bright a blue as possible; the upper part of the back nut brown; the lower part olive green; the sides of the face, throat and breast a bright red, getting lighter towards the vent, and the wings should have two prominent wing bars. The eye should be bright and the head well carried. An important feature in a show Chaffinch is steadiness, for which 30 per cent. of the marks are allotted.

Let me conclude by saying that if a Chaffinch is fed as directed and kept in a nice roomy cage, it will prove itself second to none of the Finches both as a songster and a pet.

Some Easily Kept Foreigners.

By B. C. BRIARS (Enfield).

An Interesting and Practical Article on the more moderate priced foreign birds. It was awarded First Prize in the Foreign Bird Section of our recent Essay Competion.

FOR the past five years I have been a member of the ever-increasing body of foreign bird keepers, and I can safely say that no other branch of aviculture has appealed to me to the same extent, and I speak from experience. The facilities for acquisition of foreigners in these days of speedy shipping and cheap freights make it possible for the fancier of modest means to secure a splendid collection at prices which would stagger the Canary purchaser. Imagine the foreign birds you could buy for the price of a good Yorkshire or Crest!

Advice to Purchasers.

With regard to purchasing of "desirable aliens," I think that by far the best way (where possible) is to purchase in person; you then see exactly what you are buying. It is also far cheaper to patronise a good dealer; but even that worthy individual's assertion that he never has a fire on his premises should be taken "cum grano salis." The price of ordinary foreigners is an extremely "elastic quantity," and it is as well to make a study of dealers' "ads" week by week, when some idea of the average sum per pair can be gained. The law of supply, of course, operates strongly. An example of this can be instanced by a purchase of St. Helena Waxbills I made about two years ago, paying 4s. 6d. for a pair; since that time I have only seen them advertised in "C.B." once, and then a London dealer was asking 7s. 6d. A dearth of Cordon Bleus and Lavender Finches may have been noticed lately also.

All birds upon being received from a dealer should be isolated from the stock for about three weeks, and, furthermore, they should be removed from the hearing of any of the opposite sex, should any be about, as they will frequently call and neglect to eat. They should be kept scrupulously clean, and care exercised that they do not drink too much water, a commodity with which they are perhaps scarcely familiar enough at this period. If they prove to be too much "on the drink," a small quantity of Parrish's food placed in the vessel will "choke them off" from an excess as a rule, besides being in itself a valuable tonic. The deaths in newly-acquired specimens, I find, generally occur about the third day, and often the brightest-looking of the consignment are lost; the rougher specimens frequently proving the hardiest after all. The cause is generally obscure, and the bird is found dead, or else every symptom of inflammation of the bowels is manifested. In the first case I believe that the change of scene, absence of the clamour of the vendor's shop, and the numerous companions, causes re-action and resultant apoplexy; while the second is generally in an advanced stage when the bird is bought, and develops with a change of diet; the only thing I have known to afford relief is bread and milk, to which a few drops of good brandy have been added.

An All-Night Vigil.

In connection with disease, two of the loveliest of our foreigners—Lavender Finch and Cordon Bleu—are subject to a curious distemper, which I will endeavour to describe, as I have only too often seen it. The birds seem bright (although occasionally they are seen to be suffering from diarrhœa) when they suddenly collapse and appear to be dead. So realistic is this condition that the present hen Cordon I possess I threw upon the table as dead; but an observer of the apparent "tragedy" procured a small cage and exposed the body to the warmth of a cooking-stove, and, to my utter astonishment, it recovered, and has won numerous prizes during the last two seasons. Similar symptoms were manifested by a quartette of Lavenders, the last batch I have seen advertised. I lost two with the "fit" in the night, so determined to sit up and watch for the attack in the remaining two. I ensconced myself in a cosy chair with the cage upon the table; one of the birds showed the liveliness which generally presages a "turn." Lulled by the silence I slept for three-quarters of an hour, and my bird was dead when I woke! I ultimately saw the second one "go over," and applied the remedy previously enumerated; it recovered, and was described in the "C.B." report of the recent L.C.B.A. show as "a lovely bird." It appears curious that each individual fancier has some particular species of bird which under no circumstances can he get to live for any length of time; at least, so I have noticed. A friend of mine cannot keep a Bengalese for a month, either in a cage or aviary, while I have had eight hen Red-eared Waxbills, and none have lived over six weeks. Two of these came from private aviaries. The situation is the more inexplicable, owing to the fact that the cock bird I have had for 2½ years is one of the best plumaged and hardiest birds in the place!

When all are "Best."

With regard to the best birds to keep, this is largely a matter of individual taste. My own favourites are the Lavender Finch and Cordon Bleu. The first-named is of a delicate lavender tint, lighter towards the underparts, and has a red tail (which it can spread like a fan) and a splash of colour under the body. "Beady" eyes and a charming carriage complete an exquisite picture. The courting attitude of the bird is charming, the body being raised up and down, while a song scarcely audible is uttered. This bird has the Tit-like characteristic of being able to hang to any substance or by one foot only. So tame is my specimen that it will slide down the aviary wires and pull a stranger's hair, and I have seen it attempt to do the same thing to a cat!

The Cordon is another gem. The cock is slightly deeper in colour than his mate, and possesses a red mark under each eye. The general colour is dove, with a blue breast and tail, which seems abnormally long when the size of the bird is considered.

The St. Helena Waxbill.

The St. Helena Waxbill (or Pheasant Finch) is also a desirable bird. It has a dark pencilled plumage and a vivid red beak. The tail is long and broad, hence its name. My own pair have never attempted to breed, but if separated call loudly to one another. They have a curious and strident little "song," sounding exactly like "does it rain, does it rain, does it?" When I purchased this pair it was the last the dealer had, and I found to my vexation that one of the birds had hung its leg in the travelling box, and it could do nothing but bend it over its back. I was particularly anxious to keep this bird, for I did not know its sex, and the dealer had no more. To my joy, after about six months, the bird recovered the use of its limb, although a vet. had given the verdict that it was paralysed! These birds frequently twist and turn their necks, legs and bodies, and flap their wings in eccentric fashion, the uninitiated often imagining them to be in fits.

The Bib Finch is also a well-behaved little creature, and "well worth its seed." They darken greatly with captivity and with age, going from grey to mahogany colour after a cage-moult. The "bib," in the first place is a heart-shaped mark under the chin, but after the moult is not so noticeable; the tail is relatively short, and the beak thick and of a blue tint. A belief is current that these birds frequently die in their first moult, but mine have survived it twice. Though I have seen them pair, they never seem to nest.

The Gorgeous Bishops.

Weavers are attractive birds, the Grenadier being the finest of the commoner varieties. Nearly all these birds have a "colour season," and it is cheaper to purchase when "off," when one is sure of the birds they are buying. My best bird has a black body with a huge ruffle and collar of red, the wing coverts being brownish. The Napoleon Weaver is of a yellow tint, brown on back, and having a black plastron. Out of colour both these birds are sombre-brownish creatures. I note that when the coloured feathers are first being produced, a lot seem to come out, but with the advance of the moult this stops, and the gorgeous dress is speedily assumed. All the Weavers have slender feet and long nails, and these should be occasionally cut, or a bird is likely to be hung up and killed. The Red-billed Weaver is a pretty bird with a red breast when in colour, but it has a mediocre reputation as a peaceable aviary tenant. My own specimen, however, is of irreproachable character. Weavers are also somewhat difficult to steady, while their song consists of most hideous sounds; some species inflating themselves with wind and hissing, while others keep on "chack, wark, chack," nearly the entire day. This capacity for inflation is shared with the Black-headed Mannikin, which "pumps" itself full of air with heaving shoulders, emitting a long-drawn "whee-oo-ee-oo" as a finale. I have always found these birds about as capable of affection as a caterpillar. Their near relative, the White-headed, is a trifle better in this respect, but is "nothing to write home about." The Bronzewing Mannikin is an agreeable contrast, while its "dancing" feats are very diverting. These birds, with me, nearly always die if exposed to any excess of heat, the torrid summer of last year killing two pairs in 48 hours. The symptoms are dishevelled feathers, appearance of a cold, aimless feeding, and unconsciousness preceded by a restless fit.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CANARY SEED SAMPLES (W.G.).—No. 1 is only of moderate size, but is very plump and sweet, well ripened, and of good all-round quality. No. 2 is extremely small, and rather musty, and I should refuse it at any price.

BIRD DYING (Anxious).—It looks very suspiciously like septic fever, and I would strongly advise you to lose no time in getting it verified by a post-mortem report. See P.M. rules, and send the next that dies to Mr. Yates as quickly as possible. Meantime, keep all your cages and appliances scrupulously clean, and disinfect them with carbolic fluid at least once or twice a week. Boil all glass and china vessels for a few minutes to disinfect. You should get Dr. Clarke's handbook on Septic fever, 7d., post free, and the Nutshell booklet on Disinfection, No. 9, 2½d., post free, as it is impossible to go into details here. Introduce no new birds at present. See that all your seeds and foods, especially egg food and hemp, are perfectly sound and sweet. Give a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give a pinch of summer rape, and on the alternate days a little mixed seed, crushed plain biscuit, sponge cake, or bread and milk, ringing the changes on these and, if possible, avoiding soft food rich in egg as much as you can by substituting the above item. Give them green food daily. See they are kept in comfortable and healthy surroundings, and not exposed to cold and draughts or damp. You omit to say whether the birds are mated.

NO FERTILE EGGS (R. Wells).—Are you sure of the sex of the supposed Yorkshire cock, and is he in good active and healthy condition, and in good song? If you are not certain try to get the sex verified by some experienced fancier. In any case you are right in separating him, and if the hen is getting keen on nesting again try to get a smart, vigorous young cock in "fierce" song and mate with her. This will be better than risking the loss of another month's time. Meantime treat the cock removed the same as advised to "Novice" in last issue, but add also a sprinkling of mustard seed to the seed mixture named therein, and also add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for three days at the beginning of treatment.

WHAT IS A FOUR-POINTED BIRD (C.B.H.).—A four-pointed bird is one possessing four technical "marks." These marks are only recognised in six definite positions: i.e., around each eye; the inner secondaries, and the outer sides of tail. If four of these points are marked, and no other coloured plumage exists, the bird is a four-pointed one. If both sides of the body have similar markings it will be an even marked four-pointed bird, otherwise, an un-even marked one. In the Yorkshire, even if both sides of the body are marked similarly, if there is any other coloured plumage it would still be relegated to the un-even marked class. In other breeds it would make a lightly or heavily variegated according to the amount of dark plumage shown. Head marks would have same effect as above. For a full explanation of the technicalities concerning marks and ticks see Parts xiv. and xv. of "Our Canaries."

PANTING HARD (League Member).—See that bird is not exposed to any cold draught and keep in a fairly warm, though not overheated, and equable place. Add to the general diet a piece of bread, the size of a hazel nut, sopped in cold milk, drained and sprinkled with soft sugar. If mealworms are available, and bird will not eat them when offered whole, chop up one or two and place on the bread each time. Give this every second day until better, and on the alternate days a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed. Get a chemist to mix you two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and one drachm each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and eight grains of iodide of potassium, and give 15 drops of this mixture in the drinking water two days in every three until better. Withold baths for the present.

HANGING FIRE (H. J. Latham).—You may very probably have helped to keep them backward by moving them about to different cages after they were mated. Taken altogether a well made box type of cage is not easy to beat, and you should be quite sure the open wire cage to which you have transferred the birds is quite free from cold cutting draughts at all times. You can do but little to get the birds forwarder now. Feed them the same as advised to "Novice" for Slow Starter in last issue, but add two or three mealworms, finely chopped, to the egg food each time, and substitute a sprinkling of mustard seed for the linseed in the seed mixture. You may give a pinch of sulphate of soda in the water for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel for four days. Beyond this you can only wait patiently for the prompting of nature to hurry them up.

PECULIAR EYE TROUBLE (A Constant Reader, W.B.T.).—Judging from the meagre details you give it seems to be something out of the ordinary that is affecting your birds. Is there any swelling, or discharge from the eye before it becomes blind? Is it the same side that is affected in all cases? Have you been using carbolic fluid or other disinfectants too liberally about the cages, especially under the perches, and have the insides of the cages been recently whitewashed with quicklime? The answers to these questions might throw some light on the matter. I am strongly inclined to think the cause is mechanical, and to be found in some such direction as here indicated. I suppose there are no jagged ends of wire about the seed and water holes of cages. Look well into these things and if you discover no cause, write again at once if another becomes affected and describe appearance of eye from the beginning as well as you can. Meantime keep cages and perches as clean as possible, bathe eye with lukewarm solution of boracic acid—small teaspoonful of acid in saucerful of warm water—and anoint bare place near eye with boracic ointment twice a week.

BIRDS MOULTING (W. T. Greenham).—You do not say whether the birds moulted last autumn, nor if they are the same pair as you bred with last year. The probability is, if they moulted in the autumn, that they have been exposed to serious fluctuations of heat and cold, or to cold draughts or damp. See that these things are avoided now. Keep the birds on the warm side, and in an equable temperature. Give a small teaspoonful of egg food every second day, and twice a week for a fortnight, slightly dusting it with flowers of sulphur. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw and half a teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, and black rape. Give a little dandelion or spray of chickweed daily, and a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Give the tonic advised to "H. J. Latham" in the water for a fortnight. It is quite possible the birds may finish the moult in time to get one, or perhaps, two broods from them, but you must not mate them together until they have quite got over the effect of moulting. You ought to have had this year's CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, wherein you would have seen how to treat these birds without loss of time.

VARIOUS (R.H.E.).—(1) For the sake of the little extra length, which is really very little, I think you might well refrain from tailing your young birds. If you insist upon doing it, the best time is at the commencement of the first moult, as the feathers are then naturally somewhat loose. Hold the bird in left hand with thumb and forefinger supporting base of tail. Take one feather at a time on each outer side alternately, and with a steady outward pull slightly inclined towards centre of tail, extract it. Take out four feathers at each operation at intervals of three or four days, which will necessitate three operations, and is much better than taking all out at once as is sometimes done. (2) No. the true pink-eye is not to be found among green-marked birds. But in the case of green-marked bred from cinnamons or cinnamon-marked, the eyes will be dark or green rather than black, as in birds with no cinnamon blood in them. The Yorkshires of today are, so to speak, full of cinnamon blood. (3) It may not be necessary for a judge at any show to handle every cage in judging Yorkshires or Borders. In every class certain specimens may obviously stand out in size, shape, markings, and general typical qualities, as the probable prize-winners, that it is only really necessary to go into minutiæ of these competitors to properly fix the cards. It would be mere waste of time to go into all these details with a large number of birds which had obviously no running chance of reaching the cards. (4) Giving too much dandelion is very apt to upset the normal course of egg-laying and production in a certain type of hen. With strong, lusty, virile hens its effect may not be noticeable, but with weakly hens in any degree predisposed to egg-binding, it is the finest abortive you could use, and I can guarantee you infinite trouble from egg-binding in such circumstances. I speak from knowledge gained in extensive experiments in this matter. (5) These birds are probably late bred, and consequently still rather young. They only need patience. Treat as advised to "Novice" in last issue. The young will probably be clear pink-eyed, cinnamon-ticked, with perhaps an occasional cinnamon-marked.

WEED AND SEED (Novice, Rochdale).—(1) The weed sent is the mouse-ear chickweed. The seed and flower heads at all stages are excellent for Canaries. To use for green food the common chickweed is better than this. It grows more bushy and straggling, is a lighter green, not so downy on the leaves and stem, and flowers at nearly all the leaf joints, instead of throwing up flower stems from the bottom, as the mouse-ear. The foliage is also more succulent. (2) No seed reached me in envelope. Properly ripened seed of dandelion is, however, an excellent tit-bit, and refresher for Canaries at any season.

BREEDING SINGERS (Novice).—As your object is song pure and simple, you could not do better than take up breeding Rollers. There is nothing else quite so good for singing powers apart from other fancy points. I would strongly advise you, however, not to start with two or three different sorts. Adhere to one breed, and to one type of song—either a strain excelling in long, deep, hollow rolls, or one with a more varied and changeful repertoire. There is plenty of room and scope in either branch to perfect and improve the song by assiduous and careful training. It is certainly very late now to make a start from the beginning, and unless you could be sure of obtaining untried birds, or mated pairs which had not already been sufficiently worked, you would be well advised to wait a few weeks longer and obtain a stock of young hens, and a little later, say, about December, one or two well-trained cocks of a similar strain. You omit to say what size your cages are, or if double or single breeders. Two cocks and four hens would be a fair number to start with. You should get one or two of our handbooks or "Our Canaries," and fill up the interval during the next few weeks in reading up the subject, and then be well-equipped for a start next year. I shall be only too pleased to assist you by explaining, or advising on, any particular point you desire to know more about.

IS IT UNUSUAL? (C. Beak).—Yes, very. That is, it would be very unusual for a hen to go to nest and lay eight eggs in five days, including two eggs on each of three successive days, all perfect and well shelled. The true explanation, I am afraid, is that the supposed "pair" are two hens, who produced their clutch jointly. Does the supposed cock sing, or did he behave like a cock when the hen was nesting? If my surmise is correct, the eggs will, of course, all prove unfertile. If I am wrong, there is no reason why all of them should not prove fertile, and you should have given the three you took away to other hens with small clutches to incubate.

HEN WON'T FEED YOUNG (G. H. Brown).—The only really practical and certain way of dealing with a hen of this type is to have a common good feeding hen available, and transfer the young to her to be hatched and reared. If this is not feasible, then you can only try to rouse her to a sense of duty by varying the food as much as possible and making it appetising and at the same time wholesome and pure. When the next young are hatched, add a pinch of sulphate of soda to the drinking water for one-half of each day for a few days, and offer a bath in which a little common salt has been dissolved. Give egg food in small quantities and freshly prepared two or three times daily. On the second day begin to give a little crisp young lettuce, chickweed, or flowering tips of groundsel in quite small quantities at a time, and freshly gathered three or four times a day. If she shows signs of flagging offer a little bread and milk sprinkled with maw—a little maw may also be sprinkled on the egg food—and give a teaspoonful of cracked hemp, and ditto of soaked rape seed. As long as she feeds moderately well, do not interfere with her, but if she stops, or nearly so, you may keep the young going by hand-feeding, giving them a crop-ful of food morning, noon and evening, and allowing the hen to continue brooding them to keep them warm. After a few days she may resume her duties and go on satisfactorily. Try moving the cock when she commences to sit next time, leaving her to hatch and rear the young by herself.

A POOR BEGINNING (Collier).—You gave yourself a poor chance of success when you mated up a hen which was obviously suffering from a cold. You cannot expect this hen to do her duty by offspring properly. Separate her, and keep her in an equable and well ventilated place, quite free from draught, and give her the medicine advised to "League Member" for a fortnight or so. If she quite recovers, you may be able to mate her time enough to get one brood from her. I should say the room you describe is quite unsuitable for your hobby, if the window opens and is the only means of ventilation. The cages are much too near the window. For hens not feeding young see reply to "G. H. Brown." You might try leaving the cock with the 1911 hen this time whilst sitting, provided he does not interfere mischievously with the nest, nor molest her whilst sitting. But if you have to remove him for any of these causes do not put him back as soon as the young are hatched. Wait until hen is ready to begin nesting again. In exchanging eggs to foster-parents you may either make the exchange when putting the hens to sit, or after they have been sitting a few days, or even longer, or you may allow each hen to hatch out her own eggs, and later on exchange the young if the necessity arises. It does not matter at all if there is a discrepancy between the number of eggs or young which are exchanged. Yes, a bird that was not colour-fed in its first season can be quite successfully colour-fed in its second, or any succeeding season. See Mr. Weston's replies re French Linnet, which is probably a Redpoll.

MOVING SITTING HEN (Hopeful).—This may be quite easily accomplished, and as the hens will have been sitting a full week, and will, in consequence, be thoroughly broody, she will probably take no notice whatever of the change. Make ready the place to which cage is to be moved, then in the afternoon (so as to have the removal completed just before time of birds settling down to roost for the night) take the cage altogether, place it on a sheet of brown paper or canvas wrapper of sufficient size, and pack it up closely like a parcel. Tie round with string to keep secure, and transport quickly and quietly to its new quarters. There unpack and place in position, and leave birds as quiet as possible for the night. Avoid jolting and jarring as much as possible, and do not be afraid to pack cage closely, so that birds will be practically in darkness during the journey. A canvas wrapper would be preferable to paper, for in packing there would be so much less noise.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. J. Fulljames in the regrettable absence through illness of Mr. G. E. Weston.

ROBIN'S NEST IN KENNEL (L. Martin).—It would be by far the safer plan to remove the dogs if the nesting has not gone far, but if the hen has laid while the dogs have been using the kennel, she would most likely hatch and rear her young even if the dogs remained there.

TO FEED A BRAMBLEFINCH (A. Goodall).—Make a mixture as follows: Canary, four parts; teazle, two; rape, one; hemp, one; this will answer as a "stock food." Give at times, not all at once, a little white sunflower, linseed, maw seed, and wild seed mixture. A mealworm occasionally may be liked, and will be beneficial. You might also offer a little of a good "insectile" mixture. Any kind of colour giving berries in season—blackberries, privet, elder, etc., and some live grubs or insects, if the bird will take them.

"MOONS" ON A GOLDFINCH (Yorkshires).—A Goldfinch which is not well "mooned" would be handicapped in keen competition. The definition and size of these markings might make all the difference in turning the scale. Your Yorkshire query has been sent to Mr. St. John, and will be replied to next week. You should not write different queries on the same sheet of paper.

"TOM-TITS" (Mikado).—It is not quite clear from your query whether you require advice in the keeping of "Tom-tits" (by which I presume the Great or Ox eye Tit is meant), or on providing cut up mealworms, egg and biscuit, together with the prepared food you mention for the sitting Thrush. I think this latter idea is an excellent one, and should tend to decrease your troubles in the subsequent rearing of the young birds.

A TREE-SPARROW MATTER (Lover of British).—The Tree-Sparrow is a granivorous bird, and will do quite well upon the seeds given to Finches generally. That your treatment is correct is proved by the condition in which you say the bird now is. You might offer it, especially now in the springtime, some small grubs or insects; if it will take these it will be all the better. There would seem no reason why you should not try it with a Canary, excepting that the progeny, if any, would have no value except for their rarity. I think the cross has never been produced, possibly it has never been tried. Tree Sparrows do not often meet each other in competition on the show bench, and "show points" are not important. So long as the bird is steady, in good feather, and with good throat and face markings, there would be not much else to trouble about.

GOLDFINCH-LINNET HYBRID (H.S.).—Certainly.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FOOD FOR GOLDFINCH (A.J.S.).—A liberal supply of good sound hemp would probably assist your Goldie in coming into condition. Give a mixture of hemp, teazle (or thistle), linseed, and canary seed, about equal parts of each. Some good wild seed mixture should also be offered, with young dandelion leaves or other fresh green stuff. It might answer to part the birds for a little while, keeping them in sight of each other, and if you see the Finch anxious to meet the hen's call, then reintroduce them. Glad to hear you like our paper.

GREEN-FOOD FOR BLACKBIRD (Hy. Phillips).—You must not depend upon green-food to bring a Blackbird into song. The food you mention is all right as a stock-food, and you may mix some chopped dandelion, lettuce, or other green stuff with it, but it would be better for some extra "ants' eggs" of good quality. Your bird must also have live food of some sort—snails, worms, grubs, of any kind, flies, spiders, mealworms, or any creeping thing you can find for him. He should not be moulting now; probably you have not been feeding him sufficiently well. Try an improvement in the food, and you will soon see an improvement in your bird.

GOLDFINCH UNWILLING (F.B.).—Separate the bird from the hen Canary with which you say he will not pair, and try him with the one which he "answers." Birds often refuse to mate when caged together, especially if paired up too early, and yet take a fancy to one they cannot reach.

YELLOWHAMMER WITH FITS (A.L.).—Your feeding seems to be quite correct; you might try a little rape and linseed in addition to the canary seed, and give plenty of green stuff, young dandelion leaves, lettuce, groundsel, etc. Give twice a week in the drinking water as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a sixpence, plain water on other days. An occasional dose of this simple medicine is good for all birds.

THE SEXES OF GREENFINCHES (O.C.S., Salford).—There should be no mistaking the sex of a Greenfinch. The greens and yellows of the male are bright and distinct, while the female is dull in these colours; in fact, she has very little yellow in her plumage at all, and her general body colour is brownish green rather than green. Your birds may very likely be both hens.

(Some enquiries unavoidably held over.)

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

GREY PARROT (M.D.).—I am under the impression I replied to this query last week, but it may have been to another querist. Keep this bird well occupied, supply rotten wood, empty cotton reels, etc., for it to chew up and play with; talk to it, and whenever you see it pecking at its feathers, interrupt it; but do this without scaring it. Confine its diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, with water for drinking and bathing. If you have been giving boiled maize (this must be prepared fresh daily), continue to do so for a time, and dust this with flowers of sulphur just before supplying to the bird. Our Nutshell, the "Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would tell you all about food and general treatment. Every fourth day for a month put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intervening days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the water. Give it all the light and air possible, but you must not subject it to draught. The feather picking, which appears to have arisen from the involuntary bath in benzoline, must be checked, or it will become a vice and incurable—treat it as above, keep the bird in your midst, where it will have plenty to attract it and hold its attention. Report progress a month hence.

AILING BLUE-FRONT (W. G. K.).—A soft food diet for any lengthy period will be detrimental to its health; at the same time you cannot let it starve, but resume the ordinary diet as given in this paper as early as possible. Get from your chemist some honey and borax, and after cleansing out the mouth, put a little in once or twice daily. But the swelling should be examined by some competent individual (local veterinary), as if it contains pus, the lance should be used, and all foul humour cleansed away. Give at once one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the ordinary supply of drinking water, and after a three-days' interval, repeat the dose, and then continue it at such intervals as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving quite freely, without scouring the bird. On some of the intervening days half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates will act as a tonic. However, unless the swelling is properly treated, as indicated above, you will lose the bird. The honey and borax will keep the mouth clean, and can be used till all evidence of the trouble has passed.

BIRDS FOR OUTDOOR AVIARY (C. J.).—With all such queries you should include county, as this is a great help. I take it the house is entirely enclosed, save for the door by which birds enter, and also that it is well lighted: unless the house is well lighted the birds will not use it. Do not furnish with straight, stiff perches; use only natural branches. You could keep the following: One pair of each, and your aviary will accommodate about 15 to 20 pairs for breeding purposes: Zebra Finches, Silverbills, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, any of the foreign Siskins obtainable, Bib Finches, Red-crested Cardinals, Combassous, Cuban Finches, Ribbon Finch, Red-headed Finch, Spice Finch, Striated Finch, Red-billed, Napoleon and Madagascar Weavers, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey St. Helena, Golden-breasted and Crimson-winged Waxbills, with a pair each of Diamond Doves, and Chinese Painted Quails would make a pleasing and varied series—all seed-eaters. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you as to general treatment.

AFRICAN GREY PARROT (N. B.).—I do not think you need be anxious over the colour of the bases of the feathers of this bird, there is a good deal of variation among species, and a bird with the bases of its feathers very dark would not be after all very abnormal. Of course, the depth of colour would be very apparent after spraying. If the bird is in health, then the state of the plumage need not trouble you, but if the bird goes out of condition, pull out a feather and send it me at once with the fullest details of its condition, and your treatment that you can give; but you need not trouble over the plumage colour so long as the bird keeps fit, for if the colour is the result of something wrong, this will soon be apparent in some form or another.

SINGING FINCHES NOT SINGING (Rita).—If Rita will send me a stamped addressed envelope I will help her to select a cock bird. As I read her letter, what she wants is a good singing bird, and that a pair is not essential for her purpose. A Grey-necked Serin, or an Alario Finch are both fine songsters, and so are Grey and Green Singing Finches, if you get one of the right sort, but the power of song varies much in individuals of all species of birds. In the outdoor aviary my Serins (Singing Finches) and near allies are singing finely, but they are not for sale. Not singing rather points to two hens; again, their behaviour is that of a pair! If two hens, an Alario Finch would agree with them, but later one hen would have to be removed BUDGERIGARS AND HOW MANY? (S.J.H.).—(1) Four pairs, say two pairs of each colour, and put up eight husks or small barrels. (2) If the colour varieties crossed the result would be 95 per cent. of pure green birds, only occasional odd yellows would appear. (3) A bath must be supplied, a shallow dish, not more than one inch deep—a photographic developing dish makes a good one. Budgerigars bathe in a state of nature by rolling about in the wet grass; give them a turf occasionally, and wet it from the nose of a water-can, and you will see them enjoy a natural bath (4) The holes are best at the top, but personally I prefer small barrels though they cost nearly three times as much. Our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

MOUSTACHE PARRAKEETS (M.F.M.).—Give a seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet, one pint oats and half a pint each of hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts (shelled for preference), plain biscuit, or crust of household bread. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. If it has been accustomed to water, leave this regularly in the cage, if not, let it satisfy its thirst two or three times daily, and about a month hence you can leave it in the cage altogether. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. When adult, your birds will have black moustachial streaks and frontal band.

AVIARY FOR BUDGERIGARS (Ed. Scancs).—The aviary will answer admirably for say two pairs of Budgerigars, and one pair each Cockatiels and Blue-wing Lovebirds, all of which as a rule agree well together. I should certainly make the addition as shown by the dotted lines on your plan. Budgerigars take their bath by rolling in wet grass and herbage. Do not put in any cock, the boarding is better kept smooth; it is much easier to be kept clean so. Put up 6 coconut husks, and a couple of small barrels for nesting appliances, and line the back and ends with twiggy branches for perching accommodation. Budgerigars and Cockatiels require no nesting material. For Bluewings supply a living branch, and they will take what leaves and bark they require.

LOVEBIRDS OR PARRAKEETS (H.J.E.).—These birds are quite a puzzle to me, and so long as they are doing well you had better go on as you are. All the items you name can be given with safety. I am inclined to advise moistening the sponge cake with water containing a little Byno-phosphates, and not give milk at all. Could you send me a rough coloured diagram of the bird with a few notes? I think I could then name it for you? Has it moulted in your possession, if not, the colour areas may be materially changed after the moult.

AN AILING GREY PARROT (D.W.).—In the first place you must thoroughly win this bird's confidence, and accustom it to take a little exercise outside the cage. This will do great things for it, more than any drugs. Your diet is all right, save for the custard and rice pudding, both of which I should omit. So long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day. Give two doses of bromide of potassium, with a day between each dose—dissolve three grains of the bromide in a little syrup, and after all fluid has been drained away from the boiled maize, pour the bromide syrup over it, and as soon as it has soaked in, supply to the bird. Repeat the bromide preparation after each attack, or if there are any signs of the attack coming on, a prompt dose of the bromide may prevent it. However, I repeat, win its confidence, and induce it to take exercise, which will be better than all the drugs. The above treatment, however, should give relief and assist towards a cure. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our manager, would tell you all about food and general treatment.

AN AILING GREY PARROT (G. Nelson).—You are not entitled to a reply by post (see rules), but as the case is rather urgent I am sending one. In addition to the maize, give the following seed mixture: One quart each canary seed and white millet, one pint oats, half a pint each hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also ripe fruit, shelled nuts, plain biscuit; keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. Offer it three times daily, chilled water containing Byno-phosphates, let it satisfy its thirst on each occasion (half a teaspoonful of the phosphates to tablespoonful of water); once a week in lieu of the phosphates put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the same quantity of water. After about a fortnight the water can be left continually in the cage. The diet has not been varied enough, and the bird has not eaten sufficient to keep up its strength. Looks very much as if it had been gradually wasting away, and I am doubtful if you can save the bird at this stage. Still, we must hope for the best. It can have household bread, not new, and plain biscuit quite freely. Keep it warm, yet where it will get light and air without draught. If you get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, it will give you fullest details as to how to treat and feed. Carry out above treatment and report progress about a fortnight hence. But if it has another "fit" (?) write again at once, giving fullest details you can.

BUDGERIGARS (Unlucky).—Budgerigars are not impossible breeders in a cage, but of late years they are losing the character they once had of never falling out, and there is a great deal of individualism among them. As the two pairs will not agree in their present space, try only one pair in the cage—that is, if you have one hen with a brown cere and one cock with bright blue cere, and put and keep the other pair out of sight. If you have none in breeding condition—that is, cock with bright blue cere, hen with brown cere, then leave them together till they are, fight or no fight. As soon as they are in breeding condition, if they still disagree, put each pair in a separate cage, and you should certainly have young before the season is over. The season lasts till October, sometimes longer. "Never say die."

BIRDS FOR OUTHOUSE AVIARY (F. E. Edwards)).—It will be necessary to see that the atmosphere of the outhouse is not unduly moist. You must regulate this by proper ventilation, yet a draught must not pass through the cage, nor yet the sun be allowed to shine directly into it for long periods. You can have half a dozen pairs (the cage would have been much more useful had it been a foot higher), and the following would answer well till you have more experience: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Bronze Mannikins, Avadavats, Golden-breasted Waxbills and Silverbills. Use only twiggy branches for perches, and put up an assorted dozen of nest boxes, coconut shell nests and husks, and some of them should breed. A staple mixture of canary and white millet seed, supplemented with millet sprays, greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you greatly.

FEATHER PULLING, ETC. (J.T.N.).—I am glad to note there is an improvement, as this promises ultimate cure. You must persevere with the treatment, and continue to spray, weekly at least, with quassia solution. Also keep it well occupied and entertained; give it a branch of some non-splintery wood to cut to pieces and chew up, also cotton reels, etc., to play with. Talking to it, and, if it is tame enough, letting it take exercise outside its cage, are both important helps towards recovery. Report progress a month hence with full details, and I will try and help further if necessary. Persistence counts for a great deal in such cases.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. Nolan.—Death arose from acute inflammation of the bowels, with apoplexy of the spleen, originating, I should say, in poisoning by ptomaine, otherwise poisonous products generated in the food. The bird was otherwise in excellent condition.

B.E.J., Devonport.—Septic fever.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Southern Yorkshire C.C. (J. W. Rennie).—This is not a matter we care to give any publicity to.

Result of League Prizes (Constant Reader).—This will be announced in about a fortnight's time. Kindly supply your name and address.

D. McArthur.—Many thanks for kind recommendation, and marked newspaper received.

H. C. Brookes, D. McArthur.—Kindly see announcement in another column this week.

H. Rees.—See announcement in another column. We are afraid it would be impracticable to do as you suggest re "Illustrated Ideas." We have room only for two or three of these each week, and all those used are paid for. A very large number are in hand, and most will appear in due course.

G. H. Thomas (and several others).—Queries which have to be sent to our specialists for reply cannot possibly be answered in the next issue after receipt unless they are to hand by first post Monday morning. Please see rule to this effect.

J. A. Dent.—We are sorry to hear of your misfortune, but it would appear that you have no redress, having written to express your approval of the birds. Please note that matter intended for publication must be written on one side the paper only.

Tapper and Cundy.—Please note latter part of answer to J. A. Dent.

W. Hainsworth.—The address of the makers of "Phosto" is The Phosto Co., Ensworth, Hants. You will find an advt. of the preparation in this week's issue. We have sent the Canary part of your query to our specialist, Mr. Claude St. John, who will advise you next week.

In Aid of a Distressing Case.

Some weeks ago, I called attention to the sad misfortune which had befallen one of our members, Mr. Couchman, of Swanley Village. Besides losing his furniture in a fire, Mr. Couchman suffered the infinitely greater loss of his only child, who was burned to death. Mrs. Couchman received serious injuries at the same time. I am now glad to hear from our member, Mr. Peck, who agreed to receive and properly administer any subscriptions that our fellow members would send in aid of this distressing case, that he has received a welcome donation from our member, Mr. Foxen, of Bromley.

A Welcome Visit.

I have had the great pleasure this week of receiving a visit from a Nottingham member, Mr. Cottingham, who was only in London for a few hours, but found time to call upon me. Mr. Cottingham was accompanied by his good wife, who, he says, sees well to it that the Humanitarian extremists shall have no chance of complaining as to the manner in which birds are kept in his shop. Mr. Cottingham says he is in hopes of winning our £5 special for the best kept bird shop in the kingdom, and was very curious as to the "mysterious visitor," as he called him, who is keeping his eyes open during his visits to all the principal towns in the country. I was, of course, not able to satisfy Mr. Cottingham's curiosity. I could only assure him that the gentleman in question is a person of very great experience in birdy matters, and his decision at the proper time will be given upon what he has seen with his own eyes during the year.

Renewal Subscriptions.

The response to my note of last week has been very gratifying, many members sending the amount of their renewal subscription some time in advance of its actually falling due. In all such cases, as explained last week, the new receipt will be dated for the proper time, so that there is no reason for members to wait until the last day before sending in their shilling for renewal, and the receipt of the amount will save much time.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND BADGES.

The SUBSCRIPTIONS to CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE are as under:—

PATRONS.—A donation in one sum, or an annual subscription of one guinea or more.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.—Half-a-guinea, or more, annually.

ORDINARY MEMBERS.—One shilling annually.

JUNIOR MEMBERS (under fourteen years of age at the date of joining).—Sixpence annually.

BADGES mounted in Rolled Gold: (1) as a brooch for ladies or for coat lapel or cycling cap, (2) as a pendant for watch-chain; one shilling each.

ORDINARY BADGES. (1) as a button for coat lapel, (2) as a brooch for ladies, or for cycling cap, (3) as a pendant for watch-chain, sixpence each.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

A copy of CAGE BIRDS, the official organ of the LEAGUE, is forwarded to patrons weekly, post free.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to notepaper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

Notepaper with the badge and motto of the LEAGUE in the top left-hand corner and the address of any member at the top right-hand, may be had at the following prices:

100 Sheets, Two shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

A "Moving" Experience.

Sir,—About a fortnight ago a friend of mine, who is a Canary fancier, had to move his residence from Leicestershire to Northumberland at an awkward time, as two pairs of his pairs were getting on with their business. One hen hatched out four young the morning he was compelled to move them another hen was sitting on four eggs. After travelling all day by train, and then three miles afterwards in a heavy cart, he at last got them to their new destination, but was sorry to find on his arrival that the four newly-hatched birds were dead. The hen with the four eggs sat well throughout the journey, and next morning hatched out three young ones out of the four eggs. One died when it was two days old, but the other two, which I saw myself a few days ago, are still doing very well. I consider it a very uncommon occurrence after such a long and noisy journey, to find that one hen was still sitting comfortably through it all. Trusting this will interest some of your many readers.

A. E. Jeffries.

The Long-Eared Owl.

Sir,—The Long-eared Owl is the largest of the Owls, and is not so common as the others, particularly the Little Owl, which is very numerous about this part (Ramsey). It is very rare that its nest is found except in large woods, which are as a rule preserved for game. Until about five or six years ago, I generally managed to get a nest of young, which I brought up by hand. Now that Owls and other large birds are being catered for and shown at our large shows, these birds are well worth keeping, for they are very interesting pets if hand-reared. Of course, I should never advise anyone to keep or exhibit a caught one, for he would, from my experience, take some taming. I tried to tame two of these birds once, and gave it up in disgust. These and the other Owls are generally the first birds to nest; they build in old nests of Rooks, Magpies, etc., in some tall tree. The young can be raised on nearly any kind of meat—mice, pieces of rats, beetles, boiled lights (also raw), etc. If they are kept in cages, they must have a very large cage; I used to keep mine in a large bacon-box with wire in front. They must have plenty of sawdust at the bottom of cage, as they are very dirty, and if not well and often cleaned out soon become quite offensive. The hen is generally the larger bird, and is darker in the ground colour of the plumage, and more profusely marked on the breast and abdomen than the cock—the marks are broader and more conspicuous. I dislike this Owl. Nimrod.

The Closed Ring Question.

Sir,—The discussion re the use of closed rings for Canaries appearing in Cage Birds is very interesting and instructive. I have read both sides of it, and the evidence, in my opinion, favours the use of closed rings. However, I would not dream of disqualifying any fancier whose birds were not rung, neither do I think it fair for the anti-ring fanciers to coerce fanciers who ring their birds. We should be left a free hand. From what I have been able to gather from the discussions, the reasons against their use are:—(1) that the mothers will drag the young from their nests; (2) it is too risky and delicate a task for working men with coarse hands to manage. These are the disadvantages, but what about the benefits? In reply to the first charge, I may say I have had hens drag young from the nest and pick their toes and beaks off years before I ever saw closed rings. To the second charge, the first fancier I saw perform the alleged difficult task had hands as large as a fire shovel, and as coarse as a file. The easy manner in which he accomplished it stimulated my courage, and after seeing how he had kept a record of his breeding by the rings I determined I would ring my birds, even at the risk of being disqualified at shows. There are many benefits to be derived from the use of rings. It is the only way of keeping a true record of breeding, whereby any person can tell how the birds are bred as well as the breeder himself. It is also a safeguard for telling the age, which is worth a great deal. Personally, I always buy birds by their face value now, but there are some people, if they are told a yarn about a bird's pedigree, will give much larger prices than the bird is worth. If the bird's pedigree was always as represented, it would be all right; but the only place it does exist is in the deluded purchaser's brain. It would stop the lending and borrowing of birds for club shows, the receiving of birds on a week's approval, showing them at small shows, and then returning them as too dear; in fact, it would rout out various forms of fraud and cheating and purify the Fancy by at least 25 per cent. Some are against the cost, but let me tell, especially the novice, that their absence will cost them very much more.

"They are White and Very Nice."

Sir,—The White Canary, when first exhibited, was received in various quarters with such derision that it certainly looked as if the bird was going to be swiftly and unceremoniously snowed under. I remember the year it made its debut at the Crystal Palace. It got a very mixed reception. The A.O.V. folk pelted it with all the wordy brickbats they could command. Poor Dobson, who judged, came in for a share of the missiles, and of chaff there was a perfect fusillade. I myself came in for a share of the chaff in the following year. But the public came to see the bird. The White Canary was the one object enquired for. I did not mind the critics saying it was in its wrong class. I was on solid ground, and the bird was rightly classed, for if it was a White Yorkshire there was no class for it but A.O.V. But I have been greatly amused since at the "volte face" performed by some of the critics and their complete change of front can be best summed up in the words of one of the leaders of the "opposition," uttered when the blood was cool at the 1912 show: "Well, say what you like, they are white, and they are nice"—a plain proof that hasty prejudice had prevented him from giving himself time to thoroughly examine the bird hitherto. It is difficult now to understand how people with experience could have taken three years to learn that the White Canary was really white and not a washed-out buff. This is proved by the fact that the actual bird which the critics this year confessed was white was last year pronounced a cast-off, washed-out buff Yorkshire! Deary me! But one is sometimes tempted to think that it is a weakness in some natures to watch the way the tide flows, and row accordingly. G. G.

Egg-eating and Other Matters.

Sir,—I notice in Cage Birds of this week the report of a Waxbill having been found. I lost one out of my bird room four months ago. It was one of the same kind as that mentioned, but it may not be the same bird. I would like to say a few words about birds eating their eggs. I have a Yellow Norwich hen now feeding four young out of five eggs, who laid the following clutches in 1911:—Started with 2; 5; 7; 6; 8; 6; 2—39 eggs in all. Also another hen who has hatched four out of five eggs. I had four young birds out of other nests whose hens would not feed, so I put them under this hen, and she brought them all up; but I had to make a special nest box for them when ten days old. I had a hen who ate her own eggs. I failed to cure her of the habit, although I tried the plan of filling eggs with mustard. I should be obliged if any reader could suggest another cure. I have a Goldfinch cock who feeds the hen, sits on the eggs when the hen is off, and feeds the young when hatched. I have never had any trouble with him pricking the eggs, although he stays with the hen all the breeding time. Hoping this may interest some of my fellow-fanciers. Wishing Cage Birds every success. A. Nelson.

Wanted! Goldfinches Eggs for Hatching under American Canaries.

Sir,—I am desirous of getting, if possible, two or three nests of eggs of Goldfinches to put under Canaries, and try if possible to get some cage bred Finches. We have had Finches breed in cages here, but the work is mighty slow, so I thought perhaps if we could get some eggs and have Canaries hatch and rear them, it would help the matter along considerably. Of course, I am not going to ask you to do anything which you might think wrong, but to put me in touch with some person whom you think is reliable, and would gather the eggs laid, and deliver them to a person whom I shall name at Southampton who will bring them over to me. They need not send the whole lot of eggs of any nests that they find; what I want is about 12 or 15 eggs altogether, which of course must not have been long in the nest, but must be gathered as laid. Say a person found two or three nests of Finches, in which the Finch had just started laying. If he will agree to gather some from whatever nests he may find, and send those eggs to the party whom I will name, whether it be 3 or one dozen of eggs, I will pay whatever cost to which he may be put. Trusting to get a favourable reply.

F. Gambo,

Store Cages and Clap-nets.

Sir,—Would any of your readers kindly tell me how to make a store cage, say, 12in. long; also how to get clap nets over when the wind blows on the side. Is there any pulley arrangement that would make the slow net come quicker? Also, what number of call birds to use for Linnet catching, and where to place them? W. Turner.

Can Mules Breed?

A Revival of this Perennial Query.

Sir,—I have a hen Canary sitting on four eggs to a cock Linnet Mule. I should like to know if any young have been exhibited, and what would their proper names be, as I am confident regarding the mule of having some young ones. I read in Cage Birds of some being bred, but never heard of being exhibited. Hoping you will oblige.

Joseph Govier.

Should Hybrids with Alien Parents be given Separate Classes?

Sir,—I should like, through the medium of Cage Birds to say a few words on the most interesting of all the branches of bird rearing and breeding, namely, hybrid breeding, as there have been letters lately on this subject advocating separate classes for hybrids bred from British and foreign parents. I for one should like to see this so, but can it be done? I am sorry to say I do not think it can, but of course I may be wrong. In the first place, are there enough hybrids bred to make separate classes, and be a success both to the show and exhibitors? How often do we hear complaints from show secretaries of short entries, and from the exhibitor of only half prize money? If these classes are divided, will they fill any better, or shall we be any better off then than we are now? Then, again, there will be grumbling from the exhibitors if the judge "wrong classes" a hybrid bred from British birds because of its being too big—and there are some hybrids bred from British birds that can beat the ones bred from Siberian or foreign parents, both in size and markings. Then, again, what about the German hen Bullie? That's a foreign bird, and yet we have our own hen Bullies that can give it points, and then beat it easily for size. Yet a hybrid bred from it would, strictly speaking, have to be shown in the classes for hybrids bred from foreign birds (both parents foreign). Then, again, how are we to distinguish the difference between the Redpoll-Bullie, and Siskin-Bullie (when got)? In my opinion this cross would have to be got from either the German hen Bullie or English, for it seems to me it would be a waste of time to pair either a Redpoll or Siskin cock to a Siberian hen Bullie on account of the difference in size. If a German Bullie is used we should strictly have to show it in the hybrid from foreign parents class, that is, with both parents foreigners. If English parents are used, then, in the other class, and yet, as far as I can see there would be no difference either in size or marking between these hybrids. Then, again, what class should we have to show a hybrid in where one parent is a foreign bird and the other English? I have no doubt there are some bred in this way. I myself am trying it this season. Now, if separate classes are provided for our hybrids, in what class shall we have to show a hybrid where the parents are birds one British and one Continental?

Welsh C.B.C.

An Appeal to Welsh Fanciers for Support.

Sir,—I shall be glad if all societies intending to apply for the patronage of the above Club will please send their applications to me not later than the 16th May next. May I ask the societies of Wales to seriously consider this matter, which I am sure would be to their benefit? We will consider mixed shows as well as cage bird shows. Will our members kindly note that the annual general meeting will take place at Merthyr on Saturday, the 18th May next, and I shall be glad to know if any member has anyone to propose for office, or any other proposal to make. Any fanciers wishing to join, will they please send their applications to me on or before the 18th May? The entrance fee is only 3s., which must be sent with application.

Can Birds Reason?

Sir,—An interesting discussion has arisen among the naturalists of the Middle West as a result of a paper read by Prof. John Uri Lloyd before the Audubon Society at Cincinnati, in which the distinguished savant claimed that birds both reason and think. "Little birds, like little babies," says Dr. Lloyd, "instinctively cry for food and instinctively eat. But the grown birds make use of reasoning powers to help them out of difficulties and to make their life more pleasant, as human beings do. Near Seattle, Wash., at one time, I saw some Crows plunging into the mud, and was surprised at their strange antics. On close observation I found they had picked clams out of the mud. Then they rose to a height of several hundred feet and dropped the clams on the rocks, so that the shells would be broken and they could get the clam. They never dropped the clams on the mud, where they would not break. Blue Jays have a habit of hiding food under leaves so that they can secure it in future time of want. I saw Blue Jays do this near my home, but after we fed a Blue Jay daily for several months he reasoned out that his food supply was so certain that it was no longer necessary for him to hide anything under leaves, and he stopped that practice. I saw another bird at my home reason out a plan of modern scientific management—that is, the doing of most work with least motions. This bird's young were crying for food overhead, while she pecked at a rock on the ground with her bill and then inserted her bill under her feathers. Close examination showed that every time she struck the rock she had a large black ant in her mouth. She killed the ants, then secreted them under her feathers. When she had enough she flew up to her brood of squealing young and fed them. In this way the mother accomplished the feeding without making so many trips back and forth between nest and ground. One day we fed the birds at our house with bread so hard that they were unable to eat it. The birds very sensibly carried the bread to a near-by pan of water that we provided, dipped it in water and softened it, and they enjoyed their feast. They had reasoned out a method of softening the bread."

Can Glass be Cut with Scissors?

A Challenge to a Reader.

Sir,—I wish to draw your attention to a statement made in your columns that glass could be cut with a pair of scissors, holding glass and scissors under water whilst operating. I say that it cannot be done, and challenge anyone to prove the contrary.

John Gosling.

[The statement that glass may be so cut is by no means a new one. We have seen it made many times, but have never tested its practicability. It would be interesting to know if any readers have been able to cut glass by the method mentioned.—Ed. "C.B."]

Sir,—I hope the correspondent on this subject last week is not amusing himself at your readers' expense. His method of cutting glass was common knowledge among the boys in my school days, and most, or all, newcomers were seriously informed of it. But I doubt if a single one ever tried it in practice. They only "smole" and "were not having any." It would be really interesting if readers who have actually put it to the test would relate their experience. For practical glass-cutting in a small way, such as fanciers need, the little tools with a hard steel wheel, which can be bought at from 3d. each almost anywhere, are all that could be desired. The only fault in them is that the cutting powers of the wheel rather quickly diminish, but as a spare wheel is generally provided with a 6d. cutter, it should be quite possible to purchase these wheels separately at a cheap rate. It would be more to the point if some reader could tell fanciers where these wheels could be so purchased.

Two Young from One Egg?

Sir,—I write to inform you of the most remarkable occurrence that I have ever experienced in my breeding of Canaries. I had a Norwich hen due to hatch on May 2. She had laid four eggs, but the last of the clutch she dropped on the cage floor, and it was broken. On the morning of May 2, when I looked in the nest there was one hatched, and on looking at night there was still just the one, but to my surprise, on the next morning there were three and one egg left, which I knew beforehand was unfertile. The eggs were all of a size, just the ordinary size for a Norwich hen to lay. Some to whom I have mentioned it rather discredit my statement, saying she may have laid another egg after starting to sit, but this is not the case, as I always examine the eggs after the hens have sat a week, and also when the first one is hatched. I knew she just had two other eggs, and one was left after the birds were hatched, which, as I stated before, proved unfertile. I have on two or three occasions had a hen lay two eggs on one day, but this is the first time I have had two young hatched from one egg. I might just say that the two young from the one egg are as large as the single one from the other. They are all alive so far, the hen feeding fairly well.

The Pied Fly-Catcher.

Sir,—The Pied Flycatcher is now very rare, and is seldom met with. I have not heard of a nest having been found about here of late years. Some years ago there used to be two nests about this place, one of which was found near a pond in a pear tree in a private garden. I was called in to identify the nest and bird. This was about six years ago. The other also was in a large private garden, and was not allowed to be taken. The first nest had eggs when I saw it, and was left for young. When about fourteen days old, I got the nest and young, and successfully hand-reared the four young ones. I was told that I could not do it by those who thought they knew, and had tried to raise soft-billed birds. The method I used was newly boiled bread and milk fresh daily, the yolk only of eggs, and biscuit, all well mixed with the bread and milk, together with some fresh ants' eggs (not dried ones). I used to have to go out into the fields, etc., and gather them. I gave also house flies, with all the spiders I could catch, butterflies' bodies, gnats, and, in fact, all the insects I could procure. It was a very tedious job until they could pick up, but it well repaid me the trouble. After I had got them to pick up I gave them a good insectivorous diet as a staple food, with all the live insects I could get, particularly winged insects; it was quite amusing to see them go for a butterfly or moth when placed in their cage. They are very interesting birds, and are not likely at all to become very common as a cage bird, as they are so rarely met with The description of a cock in full plumage, as far as I can remember, is:—The beak is black, the eyes are dark hazel, on the forehead is a white spot, the top of the head and around the eyes and back part of the neck, as well as the tail, are black, with the exception of the external feathers of the tail, which are white; the back is black intermixed with brown; the rump feathers are paler and mixed with grey; the pen feathers of the wings are russet brown; the wing coverts are blackish brown, the larger ones being tipped with white; the outer side of the secondary quill feathers is white; the throat, fore part of neck, checks, breast, belly, sides, and vent are white; the legs and feet are black. The nest takes a bit of finding. It is made of small roots, husks, grass, moss, lichen, and hair. The hen generally lays about four to five eggs of a pale greyish blue colour. The hen is brown in colour where the cock is black, and is without the white spot on the forehead; the white in the wings is duller and greyer, and the under parts are dusky white. The song of the cock is not much; only a twittering noise, not at all unpleasant.

The R.S.P.C.A. and its Inspectors.

The Working of the New Act.

Sir,—Just a few thoughts upon the way in which the new Act is being administered. We were given to understand that the law had been altered so as to give greater scope for the detection and suppression of real cruelty. The R.S.P.C.A. and its supporters had conceived the notion that they alone of all mankind could protect the birds. So far the extent of their present ramifications appears to be the bird dealer, bird catcher, and men whose names and addresses they can get any day from show catalogues and society membership lists. Practically, they do very little real detective work. I had understood, up to the time this new edition of the law came into force, that the inspectors of the R.S.P.C.A. were paid solely for the duties of seeking out and punishing offenders in cases of cruelty. But the new Act seems to have changed all this, for the inspectors will not now require to exercise detective skill, but simply to consult printed lists, fit the times of their visits to addresses to suit themselves, and manufacture cases upon the most trivial technicalities. If they happen to drop in at a time when a breeder or dealer may chance to have been obliged to put off cleaning out for a day, there is the opportunity, and upon him they pounce. If by reason of temporary shortage of cage room he may have put a bird or two into small cages, he is in for trouble. And at the court the offence is never minimised! A great deal more of the humane spirit lurks in the bird-keeper's breast than in the breasts of his accusers—put to the test. Consequently R.S.P.C.A. inspectors are apt to spend a great deal more valuable time in meddlesomeness than in real effective work of detection. There is no skill in picking out names from a membership list, to the neglect of cases where real cruelty is practised. I can see such cases frequently, and yet no inspector interferes. Only the other day I called the attention of a man to a Chaffinch in a wee back cage, and, to make matters worse, tied closely in a black handkerchief and set upon the front window sill. I did not care to risk abuse by calling it cruel, so in order to ensure better treatment for the bird I acted as the man's friend, and warned him that if an inspector of the R.S.P.C.A. came along he would certainly get into trouble, and I wanted to save him from that. The next day the bird was on the sill enjoying so much of the sunlight as a back cage would allow. Not a great deal, I agree; but the black handkerchief was gone. My next move will be a little "advice" as to the size of the cage, on the R.S.P.C.A. basis.

TO THOSE FANCIERS WITH MEMORIES.

OUR attention has been drawn to certain pitifully worded appeals for support now being widely circulated by a trade rival. These contain ludicrous attacks by innuendo upon us, and we have been asked whether we purpose taking any action against the writer. In reply we can only say that we are quite content to entrust our present position and our future with the Fancy at large, which has a sufficiently long memory to carry it back to the days when it was tyrannised over and "sweated for all it was worth" by the party in question. The sales and popularity of CAGE BIRDS have never been at a higher pitch than they stand at to-day, and our policy of suppressing on the part of reporters all atttempts at "getting their own back," for which other papers have been notorious, has proved as acceptable to the public as it has to our own ideas of right and wrong. We do not claim to be an ideal cage-bird journal, but we do claim to have given our readers fair play and a run for their money every time, which is more than those who would depose us from our paramount position can truthfully say of themselves. With grateful thanks to all old friends and new.

THE EDITOR.

The Shama Thrush.

Sir,—I have often been asked, "Which do you consider the best and most satisfactory songster for a lover of cage birds to keep?" and I unhesitatingly answer: "The Shama Thrush," for I have learned by long experience in handling cage birds that for real melody, variety and sweetness, the Shama's song is unequalled, while added to this is the fact that these birds quickly become "finger tame." They are very hardy, easily kept, and with ordinary care will live for years. The Shama is a native of the jungles of India; it is about the size of the English Song Thrush, with rich velvety-black head and wings, long black and white tail, dark red breast, evenly marked from throat down, large black, intelligent eyes, black beak, and clean "pinkish white" legs and feet. It should have a nice roomy cage, the ordinary Mocking Bird cage, 18in. by 24in., with hooded top, being the most suitable. The cage should hang out of all cold draughts, for these birds, while naturally very hardy, are natives of India, and sudden changes of temperature or extreme cold will cause their death. There is some diversity of opinion as to the proper food for these birds, so I will simply state how I feed my Shamas, and, as I handle a large number of these birds every year, receiving them immediately on their arrival after a long sea trip, and their high price makes it very necessary that I feed and care for them so that I suffer no death loss, it may be easily understood that I have given much thought to the matter. For their regular daily food I give them finely grated raw carrot, mixed with an equal quantity of Mocking Bird food; each bird gets a heaping tablespoonful of this fresh every day, with two meal worms. Twice a week I mix a few ants' eggs with this food, and then once a week—usually every Sunday—I mix some fine grated hard boiled yolk of egg with the food and carrot; fresh drinking water daily, plenty of clean white gravel or sand at bottom of the cage, and I have no hesitation in saying that if you own a Shama and follow above directions, keeping your bird out of all cold draughts, away from open doors and windows, and in a moderately warm room, he will remain healthy and in song all the year round. The Shama being a soft-billed and insectivorous bird can be fed occasionally with small grasshoppers, spiders, green caterpillars (not hairy caterpillars, nor earth-worms), flies, etc., but in this connection I wish to add that great care should be taken not to feed too many worms and insects. These birds are naturally very greedy for insects, and it is a temptation to the owner to gratify their taste, but one must remember that the bird is confined in a cage, and not flying wild where it can work off this rich food. I know of several instances where fine softbill birds have been killed through their owner feeding too many meal worms and insects because "my bird was so fond of them." It is a dangerous practice, as too many insects will cause paralysis, epilepsy, and death. Three meal worms or other insects daily are the outside limit a Shama should be given, and two meal worms daily are plenty to keep him in good health and song. I have been asked: "What are the makings of a first-class Shama; how can I tell in purchasing one a fine bird from a poor one?" I answer: "Only by hearing them sing and their general look of health." Choose a bird whose eyes are bright, legs clean and not scaly, and whose droppings look natural and healthy; but in selecting a bird do not judge it by its plumage. Some of the roughest and poorest feathered birds are the best songsters, and some of the smoothest and most beautiful plumaged birds are very often loud and harsh in their song or "silent as the grave." A bird's plumage has nothing whatever to do with its song; you cannot judge the merits of a book by its cover. Lastly, I will say: Don't take a chance and buy a cheap bird—there is no chance about it—you lose every time. I have been there myself, and know whereof I speak.

SCOTTISH NATIONAL C.B.S. "SMOKER."

A Memorable Evening.

The long-looked-for "smoker" of the Scottish National C.B.S. has come and gone, but it has been an event which those present will retain in their memories for many a long day. The function was held in the Union Hotel, Lothian Road, and the room was comfortably filled by a happy crowd of "birdy men" and their friends.

The chair was ably filled by the worthy and genial President, Mr. James Winter, who opened the proceedings by welcoming all present, and afterwards proposed the toast of "The King," saying that the people in this country had been fortunate in having a Ruling Monarch of sterling worth as a man and King. The toast was duly honoured in true Scottish style.

Music and Mirth.

Mr. Marshall then opened the musical part of the evening by rendering the appropriate song, "The Song of the Thrush" in a very pleasing manner. Mr. A. Foster followed with "Queen of the Earth." Next came a cornet solo, "Alice, where art thou?" by Mr. Stanley Easter, executed in a pleasing manner. Mr. Matthews gave "Anchored," which fairly brought down the house, and as an encore recited "Devil Ma Care" in a masterly fashion. Mr. Stormont obliged with "True till Death." At this part of the proceedings Mr. Robert Craig proposed the toast of "Kindred Societies," and in a few remarks welcomed the representatives of the various local societies, coupling with the toast the name of Mr. J Steele, Dalkeith, who, in his reply, said that he for one would always do his utmost for the welfare of the "Scottish National." Speaking on the classification of the British Section, he considered that it was the best one any exhibitor could wish, and he advised the committee to stick to it. Mr. Charlton, President of the Edinburgh C.B.S., then sang "Mona" in rare style. An item of considerable interest was a solo by Mr. Clark on the Japanese violin, his rendering of "Auld Robin Gray" and "The Blind Boy" as an encore were a treat to listen to, and well deserved the hearty applause accorded to him. Mr. King then favoured the company with the "Gallant Forty-Twa," and as an encore "Cups and Saucers." Mr. G. Duncan, jun., sang "A Tyrolean Song" in a very creditable manner, but, as a song of this kind requires a hall with a high ceiling, its effect was somewhat spoiled. A capital rendering of "Afton Water" was given by Mr. John Fiunie with much feeling and tenderness. Mr. Matthews obliged again with a comic song, and as an encore recited that favourite poem, "The 11.69." The applause which followed this effort fairly shook the house. "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" was next sung by Mr. Tucker, after which Mr. Stanley Easter obliged with "Auld Scotch Songs" on the cornet.

The Toast of the Evening.

At this point a halt was made with the musical part of the programme to allow the principal toast of the evening to be proposed, viz., "The Scottish National Cage Bird Society," which honour fell to Mr. James Lumsden, President of the Leith O.S., who at the outset said he felt he could not do this important toast the justice it required, as he had only been asked when he came into the meeting to do so; but if his memory served him right, he thought that it was about eleven years ago since the Scottish National C.B.S. was started, the first show being held in Picardy Place Hall, and its success was so marked that the officials saw that they would require to look out another venue for the next year's event. They were fortunate in securing the Corn Exchange in the Grass Market, which they have had ever since. It had been rumoured that the Corporation of Edinburgh intended to demolish the building for police headquarters, but he was pleased to intimate that for the society's next show they had again been granted the use of the Corn Exchange, which is one of the largest and best lighted halls in the kingdom for a bird show. Mr. Lumsden said he was sorry to see that the society had dropped a bit financially last year, but he said that all bird societies had their ups and downs, and he counselled the members of the local clubs to rally round the Scottish National, as it was only by their united effort they could expect the society to flourish and keep up their name of being the Palace Show of Scotland. He would now ask the company to drink to the success of the Scottish National Cage Bird Society and its officials. This was enthusiastically done, the company singing "For they are jolly good fellows." Before the chairman replied to the toast Mr. D. Kinlayside, show staging expert, was pressed to sing a song, but he preferred to say a few words in support of the society. He said it was a pleasure to him to do anything to help on the hobby of keeping birds, for a man who had no hobby was an ass. It would always be his endeavour to help the society all he could.

The President's Reply.

Mr. Winter then responded to the toast, remarking that it gave him great pleasure to reply in his capacity as President of such an important society. He said the show was managed and carried out equal with any other in the country, and could give points away as to how things should be done. He had no hesitation in saying the "Scottish National" was the premier show of Scotland. They had an excellent lot of officials, who worked hard in the interests of the society. Their new secretary, Mr. J R. Meikle, had entered on his duties with right good will, and his presence was beginning to be felt already. Mr. Steele, in his remarks, had referred to certain points, so he invited Mr. Steele to bring before the committee anything which would be of interest to the society, and he could assure him it would receive their best attention. On behalf of the officials of the society, Mr. Winter thanked the proposer and the company for the hearty way they had responded to the toast. Mr. Marshall and Mr. Duncan again obliged with a song, after which the Chairman proposed the toast of the "Fancy Press." He said that to leave out this toast from a gathering such as this would be lacking in duty. Mr. George Brown, in replying to the toast, said the Press was a means of letting us know what our brother fanciers were doing all over the country, and was also a medium for the enlightenment of our hobby.

Votes of Thanks.

After several more songs, the Chairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the artistes who, he said, had shown talent of the highest order, and had greatly helped to make the "smoker" the success it deserved. The committee owed them a deep debt of gratitude for their services, which were ungrudgingly given. Mr. Chas. Drysdale, President of the Scottish Metropolitan Derby Club, proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, after which the "smoker" was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King." Mr. Nicol presided at the piano and proved himself a capable and proficient accompanist. The arrangements were in the hands of the secretary, Mr. Easter, and Mr. A. Rodger, who deserve the thanks of the company for the able manner they carried out their duties. A notable visitor at the function was Mr. John Brown, of British bird fame, whom we were pleased to see looking his old self again.

BUCKHAVEN AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held May 4, Free Gardeners' Hall, for the purpose of fixing up the classes for the open show, to be held Nov. 22nd. Judges: Bord., Mr. A. Walker, Tesmahagow; Nor., Mr. Smeaton, Musselburgh; Brit. and For., Mr. Bald, Bathgate. Open table show fixed for second Saturday of July.—R. Hazzard, Sec.

KETTERING C.B.S.

Meeting held May 6th at headquarters. Mr. J. Bland gave a very interesting lecture on "The why and wherefore of Bird Life," which proved to be one of the best ever delivered before the society. Several questions were asked, and ably answered by the speaker, and a vote of thanks was then passed to Mr. Bland.—A. Martin.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C. C.

Following is official result of the election for 1912: Committee: G. F. Adamson, 31 votes; C. Campbell, 30; A. Chalmers, 29; J. McNaughton, 25; J. McLay, 25; W. Paul, 25; J. Noble, 24; J. F. Dewar, 23; J. Young, 22; J. Cram, 19; G. Mackie, 19; R. Whitton, 17; H. Moreland, 16; F. Taylor, 15; G. Smart, 14. Club Judges: J. Young, 31; A. Chalmers, 24; J. McLay, 24; G. F. Adamson, 20; J. F. PAISLEY TANNAHILL O.S.

Monthly meeting, held in Mr. Lockie's, 2, St. James' Street, May 4th, Mr. T. Hamilton, vice-president, in the chair. Messrs. Hamilton and Dowell gave report of amalgamation meeting, and after some discussion it was accepted. Secretary read the bye-laws, as per rule. Mr. Ferguson moved that there be no meetings in July and August. Agreed. Records of eggs and young were next taken, and the 13 members reported 48 eggs and 27 young.—John Stewart, 19, Glen Street, Paisley.

FALKIRK GOOD INTENT C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held Oddfellows Hall, 27th, April, James Muir presiding. A washing exhibition given by Messrs. Marshall and Hunter was very much appreciated by the members. Two new members were admitted, Messrs. G. Davie and R. Jamieson. At the next meeting, held May 25th, a table show of British will be held; judge, Joseph Hunter. We have settled to have a ramble on June 1st. All members and fellow fanciers cordially invited to meet at Cross, High Street, at 3 p.m.—Walter Clarkson.

GRIMSBY & CLEETHORPES R.C.S

Meeting, 27th ult., present, Mr. D. Robinson, President; Messrs. Ives (chair), Young, Rawcliffe, Wood, Smith, Drust, Portlock, Hewins, and Mason. A lot of business was got through, including the fixing of dates for next annual show, for Dec. 19th and 20th, at Adults School. Will secretaries kindly note. Since the beginning of the year six new members have been enrolled. It is intended to arrange a discussion on Breeding at the next meeting. Will intending fanciers communicate with the Hon. Sec., and thereby obtain the privilege of joining in the discussion, which will be very interesting, and of great benefit to novices.—H. Mason.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 4th. The secretary reported that he had booked the U.M.F.C. school-room for annual show, also that we have a First Feather show in the Bisley Hotel club-room in July. The secretary was instructed to write the various clubs re patronage. Following were elected as members: W. Collins, Blaydon; W. Dodds, Winlaton; Mr. Cawthorne, Blaydon; R. Charlton, Boy Pit, Blaydon; and T. Dodds, Stargate. Resolved that we again advertise in CAGE BIRDS to the extent of 25s. Annual show fixed for Nov. 1st and 2nd: Judges, C. A. Honce, Esq., Bradford, and W. A. Cowgill, Esq., Bradford.—G. Hayver, Sec.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

A very interesting meeting was held May 2, when Mr. F. Easterling gave a most instructive lecture on "How to become a success-ful exhibitor." After the lecture, Mr. Easterling answered numerous questions, to the satisfaction of all present. The points trophy was on view, and, according to the remarks passed thereon, there will be keen competition for ownership. The following gentlemen have accepted office as vice-presidents: Rowland Bamber, Esq., C. A. House, Esq., John Robson, Esq., T. L. Salter, Esq., and Dr. Windle; Mr. C. A. Banyard was nominated for membership. Rule card will be sent out to members this week, and any fancier can have one by applying to me.—Jeffery Jefferis, Sec. and Treas., 10, Western-rd., Southall.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held at the Nag's Head Cocoa Rooms, Foregate Street, April 30th, Mr. F. E. Parker presiding over a fair attendance of fanciers. No less than six new members were made at this meeting, five from the locality and Mr. Helsby, of Frodsham Bridge. Decided, to hold the First Feather show on July 3rd at the Boot Inn, Eastgate Row (North). This room, which is admirably adapted for the purpose, is most conveniently central. Classification includes four each for Nor. and Yorks., and eight other classes for A.O.V. Canary, British Hard and Softbills, etc. I would again remind intending members to join this prosperous society at once, and be eligible to compete for Mr. Thompson's beautiful cup, which is to be won outright at this show, for most points with four nominated birds.—R. N. Williams, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Annual meeting held 142, High Street, Edinburgh, 27th April, Mr. W. Aitchison presiding, others present being Messrs. R. Craig, A. Holmes, J. Logan, J. Smeaton, and secretary. Mr. J. Hector wrote suggesting that a meeting of club members be held in each of the three districts during next show season, and the matter was allowed to stand over until next committee meeting. Mr. Hector also suggested that the club adopt closed rings, but while it was agreed that there may be advantages to be gained by the ringing of the birds, it was deemed beyond the power of the committee to attempt to bind the members to such a course, and the matter was allowed to rest. At the same time it was agreed that ring birds should be allowed to compete on an equal footing with unring birds for all specials and medals offered by the club. Mr. J. Young wrote proposing that Mr W. Aitchison, Edinburgh, be elected president. This was seconded by Mr. Holmes, and unanimously agreed to, and the undermentioned were elected vice presidents: Messrs. J. Smeaton, A. Sloan, R. Martin, J. Logan, and G. Mitchell. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the meeting to a close. Will secretaries please note that our club show falls to be held in the Northern district this year, and applications for same and other patronage are now in order. I shall be pleased to hear from fanciers wishing to join the club, and equally pleased to hear from old members.—J. Brown, Sec.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting, held Saturday, April 27. Following societies were granted the club's patronage for their open shows: Huddersfield, Nottingham, Preston Club show, Liverpool and Bradford National. Members of the N.P.C. are specially requested to bear in mind that at a large meeting of the club, held at Manchester last year, it was resolved that birds wearing rings of any description should not compete for the club prizes. Also that all cages and varnish be got through the secretary. The committee trust that these rules will be observed.—F. Cunliffe, Sec.

SOUTHEND O.S.

General meeting, held headquarters Alexandra Hotel, on May 1st. Young bird show for members fixed for June 12th, at the Blue Boar Hotel, Prittlewell. Members' show on November 6 and 7, at Clarence Hall, Southend-on-Sea. Members specials: Solid silver cup, value £6 6s., for three starred birds in champion class. Silver teapot, value £1 1s. for most points in two shows by a novice. All subs. to be paid by June 6. Judges: First Feather show, Messrs. W. E. Jeffries, Yorks.; A. E. Pattrick, Nor.; H. W. Brown, Brit. November show: Messrs. P. Rorke, Fulham, Yorks.; J. Dewhurst, Kensington, Brit., Hybrid and for.—C. Tapper and Cundy, Secs.

READING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 1st, at Palmer Hall, before a fair attendance. Mr. P. H. Lund was elected a member. A very interesting and novel judging competition then took place. The Editor of CAGE BIRDS very kindly provided some coloured plates, and some of the birds were cut out and mounted on cards. Mr. J. Yates judged them, after which all had a turn on their own. Several got very near to his awards, and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent by all present. Question of new prize cards brought forward by Hon. Sec. was left till next meeting. Breeding results have been very moderate; some are doing very well indeed, but others cannot seem to make a start. More interest is being taken this season in Hybrids, and several pairs are reported as looking very promising.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Special meeting, Bay Horse Tavern, May 4th, Mr. T. Wildridge, President, in the chair. A new member, Mr. A. Cooper, was proposed and accepted. Mr. Wm. Grewar was elected secretary in place of Mr. Whiteford, resigned owing to pressure of work. The schedule rules were then gone over and fully discussed, and, after some slight alteration had been made, were considered satisfactory. With regard to motion tabled at previous meeting re rescinding of minute affecting advertising, there was a long discussion, but ultimately the majority decided in favour of motion, and it was agreed that we advertise in the Fancy Press. A motion that we appoint a show manager was not entertained. Delegate appointed to West of Fife Cage Bird League gave report of last meeting of the League, upon which a lively discussion took place, but nothing definite was arrived at, and subject will come up at a future meeting. A debate took place between Messrs. Wm. Grewar and A. Harris on the Norwich Plainhead. Mr. Grewar ably answering all questions put to him by Mr. Harris, and also by other members who wanted a little more explanation. The questions covered the whole ground of feeding, pairing, rearing, and colour-feeding, and on conclusion Messrs. Grewar and Harris were accorded a hearty vote of thanks. A pleasant hour was afterwards spent in song and sentiment.—Wm. Whitelaw.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

A tea and social in connection with the presentation of prizes won by the members of the L. and L.F.A. was held at the Old Boars Head Manchester, on Saturday, April 20th. The following members, wives, and friends sat down to a splendid tea: Mr. and Mrs. Swalwell, Mr. and Mrs. Hordern, Mr. and Mrs. Ridgard, Mr. and Mrs. Stansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Dewsnap, Mr. E. and Miss Ollerenshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Rukin, Mr. Oldham and friend, and Messrs. A. and C. Bosworth, J. Hampshire and F. H. Collinge. Mrs. Hampshire was unable to attend owing to ill-health. After tea was done full justice to, the social part of the evening took place, Mr. Jos. Oldham being appointed chairman. The Chairman, in his opening remarks, commented upon the fine array of silver ware, etc., on view as prizes won during the past season. He said it was very pleasant to see so many new names as winners of same. The Lancashire champion trophy (a beautiful silver-plated tea urn) was presented to Mr. A. Hordern as the winner, who made a very fine speech in accepting same. Mr. F. H. Collinge was presented with a lovely silver-plated cake stand, as runner up in champion Lancashires, and replied in a very appropriate manner. Mr. W. Ridgard received gold medal as prize for novice Lancashire champion, and suitably responded. Mr. Jos. Hampshire also made a humorous speech on receiving a gold medal as runner up in Lancashire novice section. Before presenting specials won in Lizard section, Mr. Oldham dwelt a little on his never breeding Lizards, in fact, only once having had a Lizard in his bird room at any time. Mr. Dewsnap was presented with a silver-plated teapot as prize in Lizard champion section, and also silver-plated cruet, presented by Mr. Ramsden, for most points gained for birds fed on his colour food. Mr. Dewsnap responded ably, and said he hoped someone else would win it next year, so that everybody might have a turn. Mr. F. Hamer, who was unable to be present, won a pair of lace curtains as runner-up in Lizard champion section. Mr. A. E. Bosworth won a hand-some set of carvers in novice Lizard section, and suitably responded. Mr. A. Hordern was winner of special for runner-up in novice Lizards. Mr. Hordern reported that Mr. John Vickers, of Shaw had been the victim of a serious loss in his bird room, through the heating arrangements, and it was unanimously decided that secretary write and express the sympathy of the members present in his loss. Mr. Slater, our worthy host, was accorded a vote of thanks for the splendid way we had been catered for. Mr. F. H. Collinge proposed, and Mr. Stansfield seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, and to all the club officers for their services to the society during the past season. Mr. Oldham responded in a fitting manner, as did Mr. Rukin on behalf of the officers. Proposed, that members having anything to bring up at the next meeting acquaint the secretary in writing, so that the same can be put on the agenda. Next meeting at Glossop in June, and it is hoped to have a good meeting there. All arrangements as to meeting room are left in Mr. Fuller's hands. Finally settled that we give patronage for Lancashires and Lizards, 4 classes each, to Sheffield O.S., held Nov. 1st and 2nd. Societies wishing for our patronage will please apply for same as early as possible. We have still room for new members, and I will forward all particulars on application.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held in Club Hall, May 11, Mr. W. Carr chairman. There was only a moderate attendance. Decided that the secretary write a few as to their becoming president and vice-presidents; also to different firms for donations, etc. Next meeting, May 18th, at Club Hall. Will all members and intending members make an effort to attend?—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, The Landor, Clapham, when some 20 members were present. Decided that the annual outing of the Association should take place on Saturday, June 8th, to Ranmore Common, Dorking, when it is hoped a good muster will be present. Several members who were acquainted with this locality felt that an interesting day could be spent there in studying bird life. Arrangements (which will be announced in the Fancy Press later) will be made for luncheon and tea. The washing competition announced to take place proved something of a fiasco, Mr. Yeoman being the only competitor. He entered a Greenfinch, which, for the benefit of the visitors present, Mr. Vale washed. It is not very encouraging to the Hon. Secretary to arrange these competitions when they are so badly supported.—S. A. Sandy.

Since printing the above a similar note has come to hand from Mr. A. R. Coe.—Ed. C.B.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held Village School Room, Alexandria, on 22nd inst., President Hannah in the chair. Communication read from Glasgow and Western Counties C.B.C., stating they were coming to Balloch on 18th inst., and desiring to know if local club would join and show them round. Unanimously agreed to fall in with proposal, and appointed committee to make arrangements. All members to be at Balloch Station to await arrival of 2.59 p.m. train from Glasgow. First Feather show, July 6, annual show on Nov. 16, Public Hall, Alexandria to be engaged for both shows; decided to have three judges. Classes for F.F. show to be: Nor. 4, Crest 1, C.B. 1, Bord. 4, Scotch Fancies 2, Yorks. 2, A.O.V. 1, Mules 1, Hybrids 1. Decided to make a good classification for British, seeing they proved so great an attraction to visitors last year. Three new members were admitted. Classes for annual were adjourned till next meeting. Linnet singing competition also held; awards, 1, McEwan; 2, Thorn; 3, Anderson.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE HAND-IN-HAND C.B.S.

Special meeting held at headquarters, the Old House at Home, Mr. G. G. Ette in the chair. After the ordinary business four new members were elected: Messrs. J. French, F. Gammage, J. Osborne, and W. Frail. Nest Feather show and schedule was arranged for June 22nd at Mr. A. E. Dunkley's, head quarters. After the above came the discussion on the closed ring question. Mr. T. Irons said that rings of any kind were a nuisance, and closed rings would be especially so. What they had caused in getting them on and getting them off was not often written: The broken leg, young birds carried from the nests, and the restlessness of the birds that did not take a liking for them. The whole thing was an abomination. He proposed that our society should show their disgust at the use of rings for cage birds entirely. This was seconded by Mr. J. Martin, and carried unanimously.—A. W. Law, Sec.

PARTICK C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Trades Halls, 3rd May, Mr. Park presiding over a fair attendance. Arranged to hold annual show 2nd Nov. Agreed to add the following classes: Non-fed class each in Young Nor. and Yorks, Old Yorks, Green and Cinn., Bord., also F.M. class in each. Mr. Bowman gave his lecture on the Yorkshire, which proved to be very interesting and instructive, and was much appreciated by all present. Mr. Maxwell proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Bowman, which was heartily accorded. Mr. Bowman, in his reply, hoped that at some future date he would be able to give us a lecture on wild seeds. Mr. Park thanked Mr. Bowman for his offer, stating that we would not miss such a treat, as Mr. Bowman was a well-known authority on this interesting hobby. We have again won the rose bowl for second most points at Glasgow open show, and this was on view. The club presented Mr. Park with the bowl to hold for the year, which honour Mr. Park thanked them for.—J. Henderson, Secretary.

EASTFIELD SIDE (SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD) C.B.S.

Meeting held 4th May. The skittle match between Crest men and Norwich men proved very exciting. The issue was in doubt up to the last throw, but the Plainhead men won by six. I was on the Plainhead side, and, my name being a bit out of the common, I was put down on the list as "Cage Birds!" (I wonder if the Crest men thought that they could beat a name that has always been second to none.) Decided to hold a Nest Feather Show on June 1st, when five classes will be provided—Yellow and Buff Plainhead, Crest, C.B., and Brit. Mr. George Marshall, judge. I am sorry to hear Mr. Marshall has had to clear out his birds, after forty years in the Fancy, but he has promised to give all the help he can. A novel match is to be decided at the next meeting. Mr. C. Connor will endeavour to hold his cock Linnet on his finger longer than Mr. A. Wright (bantam cock) for a purse of silver. The ramble to Bucknall was deleted from the programme. Four new members were enrolled, and this society promises to become one of the best in the Midlands.—Bernard Gabbitass.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Meeting held on May 6th, Mr. James Jones (chairman) presiding. Members' show will be held at Carnarvon, Whit Monday. All fanciers, from every part, may become members. An advertisement re the show will appear in next week's CAGE BIRDS. All particulars from John Wynne Parry, Hon. Sec., Carnarvon.

HANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held at the George and Dragon Hotel on May 1, Mr. S. Pygott in the chair. Decided to have two open classes, each for Norwich and Yorks.; also four members' classes. Entry fee 1s. for open, and 7d. members. There will also be one Lizard class and one Any Species Brit.—W. G. Llewellyn.

SALFORD.

Special meeting at headquarters, The Boat House Hotel, May 5, to consider business pertaining to the subscriptions. Secretary was instructed to write members in arrears, also to ask the general secretary of the Affiliation to consider a vacant Saturday date for a fixture for members. Full report of the results re a contest will be given in next week's CAGE BIRDS. Lark fanciers willing to promote a contest in this district kindly communicate with me.—B. Wharton.

UDDINGSTON C.B., Etc., S.

Annual general meeting held in the reading-room on April 30. There was a fair attendance, and the election of office-bearers for the ensuing season resulted as follows:—Hon Pres., Jas. Prentice, Esq., J.P.; President, W. P. Campbell; Vice-Presidents, John Williamson and Wm. Nisbet; Sec. and Treas., Jas. Cosgrove, 2, Croftbank-crescent, Bothwell; committee, Messrs. Black, McCaskill, Anderson, Wilson, McKay, and Graham. Open show some time in November, date to be fixed later.—James Cosgrove.

COLINTON AND CURRIE O.S.

Monthly meeting held Drill Hall, Juniper Green, May 4. Mr. Begbie in the chair. Four new members were admitted, namely: Jas. Stevenson and William Robertson, both Colinton, Alex. McCrum, Juniper Green, Dunbar, Leadbutter, Balerno. Membership was left open till month of June to give fanciers another chance of joining, as this is the first year of the society. Membership 35 at present. —Jas. Napier, Sec.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A.

The above society had a ramble on Sat., May 4, to Harden, under the guidance of our president, Mr. W. Holroyd. When we got into the wood, he gave us a lecture on British Bird life, and his remarks were greatly appreciated. We were surprised with his knowledge of British birds. The society are fortunate to have a man of his experience as leader. We treated the inner man to a much-needed repast at the Brown Cow, Wilsden, and we recommend it to fanciers travelling that way on their outing. We then made for headquarters, having enjoyed ourselves immensely.—H. Grange, Sec.

THE NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

The annual general meeting of the Club will be held on Saturday, May 18th, 3 p.m., at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford. Business, Election of officers, balance sheet, new rules, etc. The cash specials for best 4th and 5th birds for past season (see rules appertaining to this competition) will be presented. Will the successful members please check the amounts, and notify me if any are incorrect, so that the same may be rectified at once: Messrs. Ogden Bros., 10s. 9d.; Sutcliffe and Son, 10s. 8d.; H. H. Towers, 5s. 2d.; Brown and Son, 5s.; S. Moore, 2s. 10d.; L. Dykes, 2s. 5d.; W. H. Shackleton, 2s. 5d.; F. Townsend, 2s. 3d.; C. E. Morrison, 2s. 1d.; H. Hill, 1s. 6d.; A. Sutcliffe, 1s.; J. Priestley, 9d.; S. Smith, 9d.; H. W. Walsh, 8d.; A. Craven, 7d.; A. Gledhill, 7d.; J. Wilson, 6d. A committee meeting will be held at same place, 2.30 p.m., prior to annual meeting. Will all members in arrears with their subscriptions, kindly oblige before that date, so that I can present a full balance sheet up to date.—F. Armstrong, Hon. Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Owing to a very wet night, only a small number of members attended the monthly meeting on May 2nd. Those who did not attend missed a very interesting little lecture by Mr. T. H. Dent, entitled "30 years in the Fancy." Mr. Dent's recollections of shows held in public houses on Sundays, and copper kettles as prizes appeared very strange to us younger ones, who are used to the splendidly housed and managed shows we see now. The suspicion which was cast on every one (the judge was locked in a room by himself) and other objectionable practices, did much to give our hobby rather a bad name, from which, thanks to the efforts of many strong minded and real fanciers, it has made such a splendid recovery. Before the lecture, Mr. J. H. Roe was appointed judge at our open show, and great satisfaction was expressed when it was announced that Preston had been appointed the club show of the N.P.C. Reports as to the breeding season were not very bright, and it was decided to ballot all members re refixing young show date. Unfortunately it was quite forgotten to fix the date of the annual club ramble, but this will be done by the time this is in print, and members notified. A vote thanking Mr. Dent for his lecture was carried by acclamation. Members please note that next meeting will be June 6th, and that subscriptions are now due.—J. P. Leeming, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held Oldham Hall, April 25, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. Mr. Knowles came from Earlestown to give a lecture, but, owing to the poor attendance, it was postponed. It is a great pity that members do not turn up on these occasions, as undoubtedly valuable hints are to be often picked up. Several new members have been nominated, especially in the Border Section, where competition looks like being particularly keen during the coming show season. The officers had arranged a surprise for the retiring president, in the shape of a framed souvenir of the G. C. A. 1912 dinner programme. Mr. Walker, in acknowledging same, said it would remind him, in years to come, of the happy hours he had spent during his term of office amongst the G.C.A. members. The May meeting was set apart for making arrangements for the Nest Feather show, but as this has now been discontinued, there is an open night, and members are requested to turn up in full force, as the committee are desirous of compiling a series of night Nest Feather shows, for which specials will be offered. We want all the suggestions possible; don't forget the date, Thursday, May 23.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

"LIVE BIRD" LABELS,
CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SOUTHERN NORWICH PH.C.

Show managers and club secretaries should make application for our patronage, as ballot sheets will shortly be issued to the committee. The club is open to receive names of intending members. 1s. entry fee, 2s. 6d., yearly subscription. The club hopes to give away some £10 in specials for the encouragement of the breeding of the Norwich, and is open to receive any special from any faucier, which will be allotted to any class or bird he may select.—F. S. Matthee, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 2nd, at the Wentworth Cafe, Penstone Street, Mr. F. Jones (President) in the chair, supported by Mr. J. Thorpe (vice-president), Mr. W. Oxley (Treasurer), and the two secretaries. Ramble arranged for June 1st to Ridgeway; Mr. J. Curley is to be the guide. Members and friends are asked to meet at Intake car terminus at 2.30. Stewards for next month's table show, Messrs. Lockwood and Sissons. Several specials were promised, including a razor for most points in Nov. Nor. Arrangements for Nest Feather show, June 29th, Montgomery Hall, were completed. Stewards, Messrs. Durnford, Dutton and Lockwood; doorkeepers, Messrs. C. W. Hobson, Drabble, Jackson, Champion and Dutton. Mr. C. Tomlinson kindly promised to find bills for the sandwichmen. Decided, that in case any birds are entered in the wrong class as regards colour and marking, the judge be instructed to put them in their proper class, the judge's decision to be final. All birds to be staged by 2 o'clock instead of 1 o'clock, as printed in the syllabus. Mr. Kelley introduced the subject of forming a body of fanciers for helping unfortunate members, who, through being out of work, or any other cause, find it hard to continue to keep their birds. The idea was well received, and a good number of members present indicated their willingness to join. The questions by ballot proved very interesting and instructive, and much information was gathered. Mr. J. Bennett had an interesting exhibit on view, viz., a young Yorkshire with four legs; the bird lived to be two days old. Next meeting June 13th (please note date) is a table show of young birds, twelve classes, prize money 3/-, 2/-, 1/-; points specials to be competed for at these; see syllabus for classification. We were pleased to see Mr. Dunford amongst us again; he has been laid aside with sickness for the past six months; we trust his bad days are over, and perfect health may now be his.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

No. 538.
A Titbit Tin for Softbills.
Sent by H. Truelove, 7, Back Lane, Sheepridge, Huddersfield.

All softbills need a variety of food, besides their stock food, and here is a useful and simple idea. Cut a piece of tin to shape of Fig. 1, and cut slots as marked. Bend up at dotted lines, bending A's first and then T.

Fold ends of A's at back of T, and solder. Bend down C, and parts of B's to fit thickness of cage rail. The size of the tin to be according to the bird kept. Tin drinkers are too deep for the purpose; if filled, the food will go sour before being eaten, and if only a small quantity is given, it is too far away for the bird.—H. Truelove.

No. 589.
A Seed-Pourer.
Sent by F. Page, Calverley, Rodley, Leeds

Here is a sketch of a can I use for mixed or any kind of seed I use as tit-bits. It is much handier than using a spoon to put same through the wires into egg trays. It can be made from a syrup tin. Cut oval hole about half way up to insert spout; cut piece of tin 7in. long, 2½in. wide, taper to 2in., rounded off at each end. Fold this over a piece of wood to form spout 1¼in. wide, tapering to ¾in. by ¾in.; solder along the seam, and also to can. A glance at sketch will give all information required.—F. Page.

Harpenden F.A.—May 27. Judge, Mr. G. Gardner. 6 classes: Nor., Yorks., Mules or Hybrids, Goldfinch, A.O.S. British, Foreign, Prizes, 6s., 4s., 2s. Fee 1s. Entries close May 20, to J. B. Townsend, Station Road.

Singing Contests.

WESTHOUGHTON.

A club contest will be held at Horseshoe Inn, Wingates, on May 11th, when we hope to see some new faces, as anyone will be allowed to enter a bird who joins us on or before the date. Singing to commence 2.30, for some good prizes, together with specials.—J. Woodward.

BUSLINGTHORPE.

Quality singing held Skinners Arms, Buslingthorpe, May 7th. 1, S. Nivins; 2, J. Chippindale; 3, J. Sellars. Judges, Messrs. C. Clayton and Turner. Also May 8th: 1, Ward; 2, 3, shared by J. Clark and J. Sellars. Judges, Messrs. C. Clayton and Biss.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

The usual week-end quality Linnet singing contest took place, May 5, at Prince Albert Inn, when 20 birds were entered to sing for three good prizes given by the hostess, Mrs. M. A. Saynor. Judges were Messrs. C. Lorriman and Turner. 1, J. Smith; 2, A. Lorriman; 3, D. Madden.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly Linnet sing, held at Webster's Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf st.; 3 minutes time singing, result: J. Callaghan, 74; E. Bisby, 60; F. Lomas, 53; Sanderson, 48; Burkinshaw, 46. Some very good singing was heard. Mr. Bisby's bird sang the longest break, 50 secs in one run.—John Callaghan.

WIGAN.

LANCASHIRE AFFILIATED LINNET CLUB

Open Linnet contest at the Union Arms, Tyldesley, May 4th, when 56 birds entered for 8 good prizes. One club did not send any birds, so that they have forfeited all claim on the Affiliation and, not only that, but any club in the Affiliation is debarred from allowing their members to sing at any of their contests. All-England singing contest at the Globe Inn, Bradshawgate, Leigh, May 11th, for quality and time, first pair of birds up at 2 o'clock. The Globe Inn Linnet Club hold open contests every Sunday for quality and time; entrance fee, 2d. per bird. Any further information may be got by applying to me, or any of the members.—J. M'Allister, Sec.

Members Shows.

Eccles C.B.S.: Members' table show, held Diamond Inn, May 1st, proved a great success, and was as good as any British birds show held for many miles around Manchester this year. We had a very good entry. The judging of Mr. Fairhurst, of Ardwick, gave satisfaction to everybody. After the judging Mr. Fairhurst gave the reasons why he placed the birds. Four new members were made, Messrs. Lee, Rigby, Sillence and Barlow. The principal winners were: Goldfinch: 1, Tims; 2, Monks; 3, Jones; 4, Astley. Bullfinch: 1, 2, Jones. Linnet, H.M.: 1, Hall; 2, Astley; 3, Tims. Linnet, F.M.: 1, 2, Peters; 3, Clowe; 4, Monks. Greenfinch: 1, Jones; 2, 3, Walker. Siskin, Redpoll, Twite: 1, 2, Astley; 3, Monks.—J. Hall, Hon. Sec.

Stratford and East London F.A. First monthly members' show, at Workman's Hall, on April 25th. Entries in all sections totalled 156, a record to be proud of. Mr. T. G. Hunt judged. Wild-Bird Life.

Our Leading Musician.

After an absence of seven or eight months the Nightingale has once more returned to his old haunts. In his return he is quite as constant as the Swallow or any other of our migrants. In his love for certain favourite spots he has no equal among birds. If during his absence there should have been changes effected in the spinney, copse, or hedgerow he has been in the habit of frequenting he will still return to it, and make it his first resting place for a few days, but if the trees have been lopped, and the thick undergrowth has been removed, leaving no shelter for the birds or hiding place for the nest, the spot will then be deserted for that season, and possibly for the next 2 or 3 summers, until the place has returned to something like its former appearance. In its fondness for certain haunts the Nightingale closely resembles the Robin; also in its pugnacious habit of driving away all rivals. During the pairing season frequent encounters take place between the males for certain positions, and where the birds are at all plentiful the beauty of their song is somewhat impaired by the rivalry of the singers, who do their utmost to out-sing and silence each other. The Nightingale is not a difficult bird to locate and watch. The major portion of his food is obtained upon the ground, and if one will quietly take up a position in a wood which the bird is known to frequent, one will seldom have any difficulty in getting a view of him. By sitting quietly at the foot of a tree, well concealed from view, one may see him hop down out of the underwood on to the dead leaves or footpath in search of food. It is active and jerky in its movements, repeatedly flicking its tail and wings, and moving in a manner closely resembling the Robin. If disturbed, it hurries back to its close retreat, from which may be heard its harsh croaking note of alarm, something like that of the White-throat, but louder. Its usual call note is a long drawn, plaintive "weet." If repeatedly disturbed, it has a habit of snapping its bill as if angry with the intruder. The still clear nights of the last week or so have been exceptionally favourable to admirers of this grand songster. His rich melodious notes have been heard to perfection: perhaps the stillness of the surroundings after sun down assists the imagination, but at the same time one can but admit that a good Nightingale in full voice is superior to all other birds in quality of tone, variety and compass.

Habits of the Rock Pipit.

The Pipits are fairly plentiful, and may be found on most commons and tracts of waste ground, all excepting the Rock Pipit, which must be looked for on the rocky coast by the sea. He is a restless little creature, and flits ahead of one in short flights from rock to rock, even allowing the intruder to approach within a few yards, but if repeatedly disturbed, he rises into the air and flies in a wavering, uncertain manner—quite a Pipit-like action. The birds are not gregarious, although sometimes several pairs may be found along the same stretch of coast.

THE STOCK BOOK.

"Cage Birds Breeding Room Register" is framed on novel lines, and contains many entirely new departures. It absolutely indispensable to everyone interested in the hobby.

COMPILED BY G. E. WESTON.

MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Well-known fanciers have said of the "Stock Book":—"It makes bird-breeding easy." This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his Birds as they should be bred.

NOW IS THE SEASON YOU NEED IT.

This "BREEDING ROOM REGISTER & BIRD-KEEPER'S ACCOUNT BOOK" (copy right) offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room. A full record of the season's breeding experiences. An account of every young bird reared, and how it was disposed of. A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised). A cash account for the year. A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance-sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A Series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibitor from year to year, or over any number of years.

Many useful Emergency and other Hints of great value during the Breeding Season will also be found in its pages.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

14 Days' Free Trial.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

LINNETS! Linnets!! Linnets!!!—Own caught, hand-reared contest singers, real stormers. A great secret is laid bare to lovers of these popular Britishers, which will enable them to rear real stormers. Linnet fanciers, there is a matter that requires dealing with caution; there is a very bad habit, which your pets may have, which must be overcome. Get that "Linnet Nutshell" at once. No. 2, price 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

HAND-REARED PIPING BULLFINCHES.

for 2½d. That's very cheap; too cheap to be true. But we do not mean that exactly. What we do mean is that "Nutshell" No 11. "The Bullfinch." will show you how to catch these richly coloured Britishers; how to hand-rear the young, how to teach "Bullies" to pipe tunes. The price is 2½d. post free, and you can get the book from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

What a fine ambition for a British bird lover! Too high? Not if you've got "Nutshell" No. 1, "The Goldfinch." This booklet shows you the simplest way to catch your own, how to treat the Goldfinch when caught, how to hand-rear the young; how to distinguish sex; and answers innumerable other "how's." For those who prefer buying to catching, there is a valuable section, and feeding troubles are completely overcome. The exhibition Goldfinch is described, and it is possible, if the hints are followed, for every fancier of British to have a winning Goldie. For full information as to moulting, and the best show and stock cages, you cannot better "Nutshell" No. 1, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

TO Lark fanciers: special select singing cock Skylark, splendid shop attraction, can be heard 200 yards; I will match him to sing any Lark in this country; he is a real loud contest bird, and been trained for that purpose; steady and a fine specimen of a real Dunstable Lark, 5/-; approval anywhere. Hear, and see, what you are buying; no fresh-caught rubbish; secret of feeding free. Hundreds of testimonials unsolicited: George Holt, Dunstable.

FOR a full description of two of the most popular softbills, you cannot have a better booklet than "Nutshell" No. 4, "The Song Thrush and Blackbird." With its help you will be able to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition. Included in the work are directions for hand-rearing and the selection of show bird, as well as particulars of cages. "Nutshell" No. 4, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

LOOK YOU HERE.

There is something here that will interest you, so please read it through carefully, for if you wish to have a successful breeding season, you must have birds of good quality, that are already in breeding condition. This is the class of birds I am now offering; every bird a picked one, that will please you and do you good (no wasters or German rubbish here). Let me send you birds on approval; you will be convinced there is nothing to equal them at anything like the prices. Every bird guaranteed superior quality. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers (the king of all songsters), cocks 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; a few hens, same strain, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; specially selected loud singing cock Canaries, the real noise makers, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6 each; feeding and muling hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; champion Yorkshires, bred from and related to noted winners, fine upstanding, tight feathered cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; typical racy hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. Norwich: These are the rooms for high quality and low prices, birds related to the noted winners; cobby Norwich cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/-; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. Send a post card for illustrated price list; all birds on seven days' approval at my risk, and every customer guaranteed satisfaction: E. L. Storey, Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

so as to detect when any of your Rollers are going wrong. How can you detect anything wrong? You don't know? Well, you ought to, for your lack of knowledge will be disastrous to the singing powers of your birds. "Nutshell" No. 10 gives you this knowledge, and if you don't get it, it will be a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Which bird promises to be good with hollow roll, bell-roll, bass-roll, and Koller? How do you cure a bird of noisiness? What are the best training methods and the best preparation for contest singing? For answers to these great questions in Roller Canary-dom, and also full particulars as to correct keeping and breeding, get "Nutshell" No. 10, "The Roller Canary," 2½d. post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

to solve all the intricacies connected with the breeding and exhibiting of Yorkshire Canaries is now offered at 1/1½ post free. "Yorkshire Canaries," by H. W. Battye, illustrated by H. Norman, and A. J. Simpson, is a notable work. It is replete with all that is needful for the beginner, and is extremely valuable to old hands. The chapter on the selection of stock is alone worth the money, and there are 11 other chapters equally rich in valuable hints. See those on Breeding Cinnamon Marks; Crossing; Dressing or Faking; Don'ts for Breeders. "Yorkshire Canaries," the unrivalled manual for breeders of Yorkshires, 1/1½ post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet st., London, E.C.

WONDERFULLY tame and very healthy pet African Grey talking Parrot, follows mistress about the house and though in perfect plumage, wings unclipped, can be taken anywhere on one's finger; 50/- accepted, including cage; being genuine, and as represented shown willingly to bona-fide intending purchaser: Mr. Pool, 25, Marlborough-st., Gainsborough.

COKERNUT husk nests for Budgerigar breeding.—My original "Improved Secure" husks after 20 years' practical breeding experience, competition, and imitation, remain unequalled: largest breeders, dealers, zoo's, etc., prefer them, so don't be deceived by worthless substitutes and disappointing imitations, 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each; cheap husks are dear in the end: Harper, Husk Importer, Wolverhampton.

DO you want a genuine talking Parrot? if so I have Amazons and Greys; in buying a Parrot, remember if you have got one with a pink breast you have been swindled; such are the common Cockatoos, and useless except for aviary, worth 5/- or 6/- retail; denial challenged; I also have selected Yellow and Green Budgerigars, breeding cages for same, and best wired husks; all particulars free: W. Rudd, The Bird Specialist, Norwich.

TALKING African Grey Parrot, undoubtedly finest educated talker living, most distinct talker, over 800 words, long sentences, imitates every one's voice, dances, laughs, sings "Oh dear," "Mary had a little lamb," whistles "Pop goes," "Polly Perkins," comes on hand, kiss, and talks to you; 6 years old; splendid plumage, very hardy bird, fully guaranteed; it's equal at talking seldom seen; approval before payment: Milton, Eagle Chambers, Liverpool.

"THOUGH a freely imported bird (it may be purchased for the modest half-crown) when writing of foreign birds in all their glowing tropical beauty, the Pekin Nightingale is in the very front rank . . . the ideal cage and aviary bird." Thus writes Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell" No. 19, "The Pekin Nightingale." He goes on to show how this charming bird can be managed and bred in captivity, giving full particulars as to its treatment at every stage of its existence; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

COCK Siberian Goldfinch, beauty, house moulted, 20/-; hen German Bullfinch, twice house moulted, laid fertile eggs, paired to above, 7/6; cock Zebra, 4/-; cock Indigo Bunting, coming in colour, 20/-; cock Nonpariel Bunting, rough, 20/-; pair Red Gouldians, nesting now, 70/-; cock Bearded Reedling 7/-; all acclimatised and healthy; cock Seifert Rollers from 7/6, seen any time: Francke, Wine Merchant, 3, Belsize Parade, Hampstead N.W.

ROSELLAS, splendid pair, outdoors two winters, 45/-; 6 adult cock Green Budgerigars, outdoor aviary bred, 2/6 each, 12/6 the lot; 1 adult yellow ditto, 3/6; cock Zebra Finch, outdoor aviary bred, 3/-; cock Green Singing Finch, 3/-; cock Ribbon Finch, 2/-; pair Spice Birds, 2/6; pair Mask Weavers, 2/6, 3 Australian Necklace Doves, 17/6; 3 Ringneck Doves, 2/6; 1 Tricolour Nun, 1/3; cock Steelfinch, 2/-; all outdoor and guaranteed in perfect health: Green, Scruton, Bedale, R.S.O.

NOTICE! To those about to buy a Grey Parrot. There are many points to look for when making your purchase, ways of telling at a glance in what state of health the bird is. Though it is difficult to distinguish sex, there are means. The Grey Parrot is a delicate bird, and the feeding of a newly-imported specimen is therefore a matter of the utmost importance. Then, the Parrot acclimatised, care with its general diet is very needful; there are many foods which it will readily eat, but which must be rigidly avoided. With due care you can make a grand talker of a "Grey," and quickly, too, if you know how. What is a common mistake which Parrot lovers make? The answer to this question, and to every other concerning the keeping of this popular bird in health and condition will be found in "Nutshell" No. 17, "The Grey Parrot," by Wesley T. Page; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

FOREIGN bird fanciers requiring sound healthy foreign Finches, Parrakeets, and Talking Parrots, should call and inspect the finest selection of foreign birds in the provinces, all birds imported direct, not a backyard aviary or the raking up of other bird shops; all birds on view at any time; over two thousand new arrivals last week: Cordon Bleus, Fire Finches, Green Singing Finches, Grey Singing Finches, Steel Finches, 3/6; matched pairs, Avadavats, or Tiger Finches, 3/- pair; Tricoloured Nuns, 3/- pair; Bengalese, 4/- pair; Nonetti Finches, from India, 3/6 pair; Masked Weavers, 3/- pair; Grey Javas, Waxbills, Nuns, Mannikins, Silver Bills, Spice Birds, Weavers, Combassous, Bishops, Cutthroats, all 2/-; genuine matched pair Scarlet Madagascar Weavers, full colour, 4/- each, 5/6 pair; Yellow Bishops, showing colour, 4/- pair; Paradise Whydahs, showing colour, 5/- pair; White Javas, very fine, 9/6 pair; Moustache Parrakeets, like paint, 4/6 each, 8/- pair, outdoors; Orange Cheek Waxbills, 3/- pair; Pink Cheek Waxbills, 2/6 pair; Golden-breasted Waxbills, 3/6 pair; Green Budgerigars, adults 5/9 pair, hens, 3/3, yellows 8/6, hens 4/6; Senegal Parrakeets, perfect, 7/6 each: Napoleon Weavers, showing colour, 3/6 pair: Rose Cockatoos, 6/6; Lemon-Crests, 17/6; Bare-eyed Cockatoos, 16/6; large Mealy Amazon, 32/6; Blue-fronted Amazon, 30/- 35/-, and 40/-; African Greys, 37/6, 45/-, and 60/-; all birds despatched same day as order arrives. No waiting: G. Chapman, Direct Importer of Foreign Birds, Birmingham, and at High-st., Sheffield, Pelham-st., Nottingham.

NOTICE.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

GREY PARROT.

Beautiful young Grey Parrot and cage, thoroughly acclimatised, 25/-: Seward, Menagerie, Hatton Garden, Liverpool. Tel. 6260 Cen.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds. 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

Singing Contests.

WIGAN.

Owing to a mistake of the affiliation, Mr. McAllister put a letter in CAGE BIRDS, which I think he will put all right this week, and all members of the affiliated clubs may come to our sing on 18th, without fear of being expelled.—J. Ashurst, Sec.

PONTEFRACT (Woodman Inn).

Weekly contest, May 11th. Winners: B. Nelson, 1st and 2nd; P. Eshelby, 3rd; also May 12, open contest; winners: 1st, C. Scott; 2nd, B. Nelson; 3rd, T. Piper. Members' contest at Whitsuntide. Members please rally round. Some good prizes will be given.—Wm. Beard, Hon. Sec.

WESTHOUGHTON.

Members' sing, held May 11, at Horse Shoe Inn, Wingates, when 12 birds competed before a large company. The singing was somewhat poor. Result: 1, T. Woodward; 2, J. Woodward; 3, J. Coop; 4, R. Crompton. Timers, J. Brown and R. Crompton. Tappers, T. Woodward and J. Coop. Minute man, Bob Wood. Open contest will be held May 25, for time singing only.—J. Woodward, Sec.

DURHAM.

A Linnet sing held Thinford Inn, Ferryhill, May 11th, 108 birds competed for the four prizes; the largest entry for some time, and some grand singing was heard. Result: 1, 2, 4, Brady and Co.; 3, Boyd and Shoulder. Judges, Messrs. Gardener, Brown and Mills. Mr. Sam Ord, of Dead Bank, presented the prizes. Joint secs., Fairless and Reed. Next contest at Black Horse, Elvet, Durham, on May 25th, when £2 cash will be given.—G. Reed, Sec.

LEIGH.

Open contest, May 11th, when 41 birds entered for 8 prizes and some very fair singing was done, but the clubs that the Globe Linnet Club have done so much for were notable absentees. This club patronises other contests to at least 25 per cent. of their entries, and when it comes to our turn, others are conspicuous by absence. Winners: W. Barnes, 1; R. Howcroft, 2; J. McAllister, 3; B. Jones, 4. Time, J. Poole, 150, 1; F. Kennedy, 122, 2; R. Statham, 97, 3; R. Farhurst, 85, 4. Judges for quality, W. Barnes, J. Gibbins, and J. W. Jones. Time, J. Statham and R. Disley. Tappers, J. Evens and G. Amison; timekeeper, J. McAllister. Will all affiliated members kindly attend their respective club houses on Friday night, as I am trying to arrange with Wigan or Atherton to run a contest on May 18th. As I cannot let all members know, I will write to each club house which contest they must attend.—J. McAllister Sec.

FERRYHILL.

Contest for Linnets, held at Mr. Atkinson's, Thinford Inn, Ferryhill, Durham, May 11th, when there were 108 entries, a record for Durham County, all the best birds being there, and some excellent singing was heard. Prize winners: Messrs. Brady and Heslop, 1, 2, 4, silver cup, copper kettle, and alarm clock; 3rd, Boyd and Shoulders, set of carvers. Some good birds were not placed, namely, Wilson and Adams, Franks, McQuirks, Parkins, Bairstows, Johnsons, Pikes, and others too numerous to mention. Next contest at Mr. Dodds, Hamsteels Colliery Inn, Quebec, May 18th. Fanciers please note that after contest we intend starting a Linnet club, and we hope fanciers will turn up in crowds, all being welcome. £1 added to all entrance of 6d. a bird. Brady and Heslop will sing 4 birds against 4, three minutes up and 5 down, for £5 up to £20. Business meant; first come, first served.—Hewitson (Sec. pro tem.).

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

Open contest, May 11th, at the Northumberland Arms, where 36 birds competed for three valuable prizes. Briggs 1, 3, Linnet King of Murton 2. Judge, Mr. G. Robson; timekeeper, T. Wilkinson.

BUSLINGTHORPE.

Quality contest held Skinner's Arms, May 11th, when a double contest took place. 1, Sellars; 2, Clark; 3, Sheard; bye, Nevens and Sellars. 2nd contest. 1, Clark; 2, Nevens; 3, Lunn. Judges, Messrs. C. Clayton, Hays, and Playfort. Also May 12th. 1, 2, Ward; 3, Sellars.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Open affiliated contest for time and quality, May 25th, at headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, when all the affiliated Linnet clubs of Lancashire will be obliged to attend. Singing to commence at 2 prompt. Entrance fee 1s. per bird.—R. Hayhurst, Sec.

SALFORD L.C.

Members are requested to note that owing to the Wigan Club holding a contest on the 18th inst., we will have a contest at headquarters on the 19th, at 7.30 prompt, when a good muster of members are expected to make it a success.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week-end contest at Prince Albert Inn, when 31 picked birds in Leeds were entered to sing for four good prizes, given by Mrs. A. Saynor. The largest entry this year, and the best singing that has been heard for some time. Judges, Messrs. C. Lorriman and H. Hayes; timekeeper, A. Bryan. 1st H. Playforth, 2nd T. Howlett, 3rd J. Clark, 4th A. Binns.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

KIPPAX.

We hope to have a good entry in our open-to-all-Yorkshire sing on Whit-Saturday, May 25th, 1912, writes Mr. R. Plows, Hon. Sec., Kippax Linnet Club.

Members' sing at The Commercial Hotel, May 11, when only 11 birds competed. There was some good singing. J. Liversidge, jun., won, his bird doing 66 sec; 2, L. Weighle; 3, O. Potter. Timekeepers, J. Wallis and R. Plows.—R. Plows, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest, May 11th. 50 birds sang for three good prizes, and some very good singing was heard. Result: 1, W. Nelson, 84; 2, A. Towler, 69; 3, E. Smith, 65. Also on May 12th, 37 birds entered for three good prizes, 3 minutes' sing. Very good time was done by most of the birds. Winners: 1, W. Nelson, 79; 2, J. Smith, 60; 3, A. Liversidge, 52. All members are requested to get clear on the books for our big sing on Whit Saturday—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

Mr. Hill gave three special prizes; 20 birds entered. 1, Thompson, 76sec.; 2, Cole, 63sec.; 3, Bisby 60sec.; Griffiths 59sec.; Thompson 55sec. Also May 12th, Mr. Hill gave three special prizes. 23 birds entered. 1, Thompson, 65sec.; 2, Cole, 64sec.; Driver (3) 60 secs., 57sec., 54 sec.; Thompson 54sec.; Booker 40sec.; Albert, 46sec.; Griffiths, 44sec.; Jack, 44sec.; Cole, 45sec. Contests every week end; first pair hung at 3, Saturday next. All members must pay up May 19th, for Whitsuntide contest.—A. Thompson.

LEEDS.

Usual weekly Linnet contests for quality, at Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, May 11. 29 of the best birds in Leeds sung for four good prizes given by Mr. W. Tillotson. Some very good singing was heard before a crowded house. 1st T. Stead, 2nd C. Ward, 3rd Butler, 4th T. Chadwick. Also same day 14 birds sung for three prizes. 1st A. Richardson, 2nd T. Stead, 3rd T. Chadwick. Judges, S. Hardcastle and W. Naylor. Also May 12, when 45 birds faced the judges, who gave every satisfaction. 1st J. Bland, 2nd and 4th T. Stead, 3rd T. Chadwick. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor, and W. Sissons.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

The Cuckoo.

Next to the Robin, the inharmonious Cuckoo is, perhaps, the most popular bird that we have in these islands. Everyone looks forward to hearing the Cuckoo's loud monotonous call in the spring, for it comes "to pick up the dirt." It loves its old haunts, to which, like the salmon, it annually returns; and seeks, not only the familiar bush, but also the nest of that kind of bird which was erst-while its foster parent. It is a great mistake to imagine that when the Cuckoo has placed its egg in a nest it forgets all about it. Each day the Cuckoo will visit the nest to see if the egg is safe. If it should have been taken, the bird will lay another egg. But it will not do this at once. It waits until the birds which have been robbed have built another nest, and when the full number of eggs is laid, then, and not till then, will the Cuckoo lay again. Later, it is interesting to note how the young fledgling interloper ousts from the nest its foster brethren and sisters, and how the supply of its insatiable appetite wears to skin and bone its foster parents. It is, indeed, a greedy, obtrusive, selfish bird.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

Will You Get Us Associates?

NEW SCHEME OPENS OUR SECOND YEAR.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

A First Step in our Second Year.

I think that all LEAGUE members will hear with interest that, in order to encourage the proper keeping of birds in captivity, it has been decided to institute ASSOCIATES OF CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Anyone who will sign the coupon, which will be found in another column, and get five friends to sign a similar coupon, taken from an issue of this or any other date, will, on sending the six coupons, together with a penny stamp for postage, receive one of the LEAGUE badges, and will be enrolled on our list of Associates. There will be no charge whatever either for the badge or for Associate membership. All that a reader has to do is to sign a coupon, get five friends to sign one each, and send them all to me with a penny stamp. Ordinary members of the LEAGUE may become Associates as well, by complying with the simple conditions set forth, and will receive a badge without charge, and Associates who may not be members of the LEAGUE may also join the LEAGUE upon payment of the annual subscription.

Our Certificates of Membership.

Members will recollect that in accordance with a very generally expressed wish I promised to arrange for a Certificate of Membership to be prepared. This has now been done, and copies will shortly be ready. The certificates will be fifteen inches by eleven inches in dimensions, and will be prepared in two forms—in colours and in black and white. Either kind will be suitable for framing, and should form an acceptable addition to the pictures on any one's walls. The price will be sixpence, post free, for the black and white certificate, and one shilling, post free, for the coloured pattern. Remittances may be sent either separately or with the renewal subscriptions as they fall due.

Keep Your Membership Receipts.

In the first year of the LEAGUE'S existence, the possession of a LEAGUE badge was evidence that the wearer was a paid member of the LEAGUE, and at many shows during last season wearers of our badges were admitted at a reduced price (in some cases without charge at all). I hope that the shows granting this concession to LEAGUE members in the forthcoming season will be even more numerous than during last year, but the mere possession of a LEAGUE badge will not in itself procure admission at a reduced fee. It will be, therefore, necessary for members to keep their membership receipts as vouchers for reduced admission to such shows as may extend the concession to us.

Our Recruiting Competitions.

The work of deciding the winners of these is well in hand; and I hope to make a definite announcement next week. The winners of the two £5 prizes, one for the individual member introducing most recruits, and the other for the Society having the greatest number of LEAGUE members seems pretty certain to prove Mr. G. H. Peck, of Bexley, who has introduced fifty-one members during the year, and the Sheffield O.S., which has forty-one of its members as members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. If any individual member, or any Society, has a greater record than these, I should be glad to know, to save any mistake. With regard to the four £1 cash prizes for the "Societies whose total nominations to the LEAGUE show the best average per member," I shall, of course, be unable to allot these without the information, which can only come from Secretaries of Societies themselves. I shall be glad, therefore, to hear from any Secretary what proportion of his members are also members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Some Easily Kept Foreigners.

By B. C. BRIARS (Enfield).

An Interesting and Practical Article on the more moderate priced foreign birds.

A "Dancing" Bird.

Another terpsichorean bird is the Bengalese. In colour this bird is mottled brown and white, and the tail feathers frequently curve away from the body. The song is of a muffled kind, and appears to be a laboured effort, during which the bird hops along the perch facing alternate directions. The Combasson, when in colour, is of a lovely dark blue tint and well worth a place in the aviary. I would warn anyone against purchasing this bird when half in colour, as the change of quarters at such a time seems frequently to kill them. I lost four birds by purchasing in this state, till a fancier friend gave me this advice. At breeding time the bird sings, and displays the plumage like a Sparrow; but the song is irritating and harsh. I have also noticed that a sac in the throat is distended at this period, and the bird is somewhat quarrelsome. Strange to say, my own bird absolutely ignores the hen. The eye of the Combassou is one of its outstanding features, being prominent and lustrous, with a wonderful expression. Grey and Green Singing Finches also make capital pets, but it is much best to keep these birds in pairs, as single specimens are apt to be pugnacious. The song of the Grey species is much the sweetest, as far as my experience goes. Both these birds will breed with the Canary.

The Tiny Waxbills.

Waxbills of all species are inoffensive and interesting little creatures. The tiny Gold-breasted species are the pick, and, except when moulting, are hardy birds. At that period there is always a danger of their getting featherbound, and you find an apparently healthy bird suddenly ill and full of "quills." To keep warm and feed generously is the best course to take, but a sick Waxbill always seems to mope and die as soon as attacked. The Orange-cheeked and Red-eared are also common species, while the rarer kinds are the Violet-eared, Dufresne's, and the St. Helena. White Java Sparrows make a good contrast in a mixed aviary, but if the smaller sorts are kept, plenty of room should be allowed, as the Javas are apt to fly around and bowl over the smaller birds, which they are also likely to harry about if in too close a proximity. In purchasing White Javas, care should be taken that they are white in down as well as in feather. The Grey Javas are good birds out of doors, and, furthermore, are cheap.

The Aviary and the Feeding.

The foreign bird aviary should be as large as possible, and easy to keep clean. My own plan is to place the birds in an outdoor aviary about May, and keep them indoors during the winter, placing the small and delicate ones in the kitchen, and drafting the hardier (as Javas and Weavers) into a large flight in a spare room. These are put out first, and lead the weaker to the various food vessels, etc. This plan obviates the use of heating apparatus, the grass and shrubs in the aviary get a rest, while a team of exhibition British luxuriate and harden in the aviary shelter. All the utensils in the indoor aviary are white pottery, and the fountains are glass.

I feed on spray, Indian, red and white millet, and canary seed. I also supply a small quantity of insect mixture, moistened with milk, occasional hard-boiled egg and biscuit (ground), grapes, and orange segments (skinned), apple, and a fig; mealworms, sugar, rock salt (occasionally), and a little honey on the edge of an empty seed vessel. Parrish's food is good during the moult, the stains can be removed with ashes, or by putting small shot into the fountains and shaking. Green food: Flowering grass, canary seedlings, groundsel, chickweed, and small washed dandelion leaves. Cuttlefish is a much-appreciated item. It should be scraped when dirty, and never allowed to lie on the floor of the cage. All foreigners revel in a bath; a photographic developing dish is a good vessel, but the bottom should be covered with some substance which the birds' feet can grip, or they slip and fear to go in. If in the aviary indoors, care should be taken that they are not in a draught. Outdoors, they can be relied upon themselves in this respect.

In showing foreigners, too much stress cannot be laid upon the fact that the bird, to do itself justice, should be absolutely used to its show cage, and periods spent therein every day (and at night) for a fortnight previous to the show are not too long: otherwise the bird hugs its perch, and shows terror on being handled. If "schooled" well, a good foreigner is as steady in the showroom as at home, and can be relied upon to give a good account of itself. In conclusion, I would advise all amateurs in their care of their stock to remember the old adage, "There is no eye like the master's eye."

Respecting the Wimbledon C.B.S. ramble for Sunday next, May 19th, our sec., Mr. Smith, omitted to state there is a second train, namely at 12.55, from Wimbledon Station, writes Mr. H. Dixon. I shall be travelling down by the first train (10.20) and will also be at Epsom Station to meet any intending members and friends who care to follow on by the second train. The place chosen is Epsom Common and Ashstead Woods; book to Epsom Station; fare 10d. return. Lunch, 1s. 6d.; tea, 9d.

The outing of the N.B.B. and M. Club is fixed for June 1. All fanciers and friends are invited. The morning party leave Waterloo (South Station) by the 9.30 train and book to Oxshott. The afternoon party leave by the 1.37 train (also from South Station) and book to Cobham, each member to take his own ticket and ask for cheap booking. Those who would like to join us should send a postcard not later than the 28th inst. to Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, stating which party they would like to join. This is most important, as arrangements have to be made for both lunch and tea.

An excellent illustrated price list has just been issued by Mr. J. Pitchford (218, London Road, Stoke-on-Trent). It contains an up-to-date assortment of fanciers' goods, seeds, foods, etc., and the prices are most moderate. Mr. Pitchford is an experienced fancier, and well understands the needs of the bird-keeper.

Many thanks for recognising my endeavour to make CAGE BIRDS popular by my fancy dress, writes Mr. E. Curley (Paddington). Have had many useful hints from "C.B.," and will continue to make an effort on its behalf. Would be grateful if you could thank Messrs. Powers and Russell.

OBITUARY.

Death has been very busy in the Fancy during the past few days, the sad duty devolving upon us to announce the passing away of several prominent bird-keepers, whose demise will be widely regretted.

MR. THOS. SMITH (Glasgow).

Mr. Thos. Smith, who died on May 12, at the age of 60, was known to a wide circle of friends as an ardent lover of the Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries, his every endeavour being put forward to increase their popularity. He did most excellent work as secretary of the Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A. Many very fine displays of birds were held in Glasgow while he filled this post, he being still "in harness" at the time of his demise. He was also connected with several other societies, and of recent years was the recipient of a splendid testimonial from his fellow fanciers, as a mark of their appreciation of his sterling work and high principles. Mr. Smith has ever been a staunch advocate of Hybrid breeding, and achieved some notable successes. Many instructive articles, etc., from his pen have from time to time appeared in the columns of CAGE BIRDS. Always genial and unassuming, and ever ready to impart information to beginners, or whoever needed it, the deceased gentleman was very highly respected, both in public and private life, and the sympathy of the Fancy will go out to his family and relatives in their great loss

MR. THOS. TAYLOR (Gateshead).

We regret to hear from Mr. J. Davison of the death of this well-known and much-esteemed Tyneside fancier, who has passed away when quite in the prime of life. Mr. "Tom" Taylor was an enthusiast in all that appertained to the Crested Canary, and bred and owned some of the finest specimens of the present day. He was a well-known visitor at most of the leading exhibitions, from Plymouth in the South to Edinburgh in the North, and his hearty manner and genial disposition made him hosts of friends. His unexpected death will be very widely deplored. Mr. Taylor at one time filled with distinction the office of secretary to the Gateshead C.B.S. and earned the good-will of all with whom he came into contact by his courtesy and his business-like methods. He was a splendid example of the best type of North-country bird-lover, and to those who were near and dear to him the sympathy of the Fancy will be extended in their day of sorrow.

MR. W. PAGE (London).

News of the death of Mr. W. Page, of Bishopsgate, E.C., will be received with widespread regret in metropolitan birdie circles, where this good fancier was very well known and held in the highest esteem. He was a keen exhibitor, interested in birds of all kinds, and a member of several societies; on the council of the City and Suburban A.C.B., at whose meetings he will be sadly missed, and the committee of the National British Bird and Mule Club. Mr. Page was but 36 years of age, and succumbed to pneumonia after an illness of brief duration. Fanciers will join with us in tendering our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Page, who has so early been left to mourn his loss. A large number of lovely floral tributes were sent by various societies and friends anxious to pay their last respects to one so well liked, for Mr. Page's jolly disposition and upright character had earned him the regard and good-will of all. The London Fancy is much the poorer by reason of his demise. Mr. V. Wynn, of the City and Suburban A.C.B., writes: "Mr. Page's death will leave a gap in our association that can hardly be filled, and it seems so terrible he should be taken away when he has scarcely reached the prime of manhood."

The Avicultural Magazine, the organ of the Avicultural Society, opens this month with an account by Mr. E. J. Brook of the Hunstein's Bird of Paradise, with a coloured illustration by Mr. Goodchild. Mr. R. Staples-Browne continues his Diary of Birds seen on the White Nile. The Hon. Mrs. Bampfylde gives her experiences of two years with foreign birds. Mr. W. A. Harding contributes some Aviary Notes, including the breeding of a Hybrid between a Swainson's and a Red-collared Lorikeet. Mr. H. D. Astley writes on the Blue Chaffinch of Teneriffe, and other items include Bird Notes from the Zoo, by the Curator; an instalment of "Practical Bird-keeping," by Dr. A. G. Butler; correspondence, review, etc.

A COLOURED PLATE FREE.

A Coloured Plate should be found in every copy of this week's CAGE BIRDS. We have decided to issue these, from our surplus stock, for the benefit of new readers of our periodical. We would ask all old friends who may already have included in their stock the plate they receive to confer upon us the favour of passing it along to someone amongst their acquaintances who is interested in birds and likely to join the ranks of practical bird-keepers.

Mocking Bird Food.

Mr. O. J. Stupple writes as follows.—Having kept both hardbills and softbills, I shall be looking forward to know from Mr. J. A. Blow what his Mocking Bird food consists of, as mentioned in his letter last week.

Good Tidings for Jarrow.

We have secured a good secretary, so I am therefore calling a special meeting for May 22 to have him elected, writes Mr. W. Bowen, sec. pro tem. of the Jarrow, Hebburn and Dis. C.B.S. Will all members please attend and give him a thorough good welcome?

Northern Border and S.F.C.C.

I have removed from Heaton Hall Road to 5, Falmouth Road, Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and secretaries wishing to apply for the patronage of the Northern Border and S.F.C.C. should do so at once, writes Mr. M. C. Potts, the hon. sec.

Norwich Plainheads at Nottingham.

Referring to my memo. of last week re the Norwich Plainhead Club Show, writes Mr. Wilkinson, I find I made a slight mistake in the wording—it should read "cup" show instead of "club" show to be held in conjunction with our open show at Nottingham on Nov. 9 and 11.

Manchester and N.C.O.S. Ramble.

On Sunday, May 19, we are having a ramble to Broadbottom and Mottram. Train leaves London Road Station at two o'clock. Return fare, 6d. Mr. Moorbey will meet us at Mottram and conduct us. Hoping to see plenty of fanciers present. Friends cordially invited. —H. Boothman, hon. sec.

National Green-marked Y.C.C.

Committee meeting at Market Tavern, Bradford, on May 18, 2.30 p.m. Will all members please attend? The annual general meeting will be held at 3 p.m. at the same place. Agenda:—Election of officers, balance sheet, money specials paid out, new rules, etc.—F. Armstrong, sec.

Green Canary Assoc's Patronage.

Societies are requested to send in their applications for the Green Canary Association's patronage without delay—twelve classes required (four Yorkshires, four Norwich, and four Borders). Every consideration will be given, and applications are invited for all or any of the varieties named.—Geo. Green (36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool).

Young Mule's Good Record.

With reference to the Linnet Mule depicted on our frontispiece this week, Mr. E. C. Dawson writes:—He was shown six times, result as follows: 2nd Dublin, 1st and special Dundalk, 2nd Cork and Provincial show, 3rd Cork Cage Bird, etc., show, 1st and special locals, 4th L.C.B.A.—not a bad performance for a young bird, Goldfinch Mules always being against him, in fact, my old champion, his stable companion, giving him "the knock." I thank you for the honour of placing him on the front page of CAGE BIRDS, our leading paper.

'PHOSTO'

For Canaries and Cage Birds.

The extraordinary interest aroused by the letter in your issue of May 4th from warrants an extract of same for those who may not have seen it—

"I was a bit shy in starting, but I thought I would give it a trial, and I did on hens feeding their young; and, believe me, I never saw hens feed so well before in my life, and you know I am not a chicken at the job. To tell you the truth the young didn't know how to die. All the hens went off the scratch feeding grand. I bred more young last year than I have ever done before, and not a weakly bird amongst them. I continued the 'PHOSTO' right through the moult with the colour feed, and I can assure you I have never had them moult better. They seem to shake their plumage off much quicker, and then the colour comes so much better for it. I used it in a powder form and gave half teaspoonful to one egg with the usual bread crumbs."

In Tins, post free, on receipt of 1/-, 2/6, or 4/6.

THE THREE GRACES.

THE BULLFINCH AND ITS FAMILIAR HAU

As a Pet and Exhibition Bird, with Its Management.

THE Bullfinch is an inhabitant of nearly the whole of England. It is very fond of hedgerows, sheltered woods and thickets, but in the spring you will find it has left those familiar haunts for your gardens and orchards, and becomes an enemy of the gardener, as in its search for food it is found picking the buds off the fruit trees. It is a great lover of blackberries and brambles, and you can always be assured that the Bullfinch is not far away from the woods and hedgerows where the blackberries are plentiful in the autumn. As the year advances into winter you will find it on the country roads and waste ground that is overgrown with weeds, and I have heard people ask why it is away from the trees and woods, but if you will stand a little while and keep very still you will see that it is very busy feeding on the dock and plantain seed which is a dainty of the Bullfinch, while it is also fond of the privet berries.

"Bullie's" Nest.

The Bullfinch very often makes preparations for building in April or May, and we frequently find the nests of this species in the quickset hedgerow that runs alongside the railway; this being a sort of private ground it is not often the nests get destroyed. The Bullfinch is a very lazy bird in the matter of the form of nest building (compared with other birds), as it builds a very loose and untidy affair composed chiefly of twigs and fine roots, or "wicks," with a slight inner lining of horsehair, and built very loosely together; and when you see the eggs in the nest you think they will drop through the bottom, but the birds always keep them safe in the nest if they are not disturbed. They mostly lay about four or five eggs, which are of a pale colour speckled or streaked with purple at the thick end. They take thirteen or fourteen days to hatch, and as a rule the hen sits her nest very close, and will permit you almost to touch her before she will leave the nest. The male bird sits close by her side, and pays her every attention.

When the young are hatched, both the parent birds take up the duties of feeding their offspring, and they feed them from the crop until they are able to feed themselves, when the parents commence to build again. They usually have about three nests, and have not a deal of time to spare between these nests.

Plumage Differences.

The plumage of the young birds differs considerably from that of the parent birds, the breast being a yellowish brown in colour, and the black upon the head and the grey upon the back a greyish brown, until after the first moult, when they assume the colour of the parents. Some of these young Bullies are sold as hens, people being under the impression that they are all right if they are pale in colour, but I always think it is a good plan to wait until after the moult before you sex them, as this is most difficult while the birds are in the nest feather. Some people are under the impression too that to feed a Bullie with plenty of hemp seed will make it moult out a black one, but it is a great mistake. If you will notice the birds in their wild state, you will see a black one occasionally. There was, I may say, a Bullie here (near Barnsley) a short time ago that was nearly white, but it had the misfortune to get shot, as someone wanted it for stuffing; they thought it would look better thus than flying about in its wild state!

When the Birds are Fresh Caught.

Many of these birds that are fresh caught it is very difficult to get to eat when in captivity; and if they are not well looked after they will soon die. I have always found it a good plan with fresh-caught Bullies either to steep their seed (which makes it easier for them to crack) or to crush it myself for a short time, as in many cases the fresh-caught birds have beaks that are soft and are unable to crack the hard seed, but they can manage to eat it in its natural state.

It is also a good idea to put the seed and water inside the cage for a short time. Many people put the seed and water outside, and leave the birds to find it for themselves, but it is a wrong idea, as there are not many fresh-caught Bullies that can find their seed and water when it is outside their cages, and they soon begin to sit and pine with hunger; and then you can hear their owners say they cannot keep fresh-caught birds. It is, further, a good plan to have ready for the fresh caught Bullies a cage about 16 inches by 9 inches by 10 inches, and put some linen or something light on the top; then when the birds knock their heads against it, they don't hurt themselves. Have a blind for the front of your cage, and let it hang down to allow enough light for the birds to see to eat by; you must gradually lift it a little every day until it gets to the top, and then take it off. Let your birds stay where there are plenty of folks knocking about, and they will be ready for the stock cage when you take the blind off. Let them have plenty of water, as they are fond of a bath, and this pulls them together and keeps them clean.

Keep their cages clean, or their feet will soon get clogged up, and it will make them lame. They do not take a lot of catering for, as they always do well on plain canary seed, with a bit of hemp every day for a tit-bit, and a bit of wild seed once a week. Give them also a bit of green food (chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, and others). By giving these, they soon get to look for you to bring them something, and will soon take it out of your fingers. Be careful not to frighten them in any way, or you will be some time making friends again, as it takes a long time for a bird to forget anything.

The Bullfinch as a Pet.

Having been a British bird fancier for a number of years, and keeping some different species in my room, I have been able to study their n… species that takes to a… most readily. It is a bi… little care. In its wild s… nature, and in the hardest o… other birds looking for scraps … own out, but you can always find it in the backgr…

When you take the Bullfinch into captivity and use a little care, you and he willsoon be the best of friends. He is probably the boldest and most friendly of all British birds. He is not a bird merely to chirp when you offer him any dainty, but he will take it readily.

Bullfinches love pretending to fight; they open their beaks very wide, and drop their wings until they think themselves really alarming, but it is usually all a sham. I have had a good many, but I have only found one to hold its own against other birds. When the Bullfinch is in a merry mood, he loves you to play with him, and he is soon in high glee; he will nip your finger at any opportunity. You will find him very good company, and he will sit and make a funny sound as though laughing to himself or trying to mimic.

Exhibiting the Species.

This handsome bird now possesses a prominent place on the show bench. It can hold its own there, if it is not classed with the larger species of seed-eating birds. When selecting a Bullie for a show bird, select one with as much size as you can get, and see that he is perfectly straight on his legs, with perfect feet and no claws off. He must have good wing carriage, and the wings must not cross each other at the tips. He must also have his tail perfectly straight. He should have a good, even cap, not broken in any way, and a nicely rounded chest.

He must have a deep red breast, with slightly shaded grey back, showing a patch of white on the rump. He should have a good black head to form a clean cut cap, coming a shade under the eye at each side, and a bit lower on the throat, forming a wide bib, and well down on the back of the neck. He must have a black tail, with no broken feathers. The wings should be a delicate grey in colour on the shoulders with a white bar across each, and let them match each other for colour and position; these bars must not be quite halfway down the wing, but more towards the shoulder. The wings should finish a good black in colour, with no broken feathers. He must have an even beak, and the top not overgrown. Get the bird as steady as you can, and then he will not flutter when he is handled at shows.

Always send him out as clean as possible in a clean cage, and see that his claws are not overgrown, or he may get a foot fast and become lamed. Give him free access to plenty of water, and you will find this a great help to you in getting him ready for show; it will improve him altogether.

TIMELY HINTS.

Our New Helpful Competition

*Simultaneous Breeding.

Breeders who have many pairs of birds to breed with would like all their hens to be sitting about the same time if possible; the following method I have tried with success: First get your birds into condition as set down weekly in Cage Birds, then place each cock Canary with the hen allotted for it, afterwards letting a common hen Canary fly about the room; you will be surprised how soon they will pair up. I have used this method, and I manage to get all my birds paired in two days. Then if any hen leaves her eggs or young, it is an easy matter to distribute them amongst the others.—F. G. Ball, Shotton, Chester.

*Gentles for Insectivorous Birds.

Now is the time to prepare for a supply of gentles and flies from October to March next. First procure any piece of waste meat, a dead cat or dog or rabbit, and let it be fly-blown. When the gentles begin to be alive, bury it and them in soft moist earth. You may dig up gentles at any time when required. For flies, put some of these gentles in a glass bottle in a warm corner, and in the course of two days they will turn to flies, though not very nimble, and become easy prey for any bird. The best method of cleaning gentles is to put them into some dry clay to scour themselves.—H. Hornblower, Doseley, Dawley, Salop.

*A Perching Wrinkle.

I have a Linnet that would not stand upon a perch in a breeding cage, so I hit upon a very simple way of curing him. I put him in a cage and I laid a few perches near the bottom between the wires, so that he had to stand upon them whether he liked it or not. Naturally he preferred the higher perches, and I am pleased to say that as soon as I took the bottom perches away he took to the ordinary perch without further trouble. I am a successful breeder, and I can safely say that I owe all my success to Cage Birds.—E. Barber (1, St. James's Path, St. James's Street, Walthamstow).

A Cheap Egg Food.

Now that the breeding season is in full swing and egg food is a necessity, this hint may be useful. Hens' eggs that have proved clear on testing are to be had very cheaply, or for nothing. Boil these for ten minutes, and use in the ordinary way. I find them answer the purpose admirably.—H. Hornblower (Doseley, Dawley, Salop).

Collecting Dandelion Seed.

Dandelion seed for the winter is a splendid "tit-bit," and now is the time to gather same, as the heads are fast ripening. My method is to gather as many as possible; then get a sharp knife and cut off the white. Then place them on a board in front of birdroom window, when they will soon open out. When perfectly dry, store same in tins for winter use.—W. Ratcliff (Grantham).

*The Usefulness of Olive Oil in the Bird Room.

For egg binding place one drop in the bird's vent then wrap bird up in flannel and the bird will soon pass the egg. For severe colds, asthma, wheezing chronic diarrhoea warm a teaspoon, place one drop of oil in, then give to the sufferer; it will cure these diseases instantly. For baldness, rub the bald part once a week with the oil and the feathers will soon reappear. For sticky or dirty feet, rub the feet of the bird well with the oil. Also by rubbing the side wires of the cage front door you will stop that scratching noise which disturbs a sitting hen.—F. G. Ball (Shotton, Chester).

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg-Food.

Some Remarkably Interesting Methods Revealed.

OUR essay competition on the subject of the rearing of young birds without the use of egg in any form whatever, resulted in a fair number of contributions, reaching us, and the experiences related therein will, we are sure, prove of intense interest to the host of bird-lovers who indulge in bird-breeding, and, in a lesser degree, the rearing of birds by hand. In addition to the essay which we have adjudged the winner of the prize (one guinea cash), we purpose publishing extracts from whatever other contributions seem to us of sufficiently wide interest, together with a synopsis embodying any out-of-the-way points raised by various fanciers.

In the first place, we have to point out that many of the competitors advocate very similar systems of feeding; this, though, was only to be expected. In general popularity, however, one substitute for egg-food seems to stand right ahead; it is bread and milk. A large number of competitors "plump" for this as the best of all alternatives, and judging by the measure of success they have achieved by its use there can be no question as to its efficiency; further, it is easily prepared, and has the crowning merit of cheapness.

Several writers appear to have overlooked the plain rule that advertised (proprietary) goods, also home-made cakes, etc., which contained egg, were not eligible substitutes within the meaning of this competition; their contributions have therefore had to be passed by.

It will be readily understood that it was no easy task to select the winning essay, as the information had necessarily to be taken more-or-less on trust, so to speak; opportunity of giving any system a practical test being impossible in the time at our disposal. We have decided to award the guinea to

Mr. Thomas Stanley,
Birmingham.

This fancier's method seems to us well reasoned and feasible, while it is set out in a very understandable manner; further, it breaks into new ground, though this, of course, is not necessarily a point in its favour. We reproduce Mr. Stanley's essay below:—

The Winning Essay.

The main factors which guided me in seeking something to take the place of egg-food were the following six points, essential, in my mind, to arrive at the ideal food:—

(1) A food readily taken by the old birds and easy of digestion by the young when newly hatched.

(2) Which possessed the equivalent nutritive properties of the egg.

(3) Which would not be likely to turn sour in hot weather or under the most adverse circumstances, so as to reduce to a minimum the danger to the young.

(4 Which was easily prepared in any required quantity.

(5) Which could be supplied to the birds in the early morning in sufficient quantity to last the old birds and a brood of young all day (a boon to the fancier, like myself, who has to be away at business all day, on which account I find it best not to wet the food).

(6) Which would be equally useful when colour feeding, and readily assimilate the colour, so that the best results could be expected in cases where show specimens were being treated.

The method of feeding is as follows:—I put the hen to sit on the evening of the third day, and give no other food but best Spanish canary seed, with a little green food twice a week. I hang on the bath every other day. On the twelfth day I put a small crystal of pure Epsom salts in the drinking glass overnight, having first rinsed the glass and changed the water. When pairing (getting ready) the old birds I do not, of course, give them any egg-food. On the night of the twelfth day I put a piece of the best beef suet between the cage wires (it must be quite fresh) and if the chicks should be hatched a little early—say before you are up to give them their first food—the old birds will give them a little of the suet, and it will do them good.

When I get up next morning (thirteenth day) I at once prepare a little food in the following way. I take two teaspoonfuls of pine kernels and a piece of grease-proof paper (generally taken from off the butter) and enclose them in a little bag made with the latter. I tie up this, and put them into boiling water for about thirty minutes, but do not boil rapidly. Then I turn into a saucer, add a "pinch" of best butter, and crush into a pulp with a fork, afterwards sprinkling on a little maw seed. When cold, put into an egg-drawer, and give to the birds. When assured the young are hatched, I also give the parents an equal quantity of well-crushed Osborne biscuit, sprinkled with a little fine sugar; this is not wanted before two o'clock, and I get my wife to put it in the egg-drawer with the nut-food. In addition, see the birds have a supply of good canary seed in the hopper. One can prepare the nuts overnight.

The next morning I have a look in the nest, and see if all is well, but I do not keep the hen off long. Now I give them, in addition to the nut and biscuit mentioned above, a spoonful of well-soaked German rape seed, well swilled and dried, and I ask my wife to remove this, if any is left, at two o'clock, and give a similar amount in another vessel inside the cage. I may here say that soaked rape is continued with the nut and biscuit right up to the time that the young can crack canary seed, the only difference being that I do not boil the pine kernels after the third day, but just smash them up with a fork and add maw seed. When the young are six days old I give a small quantity of lightly cracked hemp seed, but not more than the birds will consume in one day, as it soon goes rancid. I am particular to thoroughly wash the drinking-glasses each day and remove the "slime" which so quickly affects the water, for without one pays attention to this item, no good results can be expected. I find that a little teazle seed, scalded and dried, is greatly relished by the birds, and has a beneficial effect on old and young, on account of the medicinal properties of this seed, and I give it them about twice a week after the young are hatched, by way of an extra; also I give a little green-food from the fourth day, and I prefer watercress or chickweed, whichever is obtainable. One must not give too much at a time. I give the old birds a bath daily after the third day.

I may explain that pine kernels are small white nuts used by vegetarian cooks, are very oily, and the most nutritious nuts obtainable. The price is about 1s. or 1s. 2d. per lb., and they are kept by all the vegetarian supply stores and other food specialists. The nuts are also greedily eaten by all British birds, but my experience as far as rearing goes, has only been with Canaries. They are bought ready shelled at the above prices, and must on no account be kept in bags, as these absorb the oil, which we do not want to lose; a bottle is best, or a clean tin. These nuts never go bad.

I have very successfully reared young Canaries for the past three seasons with the foods mentioned above, and my birds are always healthy and free from ailments of any kind, while I rarely lose a bird in the nest. I do not show at [illegible] with the [illegible] hope in the [illegible] (to use a fancier's term) [illegible] I keep Yorkshires and Roller[illegible]

Birds Like "Young Cat[illegible]

The cheapest and the best thing, to [illegible] the old fashioned dog biscuit. The best [illegible] pare is to put enough hot water on to make it [illegible] then pass through a sieve, and you will find [illegible] consistency just like egg-food. Sprinkle a little [illegible] on. You will find hens feed like steam on [illegible] change from the maw, give a little scalded rape, or a bit of scalded teazel. I think this a much better food than eggs, as there is not much fear of it going sour for a few days. Of course, you will want to use seeds, such as hemp and canary. Anyone trying the above food will find it will rear birds strong and healthy, like young cart-horses!

Corn in the Ear.

I have been a breeder of Canaries for more than fifty years, and have tried several different foods, but the one that pleased me most I used whilst I resided at Cambridge. At the beginning of the season I gave the usual egg and biscuit, but directly I could get young green corn, such as wheat, oats, barley, and young grass seeds, I discarded the egg and biscuit, and I can truly say that I never had stronger birds in my life. Their crops were always full of the young green corn and grass seeds. I am aware that this kind of food would be difficult to obtain in and around large towns, but in the country it is not difficult to obtain a few ears of green corn, or to grow some on purpose in one's garden. I used to gather the green grass, with its green seeds, which I found the wild Finches filled their crops with. This kind of food seems to me to be very natural.

Simple Life on Dandelions & Bread.

Two years ago a close friend of mine decided he would have a try at Canary breeding, and his effort was crowned with success, he rearing a dozen as fine and healthy young birds as one could wish for, so far as strength and liveliness were concerned. His pair never had egg-food. Their only "fancy" diet during the breeding season was wellground crumbs from home-baked bread, into which was sprinkled a little maw seed. Staple diet, canary seed; and every other day while they had young he gave a pinch of German rape and hemp seed. Green food, nothing but dandelion leaves, and when the dandelion heads appeared, nothing but the ripe heads and plenty of them, and that I am sure is where the secret of his success lay—the ripe growing heads of the dandelion, one of Nature's finest diets for birds.

Rice Pudding Makes Profit Possible.

I have been breeding Yorkshires over twenty years, and generally put up five or six pairs. In the year 1902 I lost a lot of young birds through hens not feeding, although I was giving them fresh egg-food twice a day. It was too stimulating; an old fancier at the time told me my birds were in too high condition, and said: "Don't use any more eggs, but ask the wife to bake a rice pudding in the usual way, and when it is cold mix in Osborne biscuits, the same as you would if using eggs." I prefer lettuce or water-cress as green-food, and give good canary seed, and hemp cracked. I very seldom lose a young bird, and have made over £5 profit since last breeding season through sending a small advertisement to CAGE BIRDS, for I have sold every bird that I could spare. Good luck to CAGE BIRDS, for it teaches working men how to make money, and I have read it every week since the first issue.

Experiments in Breeding Famous Song Birds.

By J. JEFFREY (Harborne, Birmingham).

But of all birds as cage pets the Nightingale is my favourite. I have kept these birds now for close upon 20 years, and they have as great a charm for me to-day as when I first started with them. True, they have most peculiar habits as song-birds in confinement. To many they are a disappointment. Don't run away with the idea that they sing all the year round. The song of the Nightingale is a love-song, pure and simple; that is, they sing during the breeding season. Commencing in January they sing till the middle of June, and when they arrive in this country (about the 20th of April) they are in full breeding condition.

The Problem of Teaching Young 'Gales.

Young Nightingales begin to sing when they are a month old, and will warble right through the first twelve months, gradually getting better and louder in the natural delivery of their song. At first their notes are very much disconnected, but gradually they begin (about January) to get their proper trills and "water bubble" notes, especially if they can hear an old one singing a few times.

How is this to be done, seeing that the adult birds go off song soon after the young are hatched, and, as a rule, never sing in a cage till the year is nearly out. I have experimented with them in every conceivable way. I got one old cock to pair to a hen in November, by keeping them in a warm room, and he burst out into full song. He made the room fairly ring with his melody for week after week.

This season I have tried keeping a number of cocks and hens together in a bird-room, and there has scarcely been a week since their moult when I have not been favoured with a song. I am quite convinced, however, that rivalry has been the cause of it. The "Master Bird" of the room has burst into song. Several times during November he sang for twenty minutes in the dead of night. Several times I have (through a small hole in the door) watched the bird that sang; I have taken note of some special mark on him, and have caught and caged him separately, but no more song have I got from him while in the cage. But to my surprise another would assume the command in the room and sing equally well. This occurred seven or eight times last autumn and winter, so that I have had very few weeks without having the Nightingale's song.

The young 'Gales, too, have sung remarkably well, and were very much advanced through having a tutor. Both old and young ones in my possession are singing quite stoutly as I pen these lines. Nightingales are quite easy to breed in a properly constructed aviary. It is impossible to breed them in a cage, as they will not take to a nest, persisting in building one for themselves. This is composed of leaves, so that there is no binding together as in the case of other birds who use moss and hair. Consequently the nest is very loose, and the eggs roll about the cage and get spoilt. In an aviary the birds will take to a good bushy fern or any kind of brushwood placed in position, and will build a good nest, especially if you get an old Blackbird's nest and tear it up, and supply them also with some oak leaves. I am hoping, and am sanguine that after the experiences of several fanciers during the past season (made known through the columns of CAGE BIRDS) quite a number of bird-keepers will make an experiment during this season to breed Nightingales. I can only say that any advice I can give, it will be a pleasure for me to supply. I wish one and all every success.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

MICE IN AVIARY (F. Hobart).—You cannot do better than use a course of Virus, which you will find advertised in our columns. It will not be necessary to remove the birds. In dealing with an outdoor aviary success naturally depends on its position, structure, and locality to a great extent when using the ordinary means, such as traps, etc., but these points do not come into play in the suggested method.

TEACHING ROLLERS TO SING (F.B.).—It is certainly necessary to train young Roller cocks if you wish them to sing a pure good class song. If you have a really good, pure singing cock, in good song, he will be competent to train the young cocks you will get from a single pair if you can depend upon him keeping in song well, and resuming in a reasonably short time after the moult. It is rather risky, however, to depend upon a single cock, as he is apt to go out of song and remain silent during the most critical time when they need good tuition. It would be much safer to get a second cock, which has moulted early and resumed singing, before the one you have has quite gone off song for moulting, so that one or other may reasonably be expected to keep in full song all through the autumn. You should move all the cocks to a room by themselves where they will not be distracted by other bird sounds during tuition. The second cock should sing the same type of song as your present one this is important.

NOT SINGING (Alice). Has the bird ever sang at all, or are you sure of the sex? It is quite possible it may have been permanently affected whilst hanging in a draughty window. Anyway, as it is still quite young, the following treatment should do much good, but you must strictly avoid hanging it in a draughty, or excessively fluctuating position in future. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure. Twice a week on the alternating days give a pinch of the seed mixture you have been using as staple diet, and a good eyed spray of chickweed, or two leaves of dandelion daily. Allow it to bathe daily if it likes now the weather is settled. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whiskey, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash to the drinking water for three days, and afterwards give 20 drops of whiskey, six of glycerine, ten of lemon juice, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken in the water, every second day for a week.

MAKING HER FEED (Anxious). What has been said of some other biped applies with equal force to the hen Canary "when she will, she will, you may depend on't; when she won't, she won't, and there's an end on't" There is no specific in the sense you imply that will make a hen feed. Good sound health and condition and a normal working of all the bodily functions is the only real specific. When there is any departure from normal conditions something may be done to readjust matters by treating as advised to "G. H. Brown," in last issue, but do not deceive yourself that you can work miracles in this way, by "giving the hen something." The wisest plan when you have a hen with such a reputation as yours, is to endeavour to be prepared with one or more foster hens, to which the young could be transferred if deserted by their own parent. It would be worth trying the removal of the cock this leaving her to hatch and rear the young her-... At a week old you might certainly keep the ... going by hand feeding, allowing the hen to ...od them, when she might probably resume her duties satisfactory after a few days. I do not quite see how a change of environment would cause her to have the young "under her nose" more, as you say.

REARING YOUNG BY CONTRACT (Yorkshire Novice).—Yes, I should say your terms for payment for getting young reared are quite fair and liberal. The pairs of old birds, I take it, would remain your own property after the breeding season.

SCABS ON HEAD (A.J.H.).—Slightly smear the bare place three times a week with Lanocyllin and dust on a little boric acid to dry it, allowing the latter to remain on to peel off naturally or be washed off in bath. If the hen is quite well in all other respects and feeds well, it will make no material difference to her breeding, or to the young, though it is doubtful whether the hen will quite recover the plumage on this spot..

DROPPINGS LOOSE AND GREEN (Crest).—This is not uncommon when a liberal supply of succulent green food is available. It is of no consequence whatever, and will not do the birds any harm. A little looseness is not bad for birds that are not mated at this season. If it becomes very bad so as to approach watery droppings, cut down the green food supply a little for a few days, and give a little dry crushed arrowroot biscuit, hemp, and a piece of cuttlefish to peck at.

LOOSENESS OF BOWELS (G. Clark).—You should have said how you fed and treated the hen generally. The treatment of the looseness would depend entirely upon its cause. It might have been merely the symptom of a much more serious condition, and if you have other birds it would have been the safest plan to send the body to our post-mortem examiner to ascertain the actual cause. For simple looseness you should first see that all your seeds and foods, and water supply are sweet and wholesome. Examine the condition of your hemp particularly. Then give a mild aperient for one day, and reduce the supply of green food, give a little scalded rape, dry crushed arrowroot biscuit, and a pinch of good sound hemp daily for a few days. If this does not suffice to correct it, add five drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of catechu to the water for two or three days.

RESTLESS AND YAWNING (Mrs. Dupree).—Give a staple diet of plain canary seed for a fortnight, with every second day a pinch of summer rape added, and twice each week on the intervening days a morsel of bread and milk dusted with soft sugar. Give a little green food daily, and also allow it to bathe daily if it likes, now the weather is milder. Twice each week add a few drops of essence of quassia to the bathing water. Add 20 drops of whiskey, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash to the drinking water for three days, and afterwards give 20 drops of whiskey, six of glycerine, ten of lemon juice, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken in the water, every second day for a week.

A FAINT HEART (A.W., Montreal).—Am sorry I know nothing that will make this bashful scion take the plunge against his will. He is probably rather young yet, and will prove more satisfactory towards the close of the season, and will probably act all right next year. You may be able to get a single brood from him this year, but that is about all you must expect, and if you have another keen suitable cock at liberty, I should advise you to take no risks, but to mate him with the hen at once, and keep this unsatisfactory one separately for a songster until next season. You might also treat him as advised to "Yorkshires" for a week or two, which may put a little more courage into him.

MOULTING (A. E., Hull).—You ought to have had CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL handy, which would have saved you much valuable time and shown you how to deal with this trouble. It will be quite useless mating the bird until she has quite recovered from the moult, and the plumage is fully developed. Keep her fairly warm, in a fairly equable temperature quite free from draughts, and allow her to bathe freely. In addition to staple seed diet give a little egg food every second day, well sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternating days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and black rape, with a sprinkling of linseed and mustard in the bulk. Dissolve a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in two ounces of sherry; add a teaspoonful of honey and give 20 drops of this mixture in the drinking water two days in every three until feathers cease dropping, and plumage is well grown. Give two dandelion leaves daily.

COLOUR OF SHOW CAGES (J. Pearce).—For the Cinnamons a pale or sky blue would be the correct colour, though, personally, I consider an electric green, or a grey-green, shows up the bird better than anything. For the Lizard a richer shade of deep sky blue is correct. If you addressed a request enclosing stamped envelope for reply, to the Secretary of L. and L.F.A. he would probably send you a specimen of correct shades as adopted by the club.

YOUNG DYING (W.H.).—The deaths might have been due to constipation, but it is quite impossible to speak with any certainty without full particulars of your treatment and the foods and greenstuffs you were using. If my surmise is correct the trouble might easily have been averted by a judicious correction of the egg-food, and, perhaps giving a little crisp young lettuce or tender shoots of groundsel. It should be quite an easy matter to complete the rearing by hand when the young have reached a fortnight old.

STOPPED SINGING (Silverdale).—Your feeding is certainly not the best. Try the following, and adhere to it strictly for two or three weeks. Staple diet: Plain canary. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw, and twice a week on the alternating days give a similar quantity of the seed mixture, of which you send sample, and a pinch of summer rape on each of the remaining days. Give a little chickweed or two dandelion leaves daily, and keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, for three days. The sample of rape you send appears to be rather infested with mites, but the quantity was much too small to be quite sure of the point. Examine the bulk, and if so infested, discard it.

LAYING ON FLOOR (T.S.). The prospects of success with the Cirsthred hen this season are by no means bright, and you would do well to get another suitable hen for the cock, and thus avoid wasting a whole season. You might mate the cock with such fresh hen, and as soon as she commences to sit remove him, leaving her to hatch and rear young by herself, and try cock again with the first hen. Also try moving nest-box to a different position and see that it is not too glaringly exposed. Also keep floor well covered with sawdust, chaff, or oat husk, by which means you will save any dropped eggs for sitting under other hens. You should also endeavour to have a pair or two of common feeders available in case their services should be required. Give a staple diet of canary and rape, a small quantity of egg food sprinkled with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame every second day, and a pinch of mixed seeds twice a week. Give a little dandelion or chickweed, in stead of watercress, daily.

DOUBTFUL SEX (Yorkshires). It is quite possible for two hens to behave as you say your birds have done. You should try to get some experienced fancier to see them and give you his opinion of the sex of the supposed cock. Or catch both birds and blow up feathers of abdomen so as to compare them side by side. If there is no obvious difference in the formation of the vent, you may safely conclude either that you have got two hens or that the supposed cock will be totally useless for breeding this season—most probably the former will be the case. You might try the effect of a little egg food well sprinkled with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame every second day, and on the alternate days a little of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Give three or four leaves of dandelion daily.

DEFORMED CLAW (Great Dane, Nelson).—Give the bird thin and nearly round perches about the size of a lead pencil, and note if when it perches on these it gradually works the hind claw over the back in the proper position. If it does, leave it with these perches only for two or three months, by which time Nature will have corrected the deformity. But if it fails to get hind claw in proper position on these perches, then cut an eighth of an inch off the end of rubber tubing, as is used on a baby's feeding bottle, and pass one of these rings over the three front claws and push it up the leg nearly, but not quite, as far as the hind toe reaches, which you will hold, meanwhile, backward against leg. Leave the rings in position indicated for a month, then remove them and give the bird the thin perches as mentioned above for a few weeks. Allow ordinary perches whilst rings are on. Part VI. of "Our Canaries" illustrates how to treat this and other foot deformities.

SCALY LEGS (C.J.C.).—Coarse scaly legs and feet are quite a common thing in an old bird, but I am not clear whether your bird has merely coarse thickened scales or a fungoid growth on legs. If the former, bathe well in a comfortably warm solution of boracic acid until scales may be lifted away easily. Be careful not to force. Having removed them, dry legs and feet gently, trim claws to a normal length with a pair of sharp scissors, and anoint legs and feet sparingly with Lanocyllin. Repeat the anointing once daily for a few days. If there appears a fungoid growth on feet, follow instructions under heading "Leprosy," in Part VI. of "Our Canaries." There is no reason why you should mate Linnet with Canary.

CLOGGED VENT (G. H. Thomas).—If, as I gather from your letter, you only seem to get a single youngster in each brood so affected, "and that the smallest," I should imagine you do not remove the eggs as laid, and consequently the smallest of the brood is probably two or three days younger than the oldest. In this case unless you have very good feeders the youngest very often get overlooked, and is neither fed nor cleaned so well by the hen as the more advanced members of the brood. In fact, the wee mite is often smothered by its nest-mates, so that even when fairly well fed the necessity for other attentions escapes the hen's notice, and clogging as you describe is very apt to result. If you do not already do so, you should in future remove the eggs and set them all at the same time, so that all the young may hatch within a few hours, and get an equal start in life. If you already do this you might transfer any very small chick from a brood to another brood which were about the same size, and thus avoid this trouble. There is very little the matter with your feeding, but you might see if the kernel of your hemp is sound and good, and also add a little chickweed, or a scrap of crisp young lettuce leaf to the green food supply. Do your biscuits contain much fat? If so, substitute a proportion of Osborne biscuits, or bread crumbs, for an equal proportion of your present biscuit food.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

WHAT SONGSTER? (Rita).—There is not a great deal of latitude as to choice, so as to meet your requirements. It is beyond my powers to recommend a bird which will act the part of policeman in the cage, though I expect things will shape so that some one bird will "rule the roost." You had better write one or two dealers asking for prices, and if they have either of the following in stock: 1, Green Singing Finch—guaranteed singer, none other to be sent; 2, Alario Finch; 3, Grey-necked Serin (Cape Canary). Of course, a cock bird in each case. With a variety of birds in a cage, sexes should be equal, or they should be all cocks—a number of cocks according to size of your cage, will agree together, providing there are no hens to light over, and as you want only singing birds, I should think this would be your best course.

A FEATHER PULLER (J. E. K.).—Do not give any tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Give it a piece of biscuit, or stale crust of household bread daily, slightly damped with chemical food and water, and then dusted with flowers of sulphur. In its present condition the following seed mixture would suit it well (it should eat the canary seed when the other items are consumed); one quart white millet, one pint each canary seed and oats, half a pint each shelled nuts, paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seed, and a gill of grit (not sand)—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Continue to supply the fruit, Dinneford's and Chemical Food as heretofore, also cuttlebone, wood and bobbins to chew up and play with. Spray it every other day with quassia solution; there will be no risk about this, so long as you keep the bird out of draught. It will help matters to stand him out of doors in some sheltered position, when cold winds do not prevail—you must not allow him to flume on it for lengthy periods, a circle of cardboard larger than cage, with a slot in centre to slip over cage ring, will give it all the shelter it requires from sun, and the card should be out of reach of the Parrot bill. Treat as above for a month, and then report progress.

SWELLING ON BREAST (E. J. T.).—If the swelling you refer to on breast is not the crop, it cannot be successfully treated through the medium of this column, as it is a case calling for the services of a vet., and operation, as if it is let go on it will undoubtedly end fatally. The palliatives are fomenting with a hot (not hot enough to discomfort) decoction of camomile flowers, drying afterwards, and keeping the bird strictly out of draught. The bowels must be kept moving freely, but not waterly loose, by giving one part of Dinneford's Magnesia to three parts of water, in lieu of the ordinary drinking water, as required. Twice or thrice weekly a little Byno-phosphates added to the drinking water should prove a good tonic at this juncture. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, green food, cuttlebone, and grit. I must repeat, however, that this seems distinctly a case for a vet.

GREY SINGING FINCHES (Interested).—(1) Canary, white and spray millet, and a little ready mixed "wild seed mixture"—as regards green food, lettuce, seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, and any other harmless weeds may be given—also cuttlebone, and grit and water for drinking and bathing. (2) Yes, they have frequently been bred in aviaries—in a cage, save for the extra seeds, treat much as you would Canaries, but do not interfere with their nest or eggs—make it pretty private. (3) Not likely, but at the same time no real reason why they should not cross with the Goldie or the Linnet. This species has been crossed both with the Green Singing Finch and the Canary. (4) The Green Singing Finch is the brightest coloured bird, being clad in green and yellow, while the other is clad in sober grey. Both are good singers, but this capacity varies much in individual birds.

GOULDIAN BALD (Gould).—I should cage this bird separately, and keep its bowels moving quite freely with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ounce (two tablespoonfuls) of water—at the same time the bowels must not be allowed to remain watery loose. When not giving the magnesia, add a little Byno-phosphates to the drinking water. Supply seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, etc., freely. Crush some cuttlebone to the size of millet, and add a pinch to the daily supply of seed. Let it have daily access to a bath. Moisten the skin of bald area occasionally with clean vaseline, but not use sufficient to run among the plumage and make it greasy. It could be placed out of doors for a good portion of the day now, and would benefit therefrom, if placed in sme sheltered position.

INDIAN MYNAH (M. F. Mynah).—(1) Its natural food is fruit, berries and insects—in captivity supply insectile mixture (soft food), with a small portion of finely minced cooked meat stirred in twice a week, fruit and insects—rice pudding may be given, and it may have table leavings to pick over, being almost omnivorous. (2) The cage for this species ought to be 30 to 36 inches long, by 18 inches deep, and high, or a little higher—the Thrush cage may suffice, but will give the bird little or no exercise. (3) The best talker is the Greater Hill Mynah, glossy blue-black plumage, with purplish reflections, bill deep yellow, and rather large wattles of the same colour on the sides of face. (4) They are longer learning to talk than the Grey Parrot; some talk very fluently; it is largely a matter of patience and perseverance in training; they are excellent mimics and should soon pick up many sounds and calls.

YOUNG GREY PARROT THIN (E. L. Warren).—It is a young bird, is developing rather than putting on flesh—your diet is about right, but for a time give the boiled maize every other day, and dust with flowers of sulphur before supplying to the bird. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in its cage, an dadd a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Use a crock drinker, and put a little Byno-phosphates in the drinking water every other day. Make a pet of this bird, and as soon as you have won its confidence let it take a little exercise outside its cage when convenient. As soon as the bird is a little more fleshy, not fat, reduce the maize to twice weekly, then later to once a week, and later still drop it altogether from the menu.

VERANDAH AVIARY (D.G.).—You will have to make some provision for winter, and some kind of a house must be provided in one part of the aviary, that is, boards all round (with window to well light it), except for the door or opening by which birds go in and out. You are asking at my hands an impossibility—I can give you the names of probable breeders, but all species, even Budgerigars sometimes, take a season to get accustomed to their quarters, and Parrakeets are quite as much this way inclined as Finches and kindred birds. Again, you cannot keep Finch-like birds and Parrakeets (Budgerigars are Parrakeets) together with safety, as usually Budgies in their "playfulness" sooner or later wound, maim or kill off Finch-like birds—there are some, such as Cardinals, etc., that can look after themselves even when kept among Parrakeets. I would suggest you getting one pair each Green Budgerigars, Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar Lovebirds, Blue-wing Lovebirds, Black-cheeked Lovebirds, Cockatiels, Rosella and Red-rump Parrakeets. But only the Budgerigars are practically certain breeders this season; some of the others should do so, but most of them will probably not breed until next season—moreover the most experienced of aviculturists seldom get every pair in an aviary to breed in any one season. The above birds would all exist on a Parrakeet mixture of canary, millet, oats, hemp, paddy rice, sunflower seeds, ripe fruit, nuts, grit, cuttlebone and water. Green food, such as seeding grasses and weeds, lettuce, etc., will be freely taken, as may also broken biscuits, especially when they are feeding young. If you care to send me a ground plan of the present aviary, indicating the position of windows looking into it, I will indicate the best position to add the shelter to the part you have wired in, and send a sketch of most suitable type. I can, of course, indicate a series of Finch-like birds suitable for the aviary, some of which would be almost sure to breed during the year, but they would not be so showy as the Parrakeets, and your inclinations seem to lie towards the latter. Barrels are better than husks or nest boxes; if you use the latter they must all have concave bottoms, or the eggs will roll about and get spoiled, as Parrakeets use no nesting material.

WAXBILLS, BISHOPS, ETC. (Villavecnis).—(1) It is not possible to give descriptions, as there are too many kinds. You should get our Nutshells, Nos. 16 and 20, dealing with some of these species, 2½d. each, post free, from our Manager. Waxbills and Avadavats are brightly coloured mites about the Size of a Gold-crest. Silverbills about size of Linnet, pale golden-brown or fawn-colour. Bishops —these are numerous and have a summer and winter plumage—in the former the Red-billed is pinkish fawn with a black face mask; the Madagascar is scarlet and dark brown; the Napoleon is yellow and Black; the Orange is fiery orange and black; all about the size of a Norwich Canary. (3) The husk is the fibrous sheath containing the coco-nut, and is some 3 inches or more longer and wider than the nut. (2) No, I do not think there is any chance, there is the difference in size, and the Waxbills catch many small flies, etc., and give their young, as well as green food.

BUDGERIGARS NOT NESTING (Novice).—Your birds will undoubtedly ultimately nest, but they are longer settling down to nesting in a cage than in the aviary. When the birds are in breeding condition, the cere of the male will be bright blue, and that of the hen ruddy brown. Seeding (flowering) grass is obtainable now, and it is quite safe to give if gathered about noon; supply as much as they will eat. The general menu should consist of canary and white millet, a few oats, cuttlebone, grit, and water. Our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, should be of much assistance to you. Budgerigars do not require any nesting material: they will hollow out the husk to their liking, and deposit their eggs therein.

AVIARY FOR BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (D.E.S.).—Do not attempt to put bantams in the aviary; you have only accommodation for about 24 Budgerigars, and I cannot advise your putting Finches with Parrakeets in that space. The following should look well, and the variety be very pleasing: 1 pair each Green Budgerigars, Yellow Budgerigars, Blue-wing Lovebirds, Cockatiels, and Bengal Parrakeets; they would all thrive on practically the same diet, at least, if you supply a mixture of canary and white millet in equal parts, and another of hemp, oats, sunflower, and paddy rice, with ripe fruit, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing, this will about cover their need. Of course, in such a small aviary it is understood that any young reared would be removed as soon as they were able to fend for themselves.

AMAZON PARROT, ETC. (J.C.H.O.).—(1) I should certainly spray the bird if it will not take a bath (use a mist sprayer), and keep strictly out of draught till dry. Choose a warm genial day for the purpose, but if the bird will take a bath that is the better way. If it is tame enough to come out of the cage, put down a dish of water, and I opine it will soon splash itself well and enjoy it; if not, use the spray with the aforementioned precautions. Yes, the bird can go outside during genial weather, but not while cold winds are prevalent or in an exposed windy position. (2) If you can secure thorough ventilation without draught the paint will not hurt the birds, but as the nights are still cold I think the better plan would be to remove them—then leave the window open day and night till the paint is dry.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Mr. G. E. Weston regrets the delay in replying to several queries, due to his recent indisposition, but will answer all enquiries in our next issue.

GOLDFINCHES WITH ASTHMA (T. Saunders).—Your birds have probably caught a cold through having been kept in a draughty place. If the complaint has been apparent for some time, get a mixture made up as follows: Glycerine and oxymel of squills two drachms each, chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine one drachm each. Give twenty drops of this in the drinking water, using a glass or china drinker, every alternate day. If there be any weakness, ten drops of whisky may be added. If the symptoms are of quite recent date, ten drops each of glycerine and sweet spirit of nitre, and twenty drops of syrup of tolu to each ounce of drinking water may alleviate the trouble. It may be, however, that the symptoms do not point to true asthma, but simply to digestive troubles, and these may be removed by dissolving in the drinking water as much sulphate of soda as will lie upon a sixpence. In either case give the medicated water only on alternate days, with plain water on the intervening ones. Keep the birds in an equable temperature, out of reach of all draughts, and not in the fumes of burning gas or oil.

BLINDNESS (D. MacNeill). -You do not say what kind of birds you are keeping, whether the blindness is in one or both eyes, how long they have been going blind, nor whether the blindness is partial or total in the eye or eyes affected. If the latter, I am afraid the case is hopeless; in fact, diseases of the eye are always serious matters, and it is difficult to advise upon them. If it is simply inflammation of the eyes it may yield to the following treatment: Get a lotion made up as follows—Tincture of belladonna, half a drachm, sugar of lead, two scruples, distilled water, half a pint. Open the eyes well and bathe gently, using a soft camel-hair brush. This should be done twice daily for a month. If it is incipient cataract, which appears as a milky film, gradually getting thicker until it becomes quite opalescent, the above treatment may relieve it if taken early, but if it has become established then only an operation would remove the cataract, and it would be much more merciful to destroy the birds in a painless manner. I don't know of any disease of the eye which might spread from one bird to another, and it is curious that you should have four birds affected. If you will send further particulars we will endeavour to advise you more definitely. You might get a veterinary surgeon see them.

"MEATING OFF" SMALL SOFTBILLS (Devonian). Live ants' eggs are, of course, the ideal thing for newly taken small Softbills; but it is not everyone who can obtain them readily. The best way to "meat off" Nightingales, and other Softbills of about the same size, is by means of mealworms—the latter are widely obtainable, unlike other live-foods. I presume you know that usually it is necessary to put the bird's cage in a light spot, and cover the cage front with muslin, or white gauze, or similar material, while he gets used to captivity. Also see that the food and water are easily accessible—right under its nose, as it were. Personally, I commence with a supply of not over large mealworms in the food dish; then give a few biggish ones cut in two; then lightly sprinkle these cut mealworms with a good insectivorous food, prepared with a generous admixture of finely-minced hard-boiled (fresh) egg; then I press the cut mealworms well up amongst the food. These are the stages; at the end the bird has become used to taking up some of the insectivorous food (especially particles of the egg), and I then gradually wean him off the mealworms, giving them occasionally only. I hope this brief description will make the process clear to you. It is troublesome while it lasts (if one counts trouble in such matters), and takes a week to fourteen days, according to the disposition of the bird, before it can be termed "well on food." And they need hundreds of mealworms in that time. A few gentles are good, if obtainable and well scoured, while live ants' eggs are splendid. You can give a little of both in addition to the mealworms. The cover over the cage can be gradually raised, as the bird becomes used to its new surroundings.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. J. C.—The chick died of inflammation of the bowels. You did wrong in giving it milk sop. Keep to yolk of egg only, and use this in the smallest possible quantity, using with it bread instead of biscuit. It is possible you are giving a too liberal diet, and too varied, which, whilst not affecting all alike, will select out the most weakly or predisposed to attack. Give in the drinking water a little permanganate of potash night and morning; not that the water is the cause, but owing to its antiseptic properties, its admixture with the food will destroy organisms. The trouble commences in indigestion, which sets up inflammation.

S. N. Taylor.—Septic Fever. Enlargement of the spleen, covered with what you describe as ulcers, is one of the most constant symtoms of this disease in its worst form. I am afraid you are in for some trouble, as you have allowed the disease to run on so long. There is no cure. If you have only a few remaining birds you had best destroy them. Disinfect your place thoroughly, and allow a guarantine period of several months before you introduce any more.

Mrs. J. Bairstow.—Pneumonia. Interference no doubt hastened death. Your treatment was adopted with good intent, but misdirected.

H. Fowler.—Apoplexy or congestion of the lungs. I see no reason why the eggs should not be all right.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Brutem fulmen, and many others.—Many thanks for cuttings received.

A Suffragette Parrot (Miss Lloyd).—Your story of the thirty chicks and the Parrot was told long before anyone had ever heard of "Suffragettes." It is one of the perennials which crop up year after year.

F. Lindsay.—We are quite in sympathy with your point of view, and agree with all you say, but as the case was heard and settled by the magistrate, we do not see that any good purpose can be served by discussing it further in our columns.

R. W. Lowe.—(1) "Plainhead" indicates a bird without a crest; or, in the case of the Lancashire, without a coppy. (2) "Buff" is the opposite of yellow. Broadly put, a yellow (or jonque) is a bird of level yellow colour all over, whereas a buff has a white appearance. (3) "Unflighted" indicates a bird which has not moulted, or had extracted, its flight feathers, i.e., a young or first year bird. (4) "Hybrid" is a bird obtained by the mating of two different species—for instance, cock Goldfinch to hen Bullfinch, cock Linnet to hen Canary, etc. (5) "Crest" is the opposite of Plainhead (vide answer No. 1). We frequently publish sketches of Crested Canaries. (6 and 7) Consult "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free 7d., from this office; an invaluable book to all breeders of Canaries.

A Well-Known Bird.

It may be said that the Robin Redbreast is the best known of all our wild birds. It has a very extensive range, and can be found in all the countries extending between the Arctic Circle and Northern Africa, and as far eastward as the Ural Mountains.

No. 590.
To Keep Egg Food Fresh in Hot Weather.
Sent by C. Murrin, 18, Trefoil Road, Wandsworth, London, S.W.

Procure two cylindrical tins, whose diameters are an inch or more in difference. Make sure that they will hold water. Next obtain two discs like A, whose outside circumferences are equal to that of the large tin and whose inside circumferences are slightly smaller than that of the small tin. Bore a half-inch hole (D) in each. Then solder a screw (E) in the centre of the bottom of the large tin so as to bring the tops flush with each other. Then lay one disc on top of the tins and solder it on. Repeat the same with the lids (B). When filled with water it is ready for use.—C. Murrin.

No. 591.
An Aviary Seed Pot.
Sent by H. Tunbridge, Nethercott, St. Mark's, Cheltenham.

Get a strip of tin (A) and make four large holes in it; then get a round tin lid and bend the tin round this and fasten ends together. Over the top stretch some wire netting, and the seed pot is complete. This can easily be filled through the top, and if it wants cleaning it can be taken to bits. I hope this will be of as much use to other readers of your paper as it has been to me.—H. Tunbridge.

We have received from Messrs. Graves and Co., Ltd., of Sheffield, a catalogue entitled "A book of good things," and the title very aptly expresses the nature of the contents. It would be difficult, indeed, to name any article of domestic use or ornament which is not catalogued in this little compendium. Clocks, Jewellery, Cutlery, Furniture, Lingerie, Bedding, Boots and Shoes, China and Glass, Trinket and Clock Sets, Musical Instruments, Umbrellas, Portmanteaux, even Bassinettes for the little ones; everything is offered in its pages, and the price of everything may be liquidated by easy monthly instalments. Readers will be well advised to write for a copy of this well got up little book.

The Wandering Crossbills.

After an absence of about two years, Crossbills have appeared again in the Delamere country, where in 1909 and 1910 they were fairly plentiful. What are we to make of these nomads? Are they passing migrants which are sojourning on their way to northern homes? Have they been wandering far and wide and have now returned to Delamere to nest? Or have we been blind, and during all this time a few have remained hidden in the firs? Probably they are on passage, and perhaps, like many other kinds of migrating seed-eaters, they have been attracted by a supply of spring insects on the larches, for most vegetarian birds will change their habits when animal food is plentiful. Two insects at this season attack the young larch shoots, an aphis and the larva of a tiny moth. The Chaffinch, Redpoll, Goldfinch, and Brambling will stop to gorge on these delicate morsels, and possibly the powerful cone-breaking beak of the Crossbill can pick out the little sheath-protected caterpillar just as it can neatly extract the seed of the fir.

The Useful Kestrel.

The Kestrel Hawk is well-known for his habit of hovering, and then dropping down suddenly on his prey; but he does not obtain all his food in this way. He will sometimes settle on the ground and search among the grass and stubble for insects. He will also occasionally take a small bird from its perch, and has been known to eat a fully-grown rat caught in a trap.

Arnold (Notts) and District Forming a New Society.

Sir,—A meeting was held in the British Schools, Arnold, on May 11th to consider forming a C.B. Society. Seeing there are over 100 fanciers in the district a good society should be formed. I have been asked to lend a helping hand in forming a society, and shall be pleased to give my services, being a life experienced fancier. I was amongst the first to start the Hucknall Torkard Society, also Kirkby, being secretary for same. I have been out of the Fancy for eight years, but have got a few pairs again. I intend making a special effort to bring the young fanciers of this district to the front. Those seeing this notice will be heartily welcome at a meeting on Saturday next in the above schools at 5 o'clock, sharp, to select committee, secretary and officers.

Hospital Egg Week.

100,000 New Laid Eggs for London's Sick Poor.

Sir,—In conjunction with the committee of the Hospital Saturday Fund, the "Poultry World" is endeavouring to supply every sick and poor person in London's hospitals and infirmaries with new laid eggs for one week—May 28 to June 4. 100,000 new laid eggs are required. The poultry-keepers who are readers of the "Poultry World" have in past years given over 15,000 new laid eggs during Hospital Egg Week. They will do even more this year. Will Cage Birds readers help? We are appointing responsible honorary egg collectors in every large centre. Each collector will be properly authorised, and may appoint auxiliary collectors covering all districts where laying hens are kept. Eggs may be contributed by anyone, in any number, so long as they are fit for consumption. Local collecting depots will be established, but eggs may be despatched direct carefully packed to the "Poultry World" offices. Where donors require eggs to be called for, they should notify the "Poultry World" on a postcard. Labels advertising Hospital Egg Week are supplied free. Where large numbers of eggs are collected, arrangements wil be made for the payment of carriage to London. The eggs will be distributed to the hospitals in proportion to the number of beds occupied during 1911. Handsome commemorative silver goblets will be awarded to the three collectors who succeed in securing the highest totals. We say to every reader of Cage Birds, if you are a poultry keeper, will you give at least half a dozen new laid eggs to help London's sick poor? If you are not a poultry keeper, will you act as a collector for Hospital Egg Week? If you cannot spare the time to act as a collector, will you purchase at least half a dozen new laid eggs to help those who cannot help themselves? Ladies and gentlemen willing to act as collectors for Hospital Egg Week should write for authorisation, receipt books, and instruction card to the "Poultry World," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The Good Old Days.

Sir—I was very pleased to read your "Enderette," "Fanciers with Memories." I heard the appeal in question read at one of our meetings, and I could not help contrasting the abject and piteous appeal for support with the pompous tone and high-handed methods adopted by the same party in years gone by. In those days, before the advent of Cage Birds to protect us, and look solely after our interests, we had to be content with whatever this same party chose to give us, sometimes a column or perhaps two, of cage bird matter, amidst a mass of reading entirely foreign to our hobby, and we dared not grumble on pain of being snubbed. The advent of Cage Birds, however, changed all this, and under the banner of our famous journal we have flourished in a wonderful manner, till at the present time the Cage Bird Fancy is a power to be reckoned with. It is this amazing growth of the Fancy that has appalled the parties who once treated us with such scant courtesy, and they recognise now, when it is too late, that we cannot be trifled with, and have found out, apparently to their cost, that while we can do without them, they cannot do without us; hence their present attitude of humiliation. To all right-minded fanciers the most revolting part of the appeal is the spiteful manner in which this party attacks the conduct and integrity of Cage Birds, and I do not wonder that you have been asked whether or not you intended taking any action in the matter, although I am very pleased indeed to see that you intend to treat the subject with the contempt it deserves. The portion of the appeal dealing with show reports would have been amusing had it not been so unutterably devoid of common fairness. The very fact that you will not allow your reporters to "get their own back" from any fanciers against whom they may have a grudge, by stabbing them in the back through the medium of reports on their birds, is apparently, judging by the circulation of Cage Birds, quite in accordance with the opinions of fanciers, who, after all, are the proper people to judge these matters. I have read show reports in other papers, and have always been astonished to find that in every case where the reporter has judged the show himself, everything has been all right, and there has been no adverse criticism on the birds or awards, yet there are always adverse comments when anyone else has judged, and it is this kind of material forsooth that is termed "genuine criticism by capable reporters!" Do they really imagine that fanciers are so dense that they cannot see through these things? How pleasant it is to think that the methods of Cage Birds are, and always have been, entirely different, and that on its staff the reporters are fanciers, only human perhaps, but always ready to give every bird fair play and even their enemies a run for their money. There is one thing, sir, that surprises me very much, and that is your allusion to the other party as a trade rival. To my mind Cage Birds stands alone without a rival, as the paper for the fancier, and personally I think Cage Birds will continue to flourish despite all opposition, and I do not think that fanciers will brook any interference with the first and only paper that catered for cage birds alone. Further, I would just like to say that if there had been no Cage Birds there would have been no trade rival. Long live Cage Birds!

A Fancier with a Memory.

[We beg to thank the very worthy fancier who has chosen to write under the above "nom de plume" for his remarks, and we tender to all others who have written in similar strain our sincere appreciation of their sympathy and goodwill.—Editor C.B.]

New Fanciers' Association for Camden Town and District.

Sir,—A very successful meeting of fanciers was held at the Stag's Head Hotel, Hawley Road, Camden Town, N.W., on March 8, when the preliminaries for the formation of a new fanciers' association for the district were got through. It was decided to call it the "North West London Fanciers' Association," to embrace fanciers of cage birds, pigeons, rabbits, cavies, and mice. A small committee was appointed pro tem. and Mr. Young, 59, Fortess Road, Kentish Town, agreed to act as secretary, with Mr. Thompson as assistant. It is proposed to hold meetings on the first Thursday in every month at the "Stag's Head," and table shows, lectures, etc., will be arranged for. Subscription, 3s. per annum. The names of about twenty fanciers have been notified for membership already. A meeting of the provisional committee was arranged to prepare rules, etc., for submission to the next general meeting.

Escaped Goldfinch Mule which Reared a Family.

An Interesting Record.

Sir,—Having on many occasions seen the question of "Will Mules Breed?" asked through the columns of Cage Birds, I thought the following might be of interest to your readers. It is related by a gentleman in an old work of the middle of last century, and reads as follows: "In the autumn of 1838 a male bird, the produce of a Goldfinch and a hen Canary, escaped from my aviary, and was not seen again until the following spring, when we were agreeably surprised by the reappearance of our lost favourite in company of a Goldfinch. As the pair were inseparable, we at once suspected that they had been mated, and in a few days our suspicions were confirmed by seeing them feed each other and collect materials for building. By watching their movements, we soon discovered their nest in a cedar tree near the aviary. In due time four eggs were laid, which I carefully removed and placed under a hen Canary; they all, however, proved abortive. In a few days after this disappointment a second nest was built by them in the same tree, which we left undisturbed, and the result was favourable. Five birds were hatched, which I took from the nest when ten days old, and brought up by hand. Of this number two cocks and two hens are still living. I am aware that Mules in a state of captivity have not infrequently proved prolific when brought to pair with a mate of either of their parent stocks, but I do not remember that I ever heard of a pure breed in a wild state."

HYBRIDS WITH ALIEN PARENTS

Would it mean Few Entries?

Sir,—The question raised by your correspondent, Mr. A. Meek, as to whether Hybrids bred from foreign Finches should have separate classes provided, is no doubt an interesting one to the Hybrid breeder and exhibitor, but my own candid opinion is that the experiment, if tried, would prove a failure, feeling assured that in nine cases out of ten such classes would have to be cancelled for lack of entries. Taking my own experience during the past show season, I exhibited a Light Mule at nine shows, only three of which contained the required number of eight or more entries in its class. What would have been the result had the Mules bred from foreign Finches been debarred from those classes? Probably all cancelled. I also exhibited a Hybrid at seven shows; only one class at these contained eight or more entries. So in face of such facts from my own experience I fail to see that societies would be justified in providing separate classes for those Hybrids bred from foreign Finches, I would gladly welcome the advent of a larger number of Hybrid exhibitors. When that takes place we may then begin to talk about separating the British—bred from the foreign, and thus provide the much-needed class for them.

C. Pearce.

To Help the Working Man.

Sir,—As a working chap having a limit to my pocket (no doubt numerous readers of your noted journal are in the same boat as myself) but without any prejudice towards the Fancier who is in a position to pay, I pen these few remarks. From an exhibition standpoint I say purchase the very best and beat all second raters. The ambition of most Hybrid breeders is to purchase the very largest parents, because he is confident the offspring will not stand a ghost of a chance, otherwise, as exhibition specimens. Now the pocket comes in. He is prepared to pay almost any amount for Mr. Foreign Goldie, likewise hen Bullie, possibly losing a few before acclimatizing one. Still, this particular fancier does not mind; he can pay. Finally he is rewarded with a fine specimen of the cross. How many of these well circumstanced fanciers are there? I leave it for readers to judge. Now comes the working chap. He gets Mr. Goldie and Mrs. Bullie (British). Even if there should be any extra large ones, Mr. Dealer has just had someone drop in giving him an extra shilling for them! Anyhow, he succeeds and some near fancier gets to hear of his good fortune (likely enough an exhibitor). If a fairly good specimen he will try and purchase. But, oh no, I shall not sell it, says the owner; I shall show it. He puts it out, meets the "Foreigner" of the same cross, and is beaten hands down—Equal in colour and markings, loses in size. Our working chap is completely done, especially when a couple of other better taught fanciers point him out a few more of the bad points his bird possesses, and remark: "It might touch in some minor show." The following few suggestions, in my opinion, would help remedy this discouraging state of things. In looking up the show date column it will be seen many show dates clash; or at any rate it is impossible to send to more than two out of six shows. Before drawing up the classifications, these show dates could be compared by those show officials. I will take for an example, Barnstaple, Torbay, Cheltenham, Grimsby and Sheffield (one week). Each communicate, taking into consideration the class of fanciers around, coming to some agreement on similar lines to these:—Barnstaple and Torbay, west side of Bristol. Barnstaple has a class for Hybrids (strictly confined to British parentage). Torbay a class for Hybrids (other than of British Goldfinch or Bullfinch parentage). I think all shows, whether on a small or large scale, could cater for this scheme, at the same time giving all fanciers and breeders fair play as to seeing and competing with these crosses. Further, in splitting the crosses, and one show catering only for one side, the classes would be more likely to fill, to my mind. When either parent differs in nationality, I maintain the Hybrid should compete on the foreign side (let British be British). I hope to hear other views on the subject, and wish every fancier a successful breeding season.

J. Locke.

The Exhibitor would be a Loser.

Sir,—I have read with interest Mr. Meek's splendid letter, and I am bound to agree with all he has to say regarding this matter. I for one would like the time to come when such views as are suggested by our friend would be adopted. The important point must be raised, "How can this be done?" Take, for instance, the German hen Bullfinch and the English. Mr. Meek hit the nail on the head when he stated the German was a foreign bird. Now, in a Hybrid, who is going to suspect this? I venture to say the puzzle will require some solving. In the two birds, as they stand now, it is a very easy matter. The English Bullie stands clear away. The bird is more bold in appearance, and takes the eye for quality of feather, which the Germans always lack. For myself, it is a difficult subject to deal with, and for the present, seeing foreign Hybrids are not at all plentiful, it would be wise to leave the classification respecting such Hybrids as it is. I am delighted to know that classes are to be provided at our larger shows for foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches so the matter respecting foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches being allowed to compete in British classes is now at an end. With regard to Hybrids, it is different altogether. Mr. Meek says "How often do we hear complaints from show secretaries of short entries, and from the exhibitors who only receive half prize money, and if the classes are divided will they fill any better or shall we be better off than we are now." I say, certainly not, we should be worse, for by splitting the classes it would mean disaster. Why? I would like to know how many foreign Hybrids we see at our shows. I venture to say very, very few. How often do we see in the reports of our shows throughout the Kingdom the following remark: "Quality in the Hybrid classes was excellent, but entries were few." Then a suggestion like this comes along! It is certainly all right for a few officials to voice their opinions, but Exhibitors must have a say as well. I would like to ask who do the officials of a show look forward to? This question needs no squabbling over; it is the exhibitors. Then let us have fair play on both sides; take them into consideration. Dividing classes up like this would be very unfair. The result would be that the few remarkable Hybrids we see now and again at our shows would no longer be benched, because the owner of such would not send them out, for the simple reason he would be out of pocket, having only half prize money to draw—by taking carriage, entry fee, etc., from this he would be a loser every time. It must also be remembered that at our shows we like to see variety. As time goes on and these remarkable birds become more plentiful, then something might be done, but at the present they are so scarce that it would be a great mistake to make a change, for as stated above we should shut them out, and it would be a case as the old saying goes of "Often talked about, seldom seen." I am more than grateful that this matter has been brought up, and it encourages me to go on with the good work that I have a love for. I hope the time will come when we shall see more of these beautiful birds, and I hope also we shall be encouraged, for I don't care who the fancier is, if he tries "Hybrid Breeding," he has something to do, and it teaches him something, for it is an art in itself, and an education, and that is why I wish it to prosper.

Cutting Glass with Scissors Under Water.

Amusing Differences of Opinion.

Sir,—I may say that I tried to cut some glass in the manner mentioned, but I found that every piece split. It would be interesting to know if anyone has been successful.

F. Haggis.

Sir,—Re glass cutting under water, I tried the experiment the same night I read of it in Cage Birds, and must say that scissors will not cut glass to any particular shape or size you may require—only crack it into several pieces. The most useful thing I have found yet as a substitute for a glass cutter is an old broken file, which I guarantee will cut glass.

G. Mayo.

Sir,—With regard to the correspondence re glass cutting, I may say I was really amused at the idea of cutting glass in such a way, never having heard of it before, but, being at the time of reading, in a place convenient for giving the method a trial, I did so, and was surprised at the ease in cutting. I was with two others at the time, who also tried, and the only trouble was in cutting straight. Possibly practice would make more perfect.

Fred Broadhurst.

Sir,—I must certainly second what our John Gosling says, that it cannot be done. There is a little wheel glass cutting tool being sold in the streets at different market places, in the shape of a fish. This requires a little oil on the wheel before using; this is the best glass cutter I have seen.

C. J. Stupple.

Sir,—Glass cannot be "cut" with scissors; nevertheless, it can be "broken off" in ragged lumps, and by placing it under water you safeguard your eyes, nose, etc., from the bits of glass that fly off in the process of cutting (so-called). I am sending you a simple but effective device that I always use myself when I require glass for my seed hoppers. If I explained this to you, perhaps you would have a certain amount of doubt, but I intend to try to persuade you to test it yourself. To use this, you have only to imagine you are cutting with a diamond, although I fancy just wetting the corner improves it.

Thos. C. Podmore.

[The device referred to by Mr. Podmore is a piece (two inches long) broken off an old one-inch flat file, the edge where broken off being very sharp, and, of course, extremely hard.—Editor.]

(Several letters on this subject have to be held over.—Ed.)

A Claw Difficulty.

Sir,—Will some brother fancier kindly enlighten me on how to remedy a bird's fourth claw, bringing it into position to grip perches? I have a bird five weeks old in a very bad condition indeed.

Dandelion & Shepherd's Purse.

Fanciers' Societies and Public Houses.

Sir,—I was anxious to become a member of the Doncaster and District Bird Society, but having made some enquiries, find that they have removed headquarters to the "Black Bull" from the Victoria Rooms, and I cannot justify my conduct by visiting a "pub.," so I cannot become a member. I think the society do not want to encourage the Fancy, or they would not be so blind. It, however, has struck me that it is a case where some member of the committee may be able to throw some light on the subject from their standpoint. It is, of course, to be understood that I am casting no reflection either on this particular society or the individual house in which it is holding its meetings. It is the principle of holding meetings in public-houses to which I object.

To Hear the Nightingale Near London.

Sir,—I thought it might interest your readers to know where they can hear the Nightingale to perfection at the present time. Take a shilling return ticket to Chingford from Liverpool Street (G.E.R.). On arriving at Chingford turn to the right, then first to the left through the forest to the "Woodman" (closed now). Then turn to right, and at end of road get over stile and pass through two fields; you will then come to a small wood on the left (called Bluebell Wood) running up a hill. Go up this hill, keeping the wood on your left all the way; and when three-parts of the way up, sit down near the hedge and you will hear the 'Gales from 4 p.m. for as many hours as you wish to stay. And a lovely experience it is, as the sun sets, to watch and listen to the beautiful birds of every kind. But the Nightingales' notes sound clear and distinct above them all, and after all others have retired you hear the 'Gales on their own, not only near the wood, but all the way as you walk back to Chingford Station. As we sat on the hill one was singing on and off from 4 p.m.—not four yards away from us—and came down to feed only twelve yards distant. I go to this spot nearly every Thursday afternoon. There is a little farmhouse at the bottom of the hill, where tea can be obtained. I should be pleased to show any bird lover the spot by appointment on a Thursday or Sunday afternoon.

Can Mules Breed?

Another Reader Says "Yes."

Sir,—Reports of fertile Hybrids have been so often discredited that one feels reluctant to court adverse criticism by recording an authentic case which has just occurred of life resulting from the union of a Canary-Mule and a Canary. In the pursuit of my hobby of breeding Hybrids, I have for many years annually paired Mules of various kinds with feeders in order to put them to nest. Although the eggs from such unions were often incubated for several days, I never, until little over a week ago, saw any sign of fertilisation, notwithstanding that copulation may have been frequently witnessed by me. In March of this year, following my usual practice, I put up as a start a small hen Canary and a cock Siskin Mule. I did not require her, and the eggs were hatching nearly a week before being thrown out. They were quite clear. The pair were not separated, and a second clutch of eggs were laid in due course. You can judge of my surprise when I saw one of these with the cloud at the side so well known to breeders to indicate a fertile egg. I of course returned it to the nest, and on Saturday last there was hatched from it the smallest atom I have ever seen. I despaired of rearing it from the very first. On the following day my hopes, however, rose, as I observed the trace of food in the crop. It continued to gape in an indifferent fashion till Wednesday, when I was sorry to notice that it had contracted nest diarrhœa—that condition of the bowels which prevents the hen from being able to clean the nest, and as a result her breast feathers became damp and draggled. This disorder is believed by careless observers to be due to "sweating." I did all I knew to mend matters, and at last even introduced food into the crop of the nestling by gentle force. By such means I kept it alive till last night, but unfortunately, when I visited my bird room at four o'clock this morning, I found it dead. Needless to say, although this was not unexpected, I was nevertheless bitterly disappointed. It is, however, evidence that fertile Hybrids can be produced. I have the Mule now paired with a large Norwich hen, and if he fails to fertilise her eggs I shall return him to the little feeder and see if they will again produce living offspring. I am sure all my fellow-naturalists will join with me in the hope that I may yet be successful in rearing such an interesting specimen.

D. E. ALEXANDER.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Joseph Govier, I would like to say that it is quite possible for his cock Linnet Mule to have fertilised the eggs of the hen Canary. I think I clearly established this fact in past issues of CAGE BIRDS with the birds bred by Mr. J. Murray, of Sunderland. That well-known authority on Mule breeding, Mr. Charles Houlton, placed the matter beyond all doubt last year by breeding from the same pair of birds, which I had sent on to him to prove my case, his experience being related in his article in CAGE BIRDS a few weeks ago, and no doubt your Mr. Weston will have something good in store for readers of CAGE BIRDS when he writes his promised notes on the subject, he having further proof that Mules will breed. Regarding the proper names of birds so bred, that is rather a ticklish question, seeing that they are three-quarters Canary and one-quarter Linnet. I have never known any shown at an open show as such, but Mr. Murray exhibited three of his youngsters, or perhaps four, I forget which, at one of the Sunderland C.B.A. young bird shows in 1910, and the judge, Mr. J. T. Clarke, who knew what they were, put them back on the ground that they were not pure Mules in the true sense of the term, his contention being that a Mule should be half and half, and not three-quarters bred. I do not for one moment think that all Mules will breed, but it has been clearly proved that at least some will, and I would like to see Mr. Govier successful in his efforts, and thus further prove the possibility of this mating.

W. REID.

Prospective Bullie-Canaries.

Sir,—I have a cock Bullfinch that has been for some weeks past next to a variegated Nor. hen. By his manner I could see he had mated up with her, calling frequently close to the wire partition and carrying bits of nesting material. I drew the slide, and within ten days he had put her to nest. She laid a clutch of four eggs. Now, these eggs are quite different to the ordinary Canary, being free from the usual spots and quite clear in the shell save at the thick end where it is a dead blood colour shaded gradually into the natural shade. Yesterday I found one of the eggs on the floor and upon examining the yolk I could plainly see the usual sign of fertilization adhering to the side. Now, what I should like to know is, should they hatch out, what kind of food to supply. Perhaps, through the columns of your instructive paper someone would be good enough to offer the advice.

J. E. LEAVESLEY.

R.S.P.C.A. Please Note.

Sir,—Just a few lines concerning bird nest robbing. There are a gang of young fellows whose ages are from sixteen to twenty-three living in this valley (Ogmore Vale), and they go out on Sundays through the woods doing nothing else but looking for birds' nests and robbing them in a way that is shameful. Last Sunday there was a nest of young Thrushes in an ivy on the wall of a bridge. In this same ivy a Blackbird had also built her nest and laid eggs. These hooligans knew of this, and they went down there and with a long stick hit the nest and the eggs and young into the river below. This is not half what they are doing, for they put a lighted match to every bird they can catch and set all the feathers on fire. They take all the eggs they can find, and smash them at passers-by in the streets. Now, sir, this is hard to believe of young men of these ages, but it is true, and there is nobody here who will give me help to stop it going on. If you know a high official of the R.S.P.C.A., please show this to him, and I hope he will be good enough to take some steps to stop this sort of thing going on.

D. J. NOYES.

[We commend the above letter to the notice of the authorities, and trust it may be the means of having an end put to the atrocities mentioned. Almost in any walk along the outskirts of our London suburbs boys may be seen searching the hedge-rows for the purpose of taking eggs which are of no use to them, or young birds which they do not know how to keep, but it appears to be no man's business to interfere with them. A private person lays himself open to a storm of abuse, and a uniformed policeman has no chance of getting near them. It should, however, be possible for such an organisation as the R.S.P.C.A. to detail officers in private clothes who might fill up their official working hours to better purpose in this direction than in some other ways we could mention.—Ed. A Corner of a Californian Bird-lover's Magnificent Bird-room.

Sir,—I little thought when I sent you a picture of one of my bird-rooms that you would print it in your paper. I was pleased to receive CAGE BIRDS from my friend, Mr. Gibbins, of Leicester, and you may be sure I was delighted to see in it the picture of my room. I hope it will be useful to your readers. I now enclose pictures of my large room which you may use also. I consider this is one of the finest in the world; I had been longing for years to get one like it. Everything I made myself (place included) but the fronts and drinkers, and these I imported from Pimm, of Birmingham. Every little detail was thought out before I started. My cages are made in sets of eight compartments, with slides between every two. Each front, including wire and tray is 24in. by 18in. and 11½in. deep. In this room there are cages for 76 pairs (the one I sent you before has 44 cages). Everything is of uniform size; no moulding or fancy work. The room and inside of cages are painted sky blue, window frames and doors white, cage fronts bright black, seed hoppers, nest boxes and drinkers are white enamel. The two windows at each end, over the cages, open for ventilation. I can also slide the front windows past each other. When these are open it is like an outdoor place. All openings are protected from intruders by fine mesh wire, which is insect proof also, and almost invisible. The roof and walls are double, with a 4 in. cavity between, and well ventilated; this ensures a cool place on the hottest days. In the cupboard I store medicines and books and other small things. The bottom part is fitted with a balanced seed bin, which holds 100 lbs. of canary seed; three small drawers contain other kinds of seeds. The long shallow drawer is my egg tray, with 24 compartments. Inside the seat I store my moss, extra hoppers, perches, nest boxes, etc. The top of this seat is a sugar pine board, stained and polished; it is 8 ft. long 24 inches wide, and 1¼ in. thick. My perches are all made of hard oak; shape, half round. I think, by now, you will have a good idea of what my room is like.

Another Talking Canary Story.

Sir,—I would like to ask some of the readers of your valuable paper if they have ever heard of a Canary Talking? My grandmother once knew somebody who kept a bird which answered its mistress, every time it was asked a question, but on no account would it answer a stranger. Do you not think this a very strange thing?

V. TAYLOR.

New Society for Rossendale District.

Sir,—We have formed a new Cage Bird Fanciers' Society for the Rossendale District at the Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads, on May 7th; there was a good number present. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mr. Humphries; Chairman, Mr. Heys; Committee, Messrs. Lord, Wantling, Blyth, Johnson, and Robinson; Hon. Sec., Ingham Taylor, 308, Newchurch Road, Stacksteads. Next meeting, June 11th. We want all Bird Fanciers to join us in making the Society a success.

INGHAM TAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Some Information About Store Cages and Clap Nets.

Sir,—In answer to W. Turner, re store cages and clap nets, I can give him all the information he requires, as I have been a bird catcher and breeder for fifteen years, although I have now given up catching. In the first place, get two ¼in. boards 36in. by 12in. for top and bottom, and one for back 36in. by 8in.; four pieces 12in. by 8in., same thickness, two for ends and two for dividing into three compartments. Nail together squarely and firmly; then put your perches in, one in the front and one in the back; that is the store cage. For the front, get two pieces of ¼in. batten a quarter thick and 36in. long, two pieces of the same size 8in. long; make them into a frame. Drill holes for wires ¼in. apart, not forgetting your drinker holes in the wire front. Screw to cage with four small brass screws (the idea is to unscrew to clean out, as there is no drawer to a store cage). In the top cut three round holes, one in each compartment, big enough to put your hand in and out with a bird in it without hurting it; then get the legs of three stockings and tack round, and the cage is finished. Now for pack birds, I always had, when catching, thirteen birds: four Linnets, four Chaffinches, two Greenfinches, two Goldfinches and one Redpoll. For brace birds, one bright cock Greenie, one Linnet, and one hen Chaffinch. Put your Redpoll at the back of your nets one yard from staff, and place your other calls six each side (backs to nets), two feet apart, varying the different birds next to one another, half facing you when you are pulling and half facing away from nets. Now for "wind bound" wing, get a piece of ¾in. elastic, round or square, two-thirds the length of your staffs; tie a piece of pliable thin dark cord on each end, with two half-hitches, and an overhand knot that will not slip. On the other end of cords tie a small bowline. Place one in the groove of staff, then stretch along the ground and slip the other bowline over the peg that is holding the staff, and the wing will fly over at the least pull. Any further information required, I will give willingly. Wishing your paper all the success it so richly deserves.

E. TELSON.

The Nest of the Lesser Whitethroat.

Sir,—In your issue of May 4 Mr. J. W. Steel says: "The latter species, referring to the Greater Whitethroat, are much more common than the Lesser. Their habits are very similar, but the nests differ, that of the Greater being open like a Hedge Sparrow's and generally elevated above the ground; while the nest of the Lesser is domed like a Wren's or Willow Warbler's, and generally concealed in a tussock of grass or herbage." I always understood that this species builds a cup-shaped nest like the Greater Whitethroat, but shallower. I think Mr. Steel is taking the Wood Wren, which builds a domed nest, for the Lesser Whitethroat. At any rate, there seems to me to be some mistake. This species is difficult to trace in Scotland. I have never seen a Lesser Whitethroat's nest myself, but a gentleman took a clutch of eggs from a nest some years ago near Kilmarnock, and brought them to my friend Mr. Barr and myself for identification, and we pronounced them Lesser Whitethroat's eggs. Can any reader who has seen a Lesser Whitethroat's nest say whether this species builds a domed or a cup-shaped nest?

many changes. The ...rows are thickening, and the foundations of new bird-homes are constantly being laid, for although many pairs of the common House Sparrow are starting their second clutch of eggs, other birds have not all advanced at the same pace, and are only just now making a commencement. For all wild life May is the month of the year, and more broods of young birds are hatched and reared in it than in any other. And when hatched how quickly they grow! When first we see the Hedge Sparrows in their beautiful rounded home, built mostly of moss, and snugly lined with hair, they are such wee atoms that one can hardly distinguish their form and general appearance—just dark, fluffy little mites, with scarcely strength enough to hold up their heads. In a few days they have grown enormously, with wide gaping mouths, of the most lovely pink colour inside, wing feathers already of decent length, and long ungainly legs, apparently out of proportion to the rest of the body. The mother bird fusses about while we examine them, and the perky father sings us a sweet little lay from a rail in the hedge. Further along the path a Whitethroat scolds us, but not for long: he is so bubbling over with animal spirits that he cannot remain silent. With swelling throat and quivering wings he bursts into song, but a passing insect catches his eye, and, breaking off suddenly, he darts upwards, returning to his perch with surprising agility. We wait, hoping he will finish his music, but, catching sight of his mate, he chases her through the underwood, and over the bushes out of sight, although for some time we can hear their joyous calls. In the deeper shade of the woods, the sweet melody of the Blackcap fills the air. He is a charming performer, and second only to the King of Songsters.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under fifteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

Maternal Care.

In making repairs to a farm building it was necessary to remove an old spout, and in doing so a Martin's nest was destroyed. The young birds were removed by a workman and placed upon the roof, while they were fed by the parent birds the rest of the day. The next morning the old birds commenced to build a new nest, to which they removed the young ones before night.—(Cutting from "Science Gossip.")—Sent by H. Vinnicombe, jun., Leas Hotel, Folkestone.

A Knowing Thrush.

In a garden at Histon, not very far from here, a Thrush has built its nest between the branches of a fruit tree. The tree has been limewashed, and the artful bird has been and collected the white feathers from the farmyard and made a nest of them, so as not to be noticed. The gardener has worked under the tree for nine days without noticing the nest. The nest has five eggs in it, and the bird is sitting on them, and I hope they will not be disturbed.—Sent by Beatrice Garner (aged 13), Bannold, Waterbeach, Cambs.

*A Tame Greenfinch.

Browne is my pet Greenfinch. My brother caught him a few weeks ago, and he was extremely wild, about a fortnight back. I noticed how very ill he seemed, and took him out and made an examination. His feet were quite crippled and he was almost dead. I bathed his feet in warm water and put him in a warm room. I attended to him in this manner for several days, and nursed him back to life again; now he is so tame that he sits on my hand and feeds from my mouth. His feet are all right now, and he is quite well. This shows what kindness will do for our feathered pets.—Sent by Dorothy Lawrence (age 14), Mill Lane, Robin's Bridge Road, Coggeshall, Essex.

*How Pussy was Conquered

My father keeps a lot of Canaries in a bird room, and he has a cat which he trained to Canaries. The way he trained it was to put a bird in a cage on the table and then get an old cage front and hot it on the fire and put it in front of the cage. When puss went for the bird she burnt her nose. One night he was washing some birds and one got out of his hands. The cat ran after it and got it, and ran upstairs and laid it at the bird room door, and it was none the worse for it. This is quite true.—Sent by Emily Atherton (age 12, 18, Bache Street, Liverpool.

RAMBLE IN BIRD HAUNTS AT WALLASEY.

Wallasey C.B.S. ramble took place on May 4, but owing to threatening weather, the number taking part was somewhat small. Mr. Mallinson, our late secretary, was of the party, and gave us the benefit of his special knowledge of British birds, and Mr. George Barker, an able botanist, described to us the various herbs and plant life that came under observation. We started from headquarters at 3 o'clock, and soon found our way into the fields, our objective being Bidston Woods. We had to traverse a pathway skirting the Wirral Railway embankment, and as it is in such rather unfrequented places that the best specimens of plant life may be found, we soon got many examples, such as shepherds purse, wild hyacinth, spring vetch, pink and white campion, Jack by the Hedge, birdsfoot trefoil, violets, lesser stitchwort, to say nothing of dandelion and a superabundance of that ever welcome birdkeepers' friend, the chickweed. Our first birdy treat was listening to the song of the Willow Warbler; its song, although not loud, is very pleasing. Another instance worthy of note, was a Skylark perched on a low hoarding, singing for dear life, and our presence, instead of hindering, seemed rather to encourage him to prolong his vocal efforts ere he soared to heights above. From here we entered an old disused lane, an ideal spot, where we found, as expected, a variety of nests. Our first was a Blackbird's, in which the hen bird was sitting on three eggs. It was new to a novice of our company to find that the plumage of the hen Blackbird was not black but brown. After this we went in search of a Wren's nest, the existence of which was known to two of our party, and after careful search we were rewarded by seeing this most carefully built and most seclusive of nests. Here also we heard the Song Thrush and the Hedge Warbler, and were near enough to have a good view of such birds as the Meadow Pipit, Landrail, and Missel Thrush. Up to this point we had traversed fields only, and we were glad to be on the highway once more if only by way of a change. Leaving Bidston, we turned towards Moreton, and there we did justice to the fare provided by mine host of the Farmers' Arms. The homeward journey we found to be as instructive and pleasing as the first portion of the ramble. Our pathway led close by the shore of the River Dee, and we had a good chance to study the gulls that are plentiful in this neighbourhood. We also came across several Plovers. It was the unanimous opinion of all that our outing had been one long to be remembered. Such opportunities as these unite the members more closely, and afford the means of acquiring information from one another. It is by giving and receiving information that the best fanciers are made, and our hobby advanced. We intend holding another ramble early in June, when we hope most, if not all our, members will make an effort to take part.—T. Edwards, Hon. Sec.

BEDFORD AND BEDS. O.S. FIND A BIRDY PARADISE.

The members and friends of this society had an outing on May 9th, and a right good time they had. A brake left headquarters at 2 o'clock for Oak Farm, Old Warden, and it would be difficult to find a more perfect paradise for birds than this charming spot, and the day was an ideal one. On the way were to be seen many pairs of partridges, and upon nearing Shearhatch Wood large numbers of pheasants and rabbits were enjoying themselves in the fields adjacent to the woods. The first nest found was a Hedge Sparrow's, with its lovely blue tinted eggs; following this came close by a Blackbird's, with eggs, a Greater Tit's, built in the hollow stump of a tree, containing nine eggs; then a nest of five young Thrushes, about ten days old, and a nest of young Hedge Sparrows. Then followed many nests of Blackbirds, Thrushes, Greenfinches, Linnets, Redpolls, Chaffinches, etc., all containing either eggs or young birds. A Nightingale was heard in a plantation at the bottom of the farm, but the nest was not found. Two nests of pheasants containing eggs were found, and another was heard of containing fifteen eggs. This, however, was not found. After a couple of hours' nesting observation the party returned to the farmhouse, where Mr. Rayner had provided a substantial open-air tea, to which one and all did full justice. A Skylark close by made his ascent during teatime, and he was timed by one of the members as remaining in the air for 4½ minutes; this was considered rather longer than usual. Another hour's nesting followed the tea, then a delightful ride home finished up an afternoon's real enjoyment. Those wishing to join this society should communicate with the Hon. Sec. (Mr. J. C. Wilmot), or Mr. Rayner, at Ham's Restaurant.—J. C. Wilmot.

POPLAR C.B.S. LUXURIATES AT LAINDON.

The Poplar C.B.S. country ramble took place on Sunday, May 12th, to Laindon. There was a most excellent muster of 18 members. Lovely weather, with a cool breeze blowing, made the day a most pleasant one for walking. Starting across the Common, we were soon amongst the birds, the first nest found being a Bullfinch's with 5 eggs, and from this time onwards throughout the day there was a continual call to view new found nests, some with birds in, and others with eggs only. At 12.30 a halt was made to partake of lunch, and on resuming our ramble the first nest found was a Thrush's with 4 young birds about a week old, to be followed by many others of different species. As time was getting on, a bee-line was made for the Duke's Head Hotel, where tea was to be partaken of, and we arrived just in time to miss a very heavy thunder storm, which lasted for upwards of an hour, but which was nevertheless very welcome, as the country looked lovely afterwards, and gave off that refreshing smell which none but a Londoner can appreciate to the full. After tea, further exploring was done, and our finds were numerous and most varied, including the following nests:—Linnets', Thrushes', Bullfinches', Blackbirds', and last, but not least, in fact, the most interesting find of the day, was a Reed Bunting's nest, with 4 eggs, which had been built in the bank of a small sand pit, which had become overgrown with braken. Had it not been for the fact that the bird was seen to fly out of the hole, we doubt if it would have been possible to find it, being so well protected. We take this opportunity of recommending any London society to Laindon for a ramble, and can assure them of an interesting day, both as regards birds and scenery, which is very pretty about there, and should they desire it, I have no doubt that one of our members would be pleased to act as their guide. The Duke's Head Hotel have catered for us with entire satisfaction for two years, at 1s. 3d. per head for a meat tea, which, after a day's ramble, can naturally be done full justice to. Friend Harrington, the proprietor, does you well.—H. W. Cook, Hon. Sec.

Fined for Catching Birds in the Close Season.

Robert Paton, shoemaker, of White's Place, Forton, was summoned under the Wild Birds Protection Act.—Inspector Thomas Whiting, R.S.P.C.A., prosecuted.—P.C. Bowering said that he saw defendant carrying a basket and also something tied up in a handkerchief, in Monckton Road. After interrogating defendant he examined the basket, and found it contained ten Linnets and two Goldfinches. Wrapped in the handkerchief he found three decoy birds. Defendant denied at first that he had caught them, and told the constable that they belonged to him, and that he had been to Fort Monckton to try and sell them, but afterwards admitted he had caught them.—The constable told the Bench that he afterwards made a search at Monckton, and found the spreaders (produced) used for throwing a net, and he also found nine Linnets dead, evidently hen birds which defendant did not require.—Defendant, who was excited and rather impertinent, had to be called to order by the Chairman, and told not to get so excited.—Defendant was found guilty, and ordered to pay 14s. and 16s. costs.

LEYTON C.B.A.

The Leyton C.B.A. cordially invite any fanciers or others interested in bird life to accompany them on their annual ramble through Epping Forest, May 18th. The main party will start from Loughton Station at 3 p.m., after meeting the 2.58 train. Arrangements have been made for a substantial meat tea at the Owl. Train leaves Liverpool Street, 2.8, change at Woodford for train leaving Fenchurch Street 2.42 arriving Loughton 2.58. Those who cannot get to Loughton by this time, or who prefer to ramble in pairs or trios, please meet at 6 o'clock at the Owl for tea. It has been suggested that a party be formed for May 23rd. Any member or friend wishing to join this party should communicate with us, we will then forward particulars as to time, etc.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs., 31, Thornhill Road, Leyton, N.E.

MANCHESTER AND NORTHERN COUNTIES O.A.

General meeting held May 6th. Mr. T. Harrison, Altrincham, gave a lecture on Greens and colour breeding. He said that in breeding Greens colour is a very important point, and is sometimes overlooked for type, etc. The colour of the wild Canary had been improved upon by careful and judicious mating. He preferred dark birds for breeding Greens, as one got a lot of colour from fouls, and advised proceeding as follows: Double buff three or four times and double yellow once; use cocks from the double buffs and the hens from double yellows. The reason for double buffing was to get size and colour, the buffs in Greens carrying the most colour; but care should be taken that the birds be well balanced; there is a better chance of getting good colour from fouls. Width in markings was lost by continually using self's. He liked to have fouls with dark outside flights. In using marked hens breeders should pick those with a self green cap, not broken in any way. Mr. Harrison then touched upon breeding for colour, and mentioned that all his Greens were bred from the clear variety. It is no use trying to get colour into your birds unless you breed for it. In breeding for colour one should breed for stock birds as well as show birds. The lecturer also touched upon colour feeding, the care of young, etc. Several questions were asked and answered, and the meeting came to a close with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Harrison for his instructive lecture.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting, held May 13, Mr. James Jones presiding. Arrangements were made in connection with the members' show, to be held at Carnarvon on Whit Monday. There are excellent prospects for a splendid show.—John Wynne Parry, Hon. Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

General meeting held May 8 at Headquarters, when a fair number of members attended. Arrangements were made for the club ramble, May 19, when the district around Newick, Sussex, will be explored. Many gave in their names. It is hoped to join hands with a party from Lewes. Young stock show fixed for July 3rd, at headquarters, Mr. W. Swaysland judge. Classes will be arranged in due course and circulated to all members. Decided, not to obtain a cup for the annual show at present.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, May 8th, Mr. Taylor in the chair. Mr. C. Houlton, of St. Helens, gave a lecture on British Birds and Canaries dealing fully with the feeding and general treatment of the different varieties. After he had finished Mr. Houlton offered to answer questions, but he had told all in such a manner that it seemed impossible to find any questions to ask. The good muster of members present shows the enthusiastic spirit essential for the progressing of a society. A vote of thanks was unanimously given to Mr. Houlton. Two new members were made. Table show May 22nd.—R. Charleson, Sec.

DULWICH & PECKHAM C.B.S.

A good number of members and friends met May 7th, at headquarters, to hear Mr. Marley on British birds. Mr. F. Cole in the chair. Mr. Marley, in dealing with the fascinating hobby of keeping British birds, kept the attention of his audience for well over an hour. He dealt with the birds in their wild state, their food, habits, and migration of the different species, and went on to talk of the birds in captivity, the best methods of feeding, cages, moulting for exhibition, etc. He dealt at some length with several of the favourite softbills, and also many of the favourite Finches. After his lecture Mr. Marley answered many questions in a very lucid and able manner; everyone feeling they had spent a very interesting and profitable evening. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Marley, to which he briefly replied.—W. Hudson, Hon. Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Held May 9. Arrangements made for evening show all sections, May 23rd, admission free, at Workman's Hall, Romford Road, E. Judges, Messrs. C. W. Mead, poultry and cage birds; A. Sears, pigeons. Special prizes were promised for best teams of three exhibits in each section. New member: Master C. A. Sims. Mr. J. Reed, treasurer, mentioned that he had received from Baron de Forest, M.P., a very handsome silver challenge cup, engraved as follows:—"The Baron de Forest Challenge Cup. Presented by the Baron de Forest to the Stratford and East London Fanciers, 1912." A most hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Baron for his kindness. A special committee meeting will decide later the terms upon which the cup shall be competed for. Mr. L. Hawkes also presented the society with a handsome embossed silver cup as a points cup for cage birds, for most points during the year. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Hawkes.—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Monthly meeting, May 15. A record gathering, Mr. Hughes, chairman. Four new members were elected, bringing the total up to 56. The chairman said he hoped all the older members would extend a warm welcome to the new elected fanciers. He wanted to see all as brothers in this society, and avoid a feeling of coldness which so often marred the entry of a new one amongst them. Young bird show arrangements completed. Messrs. Kidner, Walton, West, Constable, Burke, Harding, and Hall are elected Stewards for the shows. Specials totalled 21. No classes allowed to go free. An impromptu debate followed. Questions being placed on paper and drawn for, the information obtained was very instructive. The following gave most useful hints and information: Messrs. Burke, J. H. de Maillett, Wright, Jeffery, Southon, Hughes Swinden, Derry. All were sorry when the usual time for closing arrived, and another debate will be arranged. Every fancier should send for the art programme, and join at the June meeting.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

Monthly meeting at "The Feathers," Great Chapel Street, Westminster, S.W. Mr. R. L. Crisp, President, in the chair. A letter was read from the National British Bird and Mule Club inviting members to join them in their annual outing. Those wishing to take part, the secretaries, Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, W., would be pleased to hear from. It was decided to have a young bird show on June 29th. Schedule as last young bird show. Mr. John Robson, judge. The President distributed the diplomas and awards of merit, the winners being Messrs. Marley, Thursby, F. Smith, and F. Knight. Several were unable to be present to receive theirs. Mr. E. Stone was nominated for membership, and Mr. Marley was elected a delegate for the London Federation. Through the kindness of Mr. G. Stevens, of Cheltenham, a most interesting paper was read by the Secretary, dealing with Hybrid breeding and the methods to adopt to obtain the best results—feeding, moulting, pairing, and selection for breeding etc. The following crosses were specially mentioned: Canary-Bullfinch, Goldfinch-Bullfinch, Linnet-Bullfinch, Greenfinch-Bullfinch, Redpoll-Bullfinch, Goldfinch Linnet, Goldfinch-Greenfinch, Goldfinch-Siskin, Goldfinch-Redpoll, Goldfinch-Twite, Brambhlefinch-Chaffinch, Greenfinch-Chaffinch, Greenfinch-Siskin, Greenfinch-Redpoll, Linnet-Siskin, Redpoll Siskin, Greenfinch-Linnet, also a list of crosses not yet obtained, but in Mr. Stevens' opinion possible. A debate followed, and Messrs. Marley, Dewhurst, Robson, and Trower gave some most interesting experiences, etc. A unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. G. Stevens for his kindness in preparing the paper, also for the valuable information contained. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed a well-attended meeting.—W. H. Mugford, Sec.; F. Knight, Assist. Sec.

Carlaw (Falkirk), J. Pringle, T. Pringle (Selkirk), J. Main (Coatbridge), W. and R. C. Muirhead (Bannockburn), J. Lavery (Lurgan), W. Carson, J. Dalgleish (Leith), J. McMillan, J. J. McIlwain, J. Muir (Glasgow), W. Gibb (Wishaw), F. Finlay (Darvel), J. Dodds (Hawick), D. Caldwell, H. R. Caldwell (Baillieston), J. Black (Arbroath), J. H. Buchan, W. R. Dunn (Portobello), A. Gilchrist (Loanhead), J. Chalmers (Musselburgh), A. Russell (Airdrie), J. Gardiner (Duns), R. Willison (Barrow-in-Furness), J. Robertson (High Harrington), C. Tanssens (Belgium). 389 tickets have yet to be accounted for. Next meeting, May 25th. As we are desirous of having a good report to submit as to membership, will fanciers kindly oblige by sending on their decisions by that date? We are pleased indeed at the way members are coming in, and if this continues up till closing date, May 31st, success is assured.—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, Derwent Hotel. Arrangements for season and shows were made. First feather show and club outing, at Melbourne, July 13th, at Blue Bell Hotel; judge, Mr. J. H. Drakeley. Tickets, including prize draw, are now on sale, price 2d. Fanciers wishing to take part in the club outing will be welcome: information will be gladly given by the secretaries. A photo of the members will be taken during the day, and we hope every member will book this date and make the affair a success; more details next meeting. We have secured the Mechanics' Lecture Hall for our annual show—an excellent building, passed by all tramcars and right in the town's main thoroughfare. Next meeting night being nomination night; those not present must nominate by Sunday's post. Also Crest breeders breeding young yellow Crest must notify me before birds are three weeks old. Three new members were elected. If there are any fanciers who would like to join us. We shall be glad to receive their names, as after May meeting night it will be too late for them to compete in members' classes. A full attendance next meeting, please.—Wharam and Bamsey.

PORTOBELLO C.B.S.

May 1st, members presented one of their officials, Mr. W. Leckie, with a writing desk, suitably inscribed, as a token of the high esteem in which he was held by them. Mr. Matthew, the President, occupied the chair, and after the usual toasts he presented the desk to Mr. Leckie on behalf of the members, and in a brilliant speech dwelt at great length on the able assistance he (Mr. Leckie) had given the Society since its foundation, and expressed his deep regret that the Society was about to lose such a valuable asset from their midst. Mr. Leckie replied that he would, when away from Portobello, like still to retain his membership, and that he would treasure the gift, not alone for its value, but for the spirit in which it had been given, and it would always keep fresh the memory of the Society and its associates. After several members had made speeches the meeting broke into a go-as-you-please concert. Several members, including Messrs. Buchan, Neillands, Dawson, Millar, Laird, and Vass bringing rounds of applause from the company, Mr. Anderson and a gramophone filling in the intervals with good selections. A vote of thanks to the chair, and the singing of the usual finales, brought a splendid evening's entertainment to a close.—J. Davidson, Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Monthly meeting, Co-operative Hall (St. George's Cross), April 10, Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a fair attendance. 20 classes for the first feather show, July 6, were fixed, including Crests, Crest-breds, Norwich Plainheads (with Cinnamons added), Border Fancies, Yorks., Scotch Fancies, A.O.V. Canary, Mules, and Hybrids (Mr. E. Barron, Glasgow, judge). Mr. Archibald Robin was elected a member. Decided to have a ramble to Craigallian Estate, Milngavie, on June 15. Train from Queen Street Station at 2.32 p.m., to Milngavie. Will all members please note this, and also make a special endeavour to be present, as it is desired that we should have a large turn-out of members and friends on this occasion (further arrangements later). An interesting lecture on British birds was given by Mr. A. Wilson, but before beginning lecture Mr. Wilson gave a short descriptive lecture on the wild Canary, a specimen of which he brought with him to enlighten the members as to what the domesticated Canary originated from. In describing its origin he (Mr. Wilson) went back as far as 1478, when the Spaniards discovered that the song of these birds was such that they could sell and export them at a profit. In the British birds lecture, Mr. Wilson first dealt with the picking of birds to moult for show purposes, then the feeding of same. On this he dwelt largely, and mentioned that in his opinion there was no hard and fast rule as to what seeds or mixture of seeds was the best to feed upon, some birds doing better on one kind and some on another kind. After questions had been asked and answered, Mr. Wilson was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

HEBDEN BRIDGE AND CALDER VALLEY O.S.

Meeting held May 9th. First feather show, July 6th, Mr. H. W. Walsh, Halifax, judge. Mr. S. H. Jeffreys kindly offered a gold medal, value £1 1s., to be competed for during the season at all shows held by the Society. We have a grand lot of specials for the coming season, and should be pleased to see all fanciers in this district come forward and join us and compete. All are heartily welcome.—A. Pickles.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Special general meeting, held May 11th, Queen's Head Hotel, Riddings, when a fair attendance of members turned up. Agreed to hold a two days' open show this year to enable us to get all exhibits away on Saturday afternoon, to reach their destination the same night. Also arranged to have a ramble on Whit-Tuesday, meet at Three Tuns, Eastwood, 10 a.m., when it is to be hoped all members will try and turn out. Agreed to have show date inserted in "C.B.'s" show dates fixed column.—J.H. Mitchell, Hon. Sec.

STIRLING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting was held Douglas Hotel, on May 4, Mr. Summers in the chair. A new member was enrolled, and letters were read from the following judges, namely: Norwich, Mr. R. Martin, Kirkintilloch; Borders and Scotch Fancies, Mr. J. Hamilton, Eskbank; Brit. and For., Mr. P. Pettigrew. The class list was gone over, and two Norwich and a British hen class were added, which now makes 45 classes. It was decided to change headquarters, and next meeting will be held in McDonald's Temperance Hotel (Top of Arcade), on 1st June.—W. Clubb, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting held Grange Park Hall, May 6th. The principal item was the egg-food making competition, for which there were four competitors—Messrs. Parker, Dalton, Farmer, and Parr. Each competitor brought his own appliances, and the process of egg-food making by their different methods proved very interesting. Mr. Parker used bread crumbs, while the others used biscuit to mix with the egg. Mr. J. S. Clarke officiated as judge, and awarded cash prize to Mr. Parker, Messrs. Dalton, Farmer and Parr following in the order named. Mr. Clarke gave very full remarks on each competitor's work, which greatly added to the interest of the competition. A discussion followed, dealing with the relative values of bread and biscuit for mixing with the hard-boiled egg. Mr. Clarke recommended chickweed as green food, especially when seedy, and later in the year plantain. Failing chickweed, Mr. Clarke preferred watercress. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Clarke for the able manner in which he judged the competition.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 8th, Westmorland Street Mission Room, Mr. J. G. Cowly in the chair, supported by G. Butler and T. Ridal. Doorkeepers and stewards were elected—W. P. Chadwick and J. Scott stewards. The tick question came up for discussion. Decided to put right any bird placed in its wrong class. Show opens at 4 p.m.; all birds to be staged by 2. Decided to have an advert. in Fancy papers the week previous to the show. The following gentlemen promised specials: Tomlinson, Lawton, Riddle, Thorpe, Fletcher, Hartley, Hobson, Bailey, J. Scott, Woolhouse, Butler, J. G. Cowley, making two for each section. This, combined with fixed prize money, should go a long way to securing a record entry. Unfortunately luck has not been great this season up to now. We are having a series of table shows, the first on June 6th. Twelve specials are promised and allotted for most points and second most points throughout the year. Stewards for June show, Chadwick and Sisson. Judges, Woolhouse and Furniss. All birds to be staged by 8 sharp. Now, members, buck up and let us have a bumper. Please note date. (Classification on Rule card).—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting May 8th. Five new members were elected. Before a good attendance of members, Mr. Crawhall (Newcastle) gave his lecture on breeding and rearing young, which was very instructive and interesting. After answering many questions, Mr. Crawhall was thanked for the lecture, and a pleasant meeting ended.—J. Davison.

GLASGOW AND DIST. C.B.A.

A special general meeting of the club will be held on May 21st, in Duncan's Restaurant, 71, London Street, Glasgow, at 8, to consider the advisability of holding another open show. The deficit on the last show has now been cleared, and when the subscription sheets now in the hands of the committee are returned it is expected to show a small balance in hand. Sheets should be handed in on or before date of meeting. The fanciers of Glasgow should turn up and give the club their support, without which it is impossible to hold another open show. The trophy for most points at the late show was again won by Glasgow and West of Scotland, with 137 points, the runners-up being Partick and Dis., 129 points, the Glasgow West End Club were third with 94 points.—Fred Bowman, Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting held May 6th, at Pillar's Cafe, Mr. W. Smith in the chair. The classification for shows receiving our patronage was then gone into, the classes required being as follows: Clear or ticked yell. cock, clear or ticked buff cock, yell. or buff marked, hen any colour, green or cinn. yell., ditto buff, novice Border, Scotch Fancy. Decided that we get some books printed with 30 ticket in each to sell at 1d. each ticket, the prizes to be: 1st value 10s., 2nd value 5s., 3rd value 2s. 6d.; 4th value 2s. 6d. The draw to take place at meeting room, 1st July. Decided to hold two table shows, the first on the first Monday in June, the second on the first Monday in July. Mr. Montgomery, judge for first show, Mr. G. E. Ellwood for second. The horns given as a special are for champion section, and the medal for novice section for most points gained at table shows. Classes for the table shows: three for each section. 1, Clear or marked yell; 2, clear or marked buff; 3, green or cinn. The following were elected members: Mr. Ross, Ashington; Mr. Espie, Gosforth; Mr. Little, Percy Main. M. S. Potts, Hon. Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A

General meeting held Onward Hall, May 7. Mr. W. Willison presided over a good muster of members to hear Mr. W. Fairhurst lecture on "Mule Breeding." He reminded those present that anyone commencing who thought that they would make any profit would be very much mistaken, and, although a very interesting part of the hobby, it required men with plenty of patience. He was in favour of three compartment breeding cages. In selecting of stock, he preferred the cocks to be long-sided birds (Yorkshire type). For hens he preferred large yellow Norwich. The outstanding object of mule breeding was beauty, and that was why he used yellows and cared very little for buffs, as the latter produced poor colour. Feeding: He disputed the fact mentioned by some that they can on plain white Canary seed only keep Goldfinches not only in show condition, but also bring them on to breeding condition. He used equal parts of teazle and canary seed, also nigs, hemp, linseed, rape, thistle, cracked sunflower, and dandelion and maw. He dealt with the feeding of Goldfinches and Linnets, from the moult to the arrival of breeding season; he believed in giving mealworms to the Goldfinches; a method used by him was to break open a thistle-head and place a meal worm in the centre. Goldfinches will think it is the grub usually found in the thistle-heads, and when once they have tasted them, there will be no difficulty afterwards in getting them to eat them. After the lecture many questions were asked, which the lecturer answered to the satisfaction of all. A vote of thanks was given Mr. Fairhurst for his able and instructive lecture, Mr. Fairhurst replying. — J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-ides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—It the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Foollines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE "FILUP" BIRD FEEDER.

14 Days' Free Trial.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

HAND-REARED PIPING BULLFINCHES.

for 2½d. That's very cheap; too cheap to be true. But we do not mean that exactly. What we do mean is that "Nutshell" No 1, "The Bullfinch." will show you how to catch these richly coloured Britishers; how to hand-rear the young, how to teach "Bullies" to pipe tunes. The price is 2½d. post free, and you can get the book from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

What a fine ambition for a British bird lover! Too high? Not if you've got "Nutshell" No. 1, "The Goldfinch." This booklet shows you the simplest way to catch your own, how to treat the Goldfinch when caught, how to hand-rear the young; how to distinguish sex; and answers innumerable other "how's." For those who prefer buying to catching, there is a valuable section, and feeding troubles are completely overcome. The exhibition Goldfinch is described, and it is possible, if the hints are followed, for every fancier of British to have a winning Goldie. For full information as to moulting, and the best show and stock cages, you cannot better "Nutshell" No. 1, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FOR a full description of two of the most popular softbills, you cannot have a better booklet than "Nutshell" No. 4, "The Song Thrush and Blackbird." With its help you will be able to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition. Included in the work are directions for hand-rearing and the selection of show birds, as well as particulars of cages, "Nutshell" No. 4, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

so as to detect when any of your Rollers are going wrong. How can you detect anything wrong? You don't know? Well, you ought to, for your lack of knowledge will be disastrous to the singing powers of your birds. "Nutshell" No. 10 gives you this knowledge, and if you don't get it, it will be a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Which bird promises to be good with hollow roll, bell-roll, bass-roll, and Koller? How do you cure a bird of noisiness? What are the best training methods and the best preparation for contest singing? For answers to these great questions in Roller Canarydom, and also full particulars as to correct keeping and breeding, get "Nutshell" No. 10, "The Roller Canary," 2½d. post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

"THE PEKIN" a freely imported bird (it may be purchased for the modest half-crown) when writing of foreign birds in all their glowing tropical beauty, the Pekin Nightingale is in the very front rank . . . the ideal cage and aviary bird." Thus writes Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell" No. 19, "The Pekin Nightingale." He goes on to show how this charming bird can be managed and bred in captivity, giving full particulars as to its treatment at every stage of its existence; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

NOTICE! To those about to buy a Grey Parrot. There are many points to look for when making your purchase, ways of telling at a glance in what state of health the bird is. Though it is difficult to distinguish sex, there are means. The Grey Parrot is a delicate bird, and the feeding of a newly-imported specimen is therefore a matter of the utmost importance. Then, the Parrot acclimatised, care with its general diet is very needful; there are many foods which it will readily eat, but which must be rigidly avoided. With due care you can make a grand talker of a "Grey," and quickly, too, if you know how. What is a common mistake which Parrot lovers make? The answer to this question, and to every other concerning the keeping of this popular bird in health and condition will be found in "Nutshell" No. 17, "The Grey Parrot," by Wesley T. Page; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds, 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

BIRD LIFE AROUND PICKMERE.

Pendleton and Salford O.S. held their annual ramble, May 12, the route taken being proposed by Mr. G. W. Lythgoe. The party took train to Knutsford, of Mayday fame, and from there through the fields to Pickmere. The country is now at its best; this part abounds in bird life. We heard the Cuckoo several times; Swallows were plentiful and commencing building operations. We found plenty of nests, with both eggs and young, of the Chaffinch, Yellowhammer, Greenfinch, Thrush, and Blackbird, various Tits, etc. On arrival at Bugworth we raided a farm for milk, and after we had refreshed ourselves Mr. H. Birch photographed the group, so through his kindness we have something by us to remind us of the good time we had. On arrival at Pickmere we had about an hour's boating on the mere while tea was being made ready. I am sure we amused the visitors, as of our party there were only a few who could row, and, of course, we all had a try. At the "Red Lion" we did full justice to a splendid tea, after which we started off on our walk for the return train. The members, with their dandelion, chickweed, shepherd's purse, etc., not forgetting the various blossoms gathered from the hedges, appeared to be something of botanists as well as birdy men. We voted it one of the best outings it was possible to have. —Critchley and Metcalfe, secs.

A GLORIOUS DAY FOR DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

On Sunday, May 12, a glorious morning, once again the members and friends of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. were off for their ramble in the country, and to see the birds in their wild life. The locality chosen was Boxhill, Ranmore Common, and Holmwood Common; and what more lovely country could be selected? On the way to Ranmore Common, for a short distance our way led along a country lane, thence across the fields, and through a lovely wooded glen. Before separating in our search for the birds a photograph (reproduced in this issue) of the group was taken, Mr. Reeks being the photographer. This being over, we were soon among the furze bushes. Mr. Yeoman soon found a nest of young Chaffinches, just hatched, and Mr. Reeks Blackbirds just about ready to fly; other nests found in quick succession were Linnets with young, Thrush, Whitethroat, Hedge Sparrow, and Greenfinch. The lovely song of the Blackcap was heard, but we failed to locate the nest; the Chiff-Chaff was heard on all sides. A large nest was noticed high up in a tree, and one of us was soon climbing up, to find it was that of a Magpie just completed. The Spotted Flycatcher was seen, and we heard the Nightjar calling. Pied Wagtails were much in evidence close to a small pond; many birds were down here drinking. The call of the Cuckoo was heard coming from the distance. Two youthful members of the party, Master Warley and Master Lee, were thoroughly enjoying themselves, and were delighted with the nests, eggs, and birds they saw. A lovely walk into Dorking brought us to the Temperance Hotel, where a cold collation awaited us, to which everyone did ample justice. Afterwards to Holmwood Common, where bird life did not this year appear quite so plentiful as in the past, but none the less many nests were found, one of the most interesting being that of the Jenny Wren with seven eggs; the nest was very cunningly built on the ground underneath some dry sticks, but friend Reeks knew where to look. Just on five o'clock heavy peals of thunder were heard in the distance, and we realised that our day with the birds was over, so we began a walk back into Dorking, where tea was waiting for us. We reached London again tired, but refreshed with our day in the country, pleased with the birds we had seen, and with the chats we had of the doings of the birds in the breeding rooms at home. The party included Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Tringham, Mr. and Mrs. Lee and Master Lee, Mr. A. J. Warley and Master Warley, Messrs. Yeoman, Parker, Drexler, Munnings, F. Cole, H. W. Tomsett, A. Spillman, W. B. Cracknell, J. Peck, D. Reeks, A. R. Jay, J. Bracher, J. Hazell, J. Fairman, Stewart Grahame, C. Austin, C. Austin, jun., Nichols, the brothers Levy, and Mr. W. Hodson, the respected hon. sec., who admirably carried out all arrangements for the outing.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S. AT ASHTEAD.

On May 19 the Wimbledon C.B.S. enjoyed a ramble in the pretty and picturesque district of Epsom Heath and Ashtead Woods, for the purpose of studying wild bird life and enjoying a very pleasant day. Starting from Epsom in the morning, the party rambled over the Heath to Chessington, discovering many and various nests on the way, lunching at Chessington at "The Star." In the afternoon they strolled through the woods to the verge of Leatherhead and thence to Ashtead, where they had tea in a meadow at "The Duke's Hall." Among the nests noted in the course of the ramble were those of Thrushes, Blackbirds, Chaffinches, Goldfinches, Wrens, Wood-pigeons, and Doves, the structure of which, with the number of eggs or young ones they contained, being duly noted. Needless to say, the nests were not interfered with in any way, the bird lovers being content to examine them and just look at the young birds or eggs in them as the case might be. The weather was lovely, and the country in the fresh green of spring was looking its best, and besides enjoying a healthful and delightful time the party added not a little to their knowledge of the lives and habits of wild birds. The only pity was that more members did not take advantage of the opportunity of spending so charming a day. A few of the party remained till the last train to hear the Nightingales which abound in the woods.

EAST HAM C.B.S. VISITS EPPING FOREST.

The East Ham C.B.S. on May 12 had their annual ramble to Epping Forest. The weather was most gracious, except for a storm at the end of the day. There were not a great number of members, but we had a most enjoyable day. At Loughton our guide, Mr. Packer, introduced the party to Mr. Glasscock, a local gentleman, who keeps about two hundred British purely for pleasure, not being an exhibitor. We saw here some magnificent Goldfinches, and it was one of the great pleasures of the day to find such a collection. Pushing on into the forest we found "bird life" in all its beauty. Chaffinches, Linnets, Blackbirds, Thrushes, some nests with eggs only, some with young just showing wing butts, some just about to leave their nests. We reached the "Owl," High Beech, about 3, all ready to do justice to the good lunch provided by the hostess, Mrs. Longdon, returning home about 6.30, all having enjoyed a good time.—Frederick Fox, Hon. Sec.

S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

Special meeting held May 16th at new headquarters, The New Guild Hall, 638 and 640, Wandsworth-road; Mr. Slade presided. Everyone seemed delighted with the society's new home. We have a nice room, in which to hold our meetings, and the use of the large hall for our shows. To commemorate the first meeting, Mr. Slade presented a handsome gold centre silver medal for the member who introduces the most new members during 1912. Schedule for young bird show June 29th drawn up and specials allotted. Money specials for every class and three silver medals for most entries in champion, novice, and British bird sections.—Hy. A. Freeman, Hon. Sec.

WELSH C.B.C.

Annual general meeting held May 18, Mr. D. H. Tealstone presiding. Balance sheet showing cash in hand £17 9s. 7d., read and accepted. Following new members accepted: Messrs. W. Palmer and H. J. Ford (Swansea), C. Latham (Tredegar), and T. Hodson (Brecon). A vote of sympathy was extended to Mr. S. H. George (Swansea), who, we are sorry to say, has met with a serious accident. The following are the cup winners for last season: Mr. W. B. Watkin (Tredegar), Leach's Canary and Mr. Sandiford's cups; Capt. Collier, Norwich Plainhead Cup; Mr. J. E. Jeffreys (Swansea), Leach British Cup. Medal winners: Messrs. W. B. Watkins, B. W. Collier, J. E. Jeffreys, S. H. George, F. H. Cook, and G. T. Jones. Several societies wrote asking for our patronage, but this matter was adjourned until next meeting. Show and general rules were revised. Officers for 1912: Chairman, D. A. S. Longden; vice-chair, E. J. Bevan; Treas., J. H. Jones; Sec., A. E. Brown; Auditors, Messrs. G. L. Harber and G. T. Jones. Committee, Messrs. E. J. Powell, W. B. Watkins, D. H. Tedstone, T. Hodson, J. E. Jeffreys, Dan Thomas; Judges, Messrs. D. A. S. Longden, G. L. Harber, D. H. Tedstone, J. H. Jones, J. E. Jeffreys, and G. T. Jones. Will members please send their subscriptions? I think I can safely say the club is in a flourishing condition, and I strongly appeal to all fanciers in Wales and Monmouthshire to join; fee only 3s. per annum, which must be sent with application. Now we have revised our rules and brought the club more up to date, it ought to have a tendency to considerably increase our membership.—A. E. Brown, Hon. Sec., 66, Clare Street, Merthyr Tydfil.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

The Annual General Meeting.

Annual general meeting held Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, May 18th. There was a good attendance, Mr. H. H. Towers in the chair. The balance-sheet, which showed a balance in hand of £4 0s. 11½d., was adopted. The chairman gave the result of the ballot for officers for 1912-13:—Pres., Mr. H. H. Towers (unopposed); vice-pres., Mr. R. Halliday (unopposed); committee (inside Yorkshire), Messrs. F. Hammond 67 votes, H. Hill 66, H. W. Battye 48, W. H. Shackleton 45, F. Armstrong 44, F. Allen 42, T. Ogden 41, S. Dean 39, W. Cruise 33, and J. Bailey 33; outside Yorkshire, Messrs. A. Hirst 75, J. W. Ramsden 72, T. C. Crawhall 60, G. W. Cuthbertson 51, and W. Broughton 44; hon. secs. and treas., John Greaves; assist.-secs., W. Crabtree (unopposed). Total number of papers returned, 89, of which two were rejected. The following were elected by the meeting:—Committee, Messrs. A. Cooper, A. Brown, H. J. Chittenden, W. A. Cowgill, R. Garnett, C. Morrison, M. Peel, E. Clegg, F. Townsend, and H. Charlesworth; scrutineers, Messrs. T. Ogden and H. Simonett; auditors, Messrs. R. W. Alderson and R. Garnett. Two new by-laws were made, viz.: Should any member neglect to pay his subscription to the club, he shall be notified of the same by the secs., and if such subscription be not paid in a given time he may be excluded from membership, and reported to the other specialist Yorkshire clubs, Yorkshire Union, etc. (as per by-law 12). A person may cease to be a member of the club at any time on giving notice to the secretary (in writing) to that effect, and the payment of all his liabilities to the club up to that date. Decided to continue competitions as last year. The following resignations were accepted with regret: Mrs. C. M. Sunderland, Messrs. D. Sunderland, T. C. Parkes, W. Blakey, J. Naylor, H. S. Naylor, A. Wright and Son, F. Drake, J. Dyson, T. Wood, T. Fortnam, H. Bradshaw, and T. Clegg. Messrs. S. Binns, A. G. Rhodes, T. W. Mountain, E. Stobart, H. Pearson (Queensbury), H. E. Wilkinson (Australia), H. Tyas, W. H. Kilburn, H. Clayton (Manchester), and W. Mitchell (Mirfield) were made members. Mr. A. Sutcliffe (Halifax) offered a smoker's cabinet, and Mr. A. Cooper a pair of paintings on glass, for competition in the coming season. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to retiring officers and donors of special prizes.—John Greaves, Sec.

Cage Birds League Associates.

I am very sorry that, through a mishap, the particulars of our new idea of enrolling Associate Members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE were omitted from our columns last week. They will be found this week on page 468, and I hope that every reader of our organ, CAGE BIRDS, will become an Associate Member of the LEAGUE. The opposition to the keeping of birds of any sort in cages is every day showing its activity, and last week a letter appeared in many provincial papers appealing to people to do all that they could to discourage the hobby of bird-keeping. It behoves us as bird-keepers that, while we yield nothing to the ultra-humanitarians in our love of birds, we take steps to show these people who know nothing of the subject, that the proper keeping of a bird in captivity entails no cruelty or discomfort to the bird. There may be some who, from want of an understanding of their birds' requirements, omit sometimes to do all that they should do to minister to their happiness. Readers of CAGE BIRDS are not of this class, and it is their duty to do what they can to reduce the number of small bird owners who may be lacking in the knowledge of what is due to the birds in their charge. It is a very easy matter. All that is necessary is to let these people know that there is a better way of keeping their birds, and that they may find out that better way by reading CAGE BIRDS from week to week, and asking from its specialists any questions that may occur to them. If any member of our LEAGUE, or any reader of CAGE BIRDS, would like to have some copies of our journal for distribution among bird-keepers who are not yet readers, I am sure that our manager would be pleased to forward some sample copies. There is a very great power for good behind our new departure, and I know that I shall not be appealing in vain when I ask every keeper of a bird to miss no opportunity of spreading the knowledge of the proper methods of keeping birds in captivity in such manner that the birds may be happy in themselves, and a pleasure to their owner. Remember, Associates of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE need not, unless they choose, pay anything beyond the penny for postage. They need not, unless they choose, become ordinary members of the LEAGUE. All that they need do is to sign the coupon, get five friends to sign one each, and send the six to me with a penny stamp. They will then receive, without any charge whatever, a badge of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and will be enrolled in the new body of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE ASSOCIATES.

Our Certificates of Membership.

Mistakes, like misfortunes, seldom happen singly, and there was a second mistake in last week's announcements. The Certificates of Membership will not be issued in two forms. They will be produced only in the coloured form, and the price will be one shilling each, post free. These handsome certificates are now in the hands of the colour printers, and will be ready in a few days. A large number of orders are already to hand, and these will be attended to immediately the first supply arrives. Every certificate will be signed, and dated to correspond with the period for which the member has paid his subscription. They bear an enlarged coloured reproduction of our badge and motto, and will form an ornament to the walls of any one's bird-room. They may be ordered when paying renewal subscriptions, and will be sent with the receipts for the same.

Some Subscriptions Overdue.

The renewal subscriptions of members who were among the first to join CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE have now been due for about three weeks, and although many members have duly forwarded the amount due, yet there remain several who have omitted to do so. To remind each member by postcard would entail trouble and expense, and I hope that all will kindly forward their renewal subscription without further delay. If any member is in doubt as to whether his subscription is or is not yet due, he can do no wrong in remitting his renewal, for the new receipts will be made out to cover the proper period according to my books, whether the amount be overdue or whether it be paid before actually falling due. In fact, one member, Mr. Polley has sent with his order for a Membership Certificate his renewal subscription, which does not fall due until November 19th next. His receipt and certificate will be dated with the proper date, not with the date upon which he happened to pay the money. Mr. Bennett, of Bearstead, in sending his subscription, writes: "I hope that all my fellow-members will do the same, so that the Secretary's work will come easier than if they are backward in sending their subscriptions." One member makes the suggestion that renewal subscriptions should be acknowledged in this column, but there is no need for this, as a receipt is sent in each case.

Our New Leaflets.

These will be ready in a day or two, and I shall be very pleased to send a supply to any member who would care to have some for distribution among his friends. They will be especially useful in connection with our Association Membership Scheme, for they contain full particulars of our Aims and Objects, terms of membership, conditions under which Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals will be offered for competition during the coming season, and many other items of interest.

Birds and Agriculture.

The way in which agriculture in France is assisted by the Government is denoted by the now completed appointment of a commission to establish on a scientific basis in regard to the whole of France the classification of birds. Some birds are useful to farmers, others are harmful, and others again are of a mixed character in accordance with seasons and particular districts. The commission is to produce a full catalogue with explanatory notes and suggestions, and we have no doubt that it will prove of practical advantage to those for whom it is intended. When the information is available, it ought to be useful to British farmers likewise. There is grave reason for believing that our classification of birds into friend and foe needs some revision.

Trade Notice.—Ramsden's Peppers: Owing to dock strike and threatened strike of transport workers, traders are advised to lay in their stock of pepper at once in order to avoid possible delay later.—J. W. Ramsden.—(Advt.)

The Anfield, Everton and Dist. C.B.S. has a very fine list of lectures, shows, rambles, etc., arranged for the current season. We hear that the hon. sec., Mr. R. B. Wright, is making a highly satisfactory recovery from his recent illness.

Leith O.S. propose to enjoy a ramble at Musselburgh this Saturday, May 25th, writes Mr. George Brown, the Secretary. It is proposed to drive by brake, and to leave Liberal Club, Hope Street, at three o'clock. The fare is 1s. 6d. per head.

Mrs. F. B. Jewson (Strawberry Hill, Twickenham) writes: After getting together a fine collection of Canaries, British and foreign birds, and Mules, about sixty in all, I find that I must give up bird-keeping for a time, so am compelled to advertise them all.

I should be very pleased to hear from any fancier or specialist club willing to guarantee classes or offer special prizes at our annual show, and to give any other information, writes Mr. W. J. Moran, Sec. Swindon and Dis. F. and F.A. (2, Brunswick Street, Swindon).

Watford C.B.S. annual ramble will take place Whit Sunday, May 26th, to Chalfont Road, writes Mr. Rackley. Train 10.6, Rickmansworth, Met. Railway. London Fanciers wishing to join will be cordially welcomed. Will members kindly notice alterations.

I have received an order for three champion seed crushing mills from someone at Liskeard, Cornwall, but without name and full address, writes Mr. J. Fitchford (Stoke-on-Trent), and if the sender will communicate with me I will send them on.

Will all members and friends of the Sheffield C.B.S., writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec., who intend to go on the ramble to Ridgeway, on Saturday, June 1st., kindly give their names to Mr. J. Curley (136, Derby Street, Heeley), so that he can arrange for refreshments. "Ramblers" meet at Intake Car terminus, at 2.30.

The annual ramble of the Oldham and Dis. C.B.A. takes place on Sunday next, May 26th, when we go to Broadbottoms, writes Mr. Jas. Cope, the secretary. We shall be very glad to have the company of any friends, whether members or not, as all are welcome, and I shall be pleased to see all members. Train leaves Clegg Street Station at 9.30.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. Stockton, that I have to inform you of the sad misfortune which has befallen Mr. G. Bainbridge, Felling-on-Tyne, in the death of his little daughter, who was laid to rest on Sunday, May 19th. Mr. Bainbridge is well known as an exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead, and I am sure the hearts of all our members and all fanciers who know our friend will go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge in this their hour of trouble. May they have strength to bear it.

Ramsden's pure peppers are unsurpassed for both colour and quality. They are ground from choice, selected pods, specially grown for J. W. Ramsden—no inferior pods are used. On account of the high percentage of colour, Ramsden's peppers prove to be the cheapest on the market.—(Advt.)

The ramble in connection with the Edinburgh Norwich Canary and Mule Breeders' Society takes place this Saturday, May 25th, writes Mr. J. Welsh. Train leaves Waverley Station at 2.42. As this is the only suitable date for our party to see the estate, I hope every one will do his best to be present.

The first ramble of Anfield and Everton C.B.S., writes Mr. Wright, will take place on June 2. Meet 11 a.m. Burleigh Road, South (Liverpool Football Ground). We visit Knowsley Woods, and there will be photos taken and sketches on the way. There will also be a free lunch provided. A real good muster is expected. Fanciers from any other societies cordially invited.

Bird lovers in the Highgate, Hampstead, Kentish Town, and adjoining districts should note that next Thursday, May 30, Mr. G. Crabb is visiting the Highgate, Hampstead, and Dis. C.B.S. headquarters, the Spencer Hall (near Tufnell Park Tube Station), at 8 p.m., to lecture to members and friends on "Birds I have Met." Visitors will be heartily welcomed.

"How I cycled 34,366 miles in 365 days," is the title of an interesting little booklet which The Mead Cycle Co., Liverpool, will send, post free, to any reader of Cage Birds. who applies for it. This booklet details a wonderful feat of human endurance, and incidentally gives striking testimony as to the reliability of Mead cycles. Marcel Planes, the hero of the great ride, used a Mead cycle, which had already seen six years' service and had covered no fewer than 75,000 miles. Prices of Mead cycles and other interesting particulars will also be sent on request.

The L. and P.O.S. ramble, writes Mr. Law, is fixed for June 1st. We are joining the N.B.B. and M. Club, having received an invitation again this year, which we have accepted with pleasure. The morning party leave Waterloo (South Station), 9.20 train, and book to Effingham Junction. The afternoon party leave by the 1.37 train and book to East Horsley; each member take his own ticket and ask for cheap booking. Those who intend coming must let me know by first post on 27th inst., which party they intend joining. This is absolutely necessary, as arrangements have to be made for luncheon and tea. (See Mr. Carr's letter in the correspondence columns.—Ed.)

I have been appointed hon. secretary to Thatto Heath Society in place of Mr. R. G. Tyson, resigned, writes Mr. H. R. Macdonald, 2, Page Street, Thatto Heath, St. Helens, and I shall be pleased to welcome new members, and give them any information they may require, re the society.

In "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, for May, Mr. H. Willford continues his "Bird-life Through the Camera," illustrated by interesting photographs of Meadow Pipits' nests, in one of which the hen is seen feeding an insatiable young Cuckoo. Mr. Page gives further instalments of his Foreign Bird articles. Mr. Teschemaker begins a story of the Life of a Mealy Redpoll. Mr. Hopkinson continues his account of the Birds of Gambia, and there are the usual Editorial Notes, Reviews and Correspondence.

Attercliffe C.B.S.

The new address of the hon. sec. of the above club, Mr. Hailstone, is 46, Broughton Lane, Sheffield.

Accident to Swansea Secretary.

Owing to our esteemed secretary having met with a severe accident, I am secretary pro tem., writes Mr. Henry Jenkins, 52, Aberdyberthi Street, Swansea.

Open Norwich P.C. Patronage.

Societies desiring the patronage of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, and providing not less than six open classes, are invited to send in their applications, with name of judge, to Fred Hammond, Secretary, pro tem., 70, St. Margaret's Road, Bradford.

Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.

A meeting of the Council will be held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on May 25th, at 6 o'clock prompt. Business: Election of sub-committee, printing of handbooks, and other important business, writes Mr. Horatio Hill, Hon. Sec.

Yarm Chooses January.

At our monthly meeting, May 17, we decided to hold our annual show on Jan. 11 next (not Dec. 16, as before), writes Mr. T. Wilson, sec. Yarm, Eaglescliffe, and Dis. C.B.S. Will fanciers and show secretaries kindly make a note of this date?

Cruelty Punished.

At Brentford on May 9, Robert Hobbs and John Wingrove, of Heston, were fined 10s. each for cruelty to Linnets by pegging them to the ground in the vicinity of a net for bird catching. It was stated that the birds when found were quite exhausted and unable to stand. The nets and cages were confiscated.

Broughty Ferry Open Show.

The following specialist judges will officiate at our open show on Oct. 5, writes Mr. Robert Whitton:—Scotch Fancies, Messrs. W. Beattie (Dundee) and T. Thomson (Markinch); Crests and Norwich, Mr. J. Young (Rutherglen); Borders, Mr. T. Arnot (Kirkcaldy); British and foreign, Mr. R. Bald, (Bathgate).

Proposed Midland Norwich Club.

In reference to the above, Mr. Collier writes: "If the Midland fanciers wish me to move further in the matter, they must send me their names for membership, and promise to attend a meeting for appointing officers, drawing up rules, etc." A letter on the subject from Mr. De Maillet appears in our correspondence columns.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

It has been decided to form an Associate body of bird-lovers who will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds, and to induce others to see that their birds are kept in such circumstances as to make their lives happy and contented.

All that readers have to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of their friends to sign each a similar coupon taken from this or any other issue, and send the six together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds League who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no charge whatever, either for the Badge or the Associate Membership. It will be entirely optional for Associates whether or not they become, by paying an annual subscription, Ordinary Members of the League as well as being Associates.

See also page 467.

From Field to Show Bench.

One of the best Lectures ever delivered.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

A STUDY of various summer migrants convinces me that a temperature of under 55 degrees produces unmistakable signs of discomfort, and 60 degrees may be accepted as a suitable heat. The principal point to guard against is fluctuation of temperature such as is very liable to occur when the birds are dependent on the heat from an ordinary open fire, this being very likely to fail at the most critical period (early morning). I have within the past month, and during a severe spell of frost, seen such species as Whitethroats, Whinchats, Wheatears, etc., in various miners' kitchens across the Forth, the singing of which was indicative of suitable conditions, and the statements of their keepers bore out my opinion, that the all-night fire must not be allowed to expire. Some persons are especially favourably situated in this respect, by reason of an abutment on a continual source of heat, namely, an adjoining baker's oven, a hot house, or such, and I have on a few occasions seen fanciers strangely ignorant that such a supply existed, and could either be used in situ, or conveyed by coil or radiator, which latter is much preferable as being within control to the extent of discontinuation when climatic conditions render heat unnecessary.

Fruit an Important Item.

An opinion which prevails among many who keep these insect-frugivorous species is that the fruit addition is only of the nature of a tit-bit, and may be dispensed with to a great extent. This is quite a mistake, as various succulent fruits, such as berries, apples, pears, bananas, etc., can, and should, form a large part of the daily menu. I have seen various Warblers, the condition of which was a credit to their keeper, who assured me that fruit constituted about three-fourths of their entire diet. No doubt individual tastes vary, but an opportunity should be provided, and the bird-keeper can then ascertain which is the best line of procedure for that individual. And he should bear in mind that certain berries, such as elder, black, privet, yew, etc., are invaluable, and impart a colour and sheen to the plumage which no amount of cayenne pepper could produce. This, and plenty of bathing, is the secret of condition in these species.

A Critical Time.

"Migratory fever" is a term used to describe a period of restlessness which occurs in migratory species on the approach of the time when they would, if at liberty, depart to other lands. I have no hesitation in describing it as the greatest bugbear attached to the keeping of them, for nothing could be more annoying than to find a nice specimen whose tractability and condition made its possession by a brother fancier synonymous with a smashing of the tenth commandment, suddenly develop a tendency to damage itself out of recognition. Many fanciers who have kept only a very few migrants look upon this as more imaginary than real, the reason being that the tendency varies in a remarkable degree, and they have been fortunate in possessing specimens which were very mildly affected, but I think there is no point in bird-keeping which has made me more furiously to think than how to alleviate the tendency or minimise the evils which result from this temporary "migra-madness."

I may state that up till recent years the latter was the only point I aimed at, knowing that if I could only get over that period I was all right for another year, and a failure meant a loss of eight to ten weeks of the best part of the show season, while the broken feathers were being renewed. Of course, I went through the whole programme of glazed instead of wire fronts, I upholstered my cages till I was asked if I was designing a cell for suffragettes, etc., but I have now turned my attention to the alleviation of the evil. I find that though each returning season generally brings a diminution of the attack, this rule is not without exceptions, and I could point out splendid birds which have for three seasons defied their owners to bench them. I have noticed that certain causes have a tendency to bring on or aggravate the fit. Firstly, a shortening in the period of daylight, such as may arise from a sequence of wet days during August or September. Secondly, a sudden fall in temperature. Thirdly, any curtailment of diet, and fourthly, the call of another of the same species. Therefore, when that period approaches, I make it a point not to leave my birds to the care of others, provide them with an extra supply of insects and fruit, and guard against any failure in warmth or light. I never introduce another of the same species to the same room. Of course, in large towns there is little chance of a bird hearing the call of a wild bird of his species, but I have repeatedly seen birds in country bird-rooms get frantic at the passing call of one of their own kind. The first symptoms of an attack are easily discerned by the experienced keeper, who knows that rapid pacing of the perches, flapping wings, and indifference to the bath are the possible prelude to something worse, and takes measures accordingly. A daily spraying has a very soothing effect, and whether sheer ennui has a contributory effect I cannot say, but I am convinced that a bird kept in a kitchen, where there is much to distract his attention, is seldom so severely affected as those relegated to the quiet of a bird-room. I don't approve of the administration of any form of opiates, however mild, and the fancier who gives a frugivorous bird any form of laxative medicine is about as wise as he who puts chalk in its drinking water to produce an opposite effect.

I will next deal with a species which is both insectivorous and granivorous in its diet—the Chaffinch, and my remarks thereon may be taken as applicable to others, viz., the Bramblefinch and all the Buntings. The principal points of difference in their diet are the two first-named include various masts as part of their food in a wild state, the others don't. They are similar, inasmuch that all are granivorous during winter, and to a large extent insectivorous during summer.

Eaters of both Seeds and Insects.

My experiences, extending as they do over many years, during which I have had many hundreds of this species through my hands, convince me that to take a specimen which possesses all the essential features of an exhibition specimen at the actual time of capture, is a mistake, the reason being that this species is second only in intractability to the Corn Bunting, and this trait is intensified by an extended period of freedom. Though I have had a few adult-taken specimens which behaved very well, such exceptions only prove the rule, that a Chaffinch taken when it has attained the full development of size and colour will, in the majority of cases, never become steady enough to face a judge, as he will be then, at least, three years old, and the chances of obtaining a mature specimen in which good behaviour is combined with the qualities of size and colour are remote indeed.

I therefore advise the taking of immature specimens as being much easier to reconcile, and selecting such as excel in size (skull in particular) and depth of tone of breast feathers, and by proper treatment assisting them to develop these qualities to the maximum possible.

REARING YOUNG BIRDS WITHOUT EGG-FOOD.

An Advocate of Maize Meal.

In 1907 my sister and I were rearing British birds. We simply fed them on boiled maize meal, with a little rape seed and maw seed in it. The way we prepared it was to take a teacupful of maize (Indian) meal, mix in a handful of rape, a dessertspoonful of maw and a little sugar, pour boiling water over this in a 2lb. jam-jar, and well mix with a good broad table knife to a thin consistency. After that put it in the oven and let it bake for a few hours, the oven being not very hot. Take out and well beat up again. When cold, it is a stiff sort of paste. We had most successful results with it, so much so that since then we have never used any other soft food for our Canaries, and they are better in every way than when we used eggs. When colour-feeding mix the colour food into the paste, just before giving to the birds, and it brings out a grand colour.

ARTHUR SMITH (Liverpool).

Just Bread and Milk.

I purchased through CAGE BIRDS a pair of Norwich Canaries. I had the cage hung in the living-room and fed the birds as instructed in the books at my disposal with Canary, a little mixed seed (niger, rape and hemp), egg and green food. I found the birds were eager to nest, so provided them with box and nesting materials. The cock seemed very partial to the egg-food, but the hen would hardly touch it, but I thought the bird would get over its dislike. Four eggs were laid, only one hatching out, and this little one, owing to the hen's dislike to the egg-food, was fed almost entirely on watercress for the first seven or eight days of its life. I made the egg-food in many different ways, mixing it with bread, biscuit and cake. I also bought two kinds of food, but I could never get the hen to feed very readily from these.

While sitting at breakfast one morning, I dipped a piece of bread in some milk and placed it between the wires of the cage. To my delight I found the hen ate it greedily and fed the little one. From that time I gave her a small piece three times a day. The milk used was not boiled, nor did I squeeze the bread after soaking, but left it quite moist. Sometimes, for a change, I would substitute for the bread a piece of plain cake, sweet biscuits, or sprinkle the bread with sugar. The young one from this nest improved daily, and is now a very good bird. A week or two later I bought another pair of Norwich (a green cock and clear buff hen) from a well-known fancier who advertises in CAGE BIRDS. This green cock I paired with my first buff hen. These I fed entirely on bread dipped in milk, together with the mixed seeds and watercress, as mentioned before. The hen laid four eggs, all of which hatched out, and the young were fed entirely on the same diet, with the exception of the mixed seeds, which I held back for a day or two, giving plain seed only. From the time the eggs were hatched I have not had a moment's trouble with the young birds. In about three weeks I took them from their parents, and brought them up by hand. I was possibly hasty in separating them so early, but I was doubtless more eager than prudent. I fed them myself on bread and milk, giving it them on a feeding stick. I never had the slightest anxiety with one of them. They all passed through the moult well.

I might say that the two cocks from this nest are far larger than either of their parents, and after attending the Horticultural Hall and Palace shows I feel quite certain this bird would have stood a very fair chance of winning. Two of the remaining birds are hens, one of which I lost a little while back, owing to the door of their cage being left open. The other hen, although she escaped at the same time, came back two days later, being none the worse for her travels. She is one of the cobbiest hens I have seen, and a fancier who has had experience in breeding for many years past, thought her a very good specimen, and worthy of the show bench. Considering the parents of these birds and the moderate price I paid for them, I have far surpassed my expectations. I have not lost a single bird through death; every egg hatched has proved a really good bird, and none of the birds have suffered in health in any way. I am inclined to attribute my success to the method I adopted in feeding them when I dispensed with the egg-food.

During the winter I have occasionally fed them with a little bread and milk, giving the birds a small piece about once a fortnight. As I have more birds to cater for now, I generally prepare this food by cutting off a slice of bread, laying it in a saucer and pouring milk over it until it is well soaked. Then I cut off pieces and give to birds. Those who have very little time and money at their disposal, and who are away from home during the day, I should advise to try this method. Egg-food is an expense, especially to the novice, who perhaps has only one pair of birds. At the present time I have a pair of Rollers sitting, also Norwich, from which I bred last season, and I also have one of my last year's hens sitting on eggs, and these have all been brought into breeding condition with the bread and milk, watercress, and mixed seed.

(MISS) L. GOLLEDGE (Streatham).

Scotch Fancy Reformed by Boiled Seed.

No doubt some readers have come across birds which would not partake of egg-food. Let me state a case in point. I had a Scotch Fancy hen, which laid three eggs. I took these from her and put in their place three eggs from a common Canary. They all hatched, but the young birds died, as she would not feed. The next nest I gave her no egg whatever, but instead I boiled hemp seed from about twenty to thirty minutes (by so doing the kernel swells, and the shell of the seed bursts) then I strained off the water and let the seeds dry. I gave her a teaspoonful at a time, also rape seed. The later I put into cold water, and after it came to the boil I allowed it to stay for five minutes, then strained the water off. I gave her a teaspoonful of the rape also. I gave her, too, bread well soaked in sweet milk, also canary seed. These, in company with a variety of green foods, including lettuce, dandelion leaves, and chickweed, given in small quantities at various times, separately, induced her to feed well, and the young thrived splendidly.

Tuesday, May 28th to Tuesday, June 4th, 1912.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence,, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CANARY SEED (Wood).—No. 1 sample is moderate in size, well ripened and sweet, of very fair quality all round. No. 2 is a good size, nice and plump, free from weed seed, and of very good quality generally. There can be no objection to either sample, but No. 2 is rather the better.

NESTING TOO SOON (Aviator).—You should have given full details of your feeding. It is not unlikely this may be the cause, the birds, perhaps, having been stimulated to start nesting again too early and neglecting their young in consequence. This time remove the cocks when the hens are put to sit, and leave hens to hatch and rear the young by themselves. Do not begin to give hemp for rearing the young until they are about ten days old, and use chickweed, groundsel, watercress, or lettuce as green food, but avoid dandelion. By adopting these precautions and following similar lines to those advised to "F. E. N., U.S.A." I think you should do better with the forthcoming brood.

WHAT IS IT? (E. T.).—I can only suggest that a bird which sits in a heap on perch and puts out its wings and flies at anyone who goes near it is unusually tame and sociable. He simply wants to be played with, and if you put your finger to the wires when he flies at you he will make a great show of fighting it. You surely don't want to cure a bird of such a friendly disposition. If he is at all mopy, give him a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give a leaf of dandelion daily, and add to the water the same medicine as advised to "M. M. Ackroyd."

MORE YOUNG DYING (J.G.W.).—If you really mean that your dietary is limited to the food you mention, the cause of the young dying is almost sure to be constipation, as an outcome of the injudicious food supply. Surely the birds have access to a regular supply of seeds, and besides this, in addition to soft food, they should have green food daily whilst young are being reared, beginning when the young are about four days old. Look down replies this week and you will find details for overcoming a similar trouble in another reply. You would have done well to be guided by instructions in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or the article on this subject in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for current year.

NO FERTILE EGGS (No Luck).—It certainly does appear to be the hens that are at fault, and this may be due to lack of affinity that they "do not hit," as a fancier would term it. It might also be due to mechanical obstruction to efficient copulation, which often occurs when a hen has a deep nest and habitually "calls" whilst crouching in the cup of the nest. If this is the case with your hens, let them go to nest once more, and either remove the nest pans with nest until the evening before they are expected to lay, or place an egg drawer or similar obstacle in the nest to prevent crouching. Give a fairly liberal supply of dandelion and chickweed; add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice to the water for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a week.

UNFERTILE EGGS (J. D. Brown).—It is difficult to account for these cases of unfertility when the cocks are apparently in excellent health and song, and performing their duties satisfactorily. It may be due to a snap of cold weather, or east wind affecting the cock adversely, to accidental obstruction to proper copulation, lack of affinity, or quite a number of causes. You might allow the birds to have another nest, and prior to going to nest see that neither of the birds carries any loose ends of superfluous feathers about the flanks or abdomen, and if copulation has been taking place in the nest, place an egg-drawer, or similar obstacle, in the nest next time, to ensure mating on the side of nest or perches. Give a small quantity of egg-food, well sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure, every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, linseed, and mustard seed. Give a little dandelion daily. You might also add a crystal of sulphate of soda to the water for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel for a few days.

A DISTRESSING ATTACK (A. Stone).—The attacks you describe were due to epileptic seizures, and painful as they are to look upon, it is doubtful whether the subject is conscious of any real pain. Other attacks may occur in future, or, on the other hand, it may never have another attack. To lessen the risk of more attacks, you must aim at keeping the bird in good sound health, well-fed, but not over-fed; stop giving it all such tit-bits as sweet rich cake, pastry, butter, and all fat or animal substances, and see that it never becomes constipated. Let the diet be plain and wholesome, and keep bowels regular by giving some kind of green food daily. Should another attack occur keep bird quiet for a few days, and add to its drinking water as much bromide of potassium as will cover a threepenny-piece daily for four or five days. You might also give now about the same quantity of sulphate of soda in the water every second day for a week. Considering his age, you cannot expect the bird to keep up to his youthful vigour now.

A PECULIAR ATTACK (M. M. Ackroyd).—I am not quite clear whether this hen's chicks were hatched when the attack you describe took place. If they were, it is quite possible the attack was due to some obstruction lodging in the throat and setting up choking sensations. It might have been a seed given her by a vigorous feeding cock. Otherwise some serious internal derangement had taken place, which may have been the result of undue constipation, as most hens are more or less constipated during the inactive period of incubation. Only personal examination could have enabled one to arrive at any definite conclusion. Keep her as quiet as possible for a time. You did right to separate her. Feed on a staple of plain canary seed, and give half a teaspoonful of egg-food sprinkled with maw, or as much bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day, and a pinch of mixed seed twice a week, on the alternating days. Give a little fresh green food daily. In the drinking water give as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week. Shall be glad to hear in a fortnight what progress has been made.

UNEXPECTED SUCCESS (Amateur).—It is certainly a trifle unusual for a hen to lay a full clutch of eggs among the young brood of the first nest, and go on incubating after the young leave the nest without showing any disposition to pluck or flag in feeding the young. Still it is by no means rare, and only shows that you have a very dependable hen for rearing young. If the cock has been in with her whilst the eggs were being laid, by all means allow them to go on sitting. Unless the nest is really very foul I would not advise you to interfere with it until the eggs are hatched and the young about a week old. Then you might give her a clean nest. If there are any signs of red mites about the cage dust the nest at once, around the sides particularly, with Keatings, or freshly ground pyrethrum powder. As soon as the young left the nest you should have put them in a nursery cage, where the cock would have attended to them sufficiently through the wires. If you did not do this do so at once.

WILL NOT SING (L. M. Nicholls).—It is not unlikely this bird is going into an early moult, in which case it will not resume singing until the moult is over. Still, you may try the following treatment for two or three weeks. First see that he is in a bright healthy place, and free from cold draughts. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar and a pinch of maw. On the alternating days twice each week give half a teaspoonful of mixed seed—a prescription for which you will find in one or two other replies this week. Give a good sized spray of chickweed, or two leaves of dandelion daily. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, 10 of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day.

AN UNCOMMON TRIO (G.W.).—(1) It is not possible to tell if any egg when laid is fertile or not, unless the egg was broken and the "germ-sac," to use a non-technical term, on the yolk, examined with a good lens or microscope. Then, an expert could tell whether it had been fertilised or not. (2) There is no sex in an egg which, when fertilised, contains the elements of either sex, and it is impossible to tell into which sex it will eventually develop. There are many supposed methods of distinguishing sex in the eggs of larger species—poultry, for example—but none are reliable. The longer and more pointed eggs laid by a given hen are supposed by some to produce males. (3) I fail to see what material benefit the Fancy would derive from the above knowledge, except perhaps that one need not allow hens to sit on unfertile eggs—which would not always be an advantage,—or if breeding solely for songsters need not produce a plethora of hens.

FEEDING ROLLER (Ignorant).—You might treat the bird the same as advised in No. 10 Nutshell booklet, which our Manager will send you post free for 2½d. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape, and a pinch of mixed seeds two or three times a week; also a little crushed sponge cake, bread and milk, or egg food once or twice a week. A little sponge cake, so long as it is not taken in excess will do more good than harm, but if this bird helps itself to an appreciable quantity from the foreign bird's cage, you need not trouble to give it a separate supply. Give a little green food daily now. See reply to "C. E. B." for a good seed mixture, of which you could make a small quantity in same proportions.

YOUNG DYING (F. E. N., U.S.A.).—I suspect two things are at the root of your trouble: The biscuit you use may contain too much fat, and the soaked seeds be given too liberally with no proportionate increase in the supply of green food as the young grow. I feel confident the following amendment of your dietary will remove your trouble. If your biscuits show a large amount of fat, change the brand for one less greasy, or, better still, make up your own egg food with crumb of good stale household bread—two parts to one part egg. If the hens are at all shy feeders, you might with advantage use equal parts bread crumb, crushed sponge cake, and egg, and sprinkle it with a little maw. From the fourth day begin to give green food and gradually increase the supply, giving it fresh two or three times daily, as the young get older. Lettuce is good,, but I would advise you to give also, if possible, a little of the tender flower tops of groundsel and seedy sprays of chickweed. When the young are about ten days old, give a little cracked, but not soaked, hemp daily, and see that the kernel is sweet and sound, and a heaped teaspoonful of soaked or scalded rape daily. Give the soaked rape in the morning, and remove all that is left in the afternoon, and substitute the cracked hemp. Give no other soaked seeds. When you begin to give the hemp and rape you should note the condition of the evacuations of the young and regulate the supply of green food to keep them free, but not too loose. Probably your seasons are a trifle behind ours, but that does not necessarily make your climate bad for the birds.

SEED MIXTURE (C. E. B.).—Your seed mixture is not well proportioned. You should leave out the summer rape altogether, and give this separately as required, say, a pinch about every second day. The maw, gold of pleasure, lettuce, and dandelion might also be kept in a separate mixture, as they do not mix well in bulk with large seeds. However, if you prefer a single mixture, make up the following. One pint each of hemp, summer rape, niger, and millet; half-pint each of black rape, teazle, and maw; a quarter pint each of gold of pleasure, broken groats, and sesame; and a large tablespoonful each of linseed, thistle, mustard, lettuce, and dandelion.

LOST USE OF LEGS (Tabs).—You should have given more particulars, and have said if there is an appreciable difference in the appearance of its feet or legs. To say simply that it has lost the use of its legs and appears in pain conveys nothing tangible. If the symptoms came on suddenly it is in all probability due to an apoplectic seizure, or some internal rupture, when you could do little beyond keeping the bird quiet, and leaving nature to repair the damage. Keep it in a moderate sized cage, as quietly as possible, and give food and water inside. Feed on a staple of plain Canary seed, with a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed daily, a pinch of mixed seed three times a week, and a little green food daily. Add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice to its water for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. See if its claws are much overgrown, and if so trim back to a proper length. Try this treatment for a fortnight, then write again and report result, and give full particulars.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); Howse's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); Howse's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Seplic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

YOUNG DYING (D. E.).—I have no doubt the deaths were due to constipation or intestinal obstruction. The latter is apt to occur from a "glueing" of the vent through lack of proper attention to cleanliness on the part of the hen. Either would readily occur through using a food of a constipating nature, and not balancing it with a proper supply of green food. You make no mention of green food at all. With future broods, add a fourth part of crushed sponge cake to your soft food, and begin to give a little fresh chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, or watercress two or three times daily when the young are four days old, gradually increasing the supply as they get older, always giving sufficient to keep the bowels normal and regular. I have not seen the colour-food you name, so cannot answer. Test a little by placing a pinch on your tongue, and allowing it to digest there a minute or so. If there is any heat, suggestive of a mixture of hot pepper, do not try to colour young from the shell with it.

BACKWARD HENS (John Smith).—Your feeding is hardly generous enough. Give a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give each pair a small teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, in which you have mixed two or three finely chopped mealworms, and well sprinkle it with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. On the alternating days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give three good sized leaves of dandelion daily. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel for four or five days.

A DOUBTFUL COUPLE (A. Turner).—(1) The reply to "Yorkshire" in last issue would have answered this for you. In comparison with the hen, the cock is fuller and bolder about the head and beak; has a more holting eye; is more dominant and assertive; and plumage is better filled in between abdomen and the under tail coverts, showing a more graceful sweep. The voice is more clear and bell-like, the song full and sustained, and the throat throbs very plainly whilst he is singing. (2) I am afraid these birds are two hens. Try to get a lusty young cock in fierce song, then place these birds in separate cages and try mating the undoubted cock with them. First with one, and when she has commenced to sit (if this occurs) introduce him to the other.

A PAIR OF BORDERS (J.H.).—See reply to "No Luck" in this issue. The cock not singing whilst with the hen is of no great importance. Many cocks act in this way, especially after the first season or two is past. Let them go to nest once more. Feed rather generously. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a small teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake in which mix two or three finely chopped large fat mealworms, and sprinkle with a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of equal parts hemp, black rape, millet, inga, teazle, and a sprinkling of mustard. Give two or three dandelion leaves daily. Give same medicines and quantities in drinking water as advised to "No Luck."

VARIED (Expectant).—(1) It may be all right, at least from the hen's point of view, for a cock to sit so closely that he scarcely leaves the eggs for a minute whilst the hen is gadding about all day long; but it would also be very remarkable. Seriously I fancy you are mistaken in the sexes of the birds, and that the one that sits so assiduously is the hen, or anyway "a" hen. (2) If the hen shows signs of starting to nest again before the first brood have left the nest, you may put in a second nest. Otherwise no second nest is necessary. (3) If you remove the cock when hen begins to sit you must not return him until the hen is ready to begin nesting again, or the young are old enough to place in a nursery, in case he began to maltreat them. Unless you know well the disposition of the cock it is best to take no risks in these cases. (4) You make no mention of egg food, or any substitute. Certainly you must supply some form of soft-food when young are being reared, beginning the eve of hatching, and continuing the supply daily until young are able to feed themselves. You will find details for rearing young in another reply this week, or, for fullest details of many methods, get Part V. of "Our Canaries." Give just a little egg or biscuit food once or twice a week whilst sitting.

VARIOUS (I. M. S.).—(1) Your best plan would have been to separate the cock from the hen when she was commencing to sit, and leave her to hatch and rear the young herself. Now, however, she might resent this, so you must leave them together until the young are fairly safe. If the hen shows no signs of wanting to nest again, leave them together until the young begin to get out of the nest, then take the hen away and the cock will finish the rearing. But if she begins nesting again early, take away the cock when the young are a fortnight old, and leave the hen to finish off the young. (2) Most young cocks begin to twitter and warble in a quiet way as soon as they leave the nest, but they do not assume full connected song until after the first moult. Careful observation when one has only a few birds gives a very close judgment of sex when the birds are only a few weeks old. (3) Certainly there is a sale for young birds before the first moult—often a ready sale. But it is not a good time to sell if you are breeding for fancy points, as you can never tell how a bird may make up after its first moult. At 14 weeks old they will probably be deep in moult, so you would need to advertise them earlier, say, about 8 to 10 weeks old. (4) Four would be enough, but if kept well cleaned and sanded six might be kept in each for a time. The old birds may be kept with the young ones in the flight through the winter, but the sexes should be separated—cocks in one flight, hens in another.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

FOOD FOR YOUNG OWLS (W. E. Harker).—See the reply given "T. C." this week; they must have flesh food.

DIET FOR TAWNY OWL (T. C.).—Flesh of some description—for instance, rabbit's flesh, with the fur on, dead sparrows, mice, rats, fowls', etc., "innards," liver, lights (cooked and raw), and various other rough (cheap) portions of meat.

IDENTITY OF WEED (E.O.H..).—It is the yellow goat's-beard, popularly known as "John go to bed at noon," and not infrequently mistaken for the dandelion, though the leaves of these two plants bear no resemblance. Have never used the seeding heads myself, but I have been told by other fanciers that they have given them to their birds, and that the latter apparently relished them.

REARING MAGPIES AND JAYS (T. W. C.).—Puppy cakes, or dog meal or food (such as "Mclox") thoroughly soaked with hot water and reduced to a kind of pulpy consistency, will rear Magpies, Jays, etc., splendidly; very cheaply, too. Minced hard-boiled egg can be added, or given separately. As the birds grow, give some meat chopped into tiny pieces (beef or mutton), or rabbit flesh, which I prefer to anything. When adult, the "Melox," or similar dog food, answers admirably, though, of course, not made so "sloppy"; add table scraps of meat, vegetables, gravy, and the like; also give dead mice, sparrows, beetles, etc., frequently.

WHAT FOOD (Annie Primus).—Yes; you must supply the things ordinarily offered hen Canaries when rearing their own young, viz., egg and biscuit (or a good substitute), summer rape, hemp and sunflower seeds (crack the latter), and plenty of seeding greenfood, such as shepherd's-purse and chickweed, both of which are very common now, while dandelion and flowering tops of groundsel are also good. When the young Goldfinches begin to pick up for themselves, supply the seeding greenfood (not coarse leaves) freely, and let them have Plasmon oats to nibble at—failing this, use coarse or medium oatmeal of first-rate quality—in addition to the usual seeds.

TWO ITEMS (Merle).—(1) The beak and eyecores of the cock Blackbird turn yellow in the spring of the year following that of his birth, but the colour is richer (deeper) in two and three year old male birds. It often happens, by-the-way, that the bill of an old hen shows a fair amount of golden colour. (2) The hen Starling, like the cock, can be taught to mimic sounds and speak a word or two.

THRUSH NOT SINGING (E. R. C.).—Are you sure the bird is really a cock? The hens "warble" a little when young—that is, when the youngsters first begin to try over their notes. If the three you mention were all taken out of the one nest, it would be curious for them all to prove cocks. Any perfectly sound and healthy cock Thrush (as you say is your bird) could hardly help singing at this time of the year. I fancy your bird is a hen; but if you are absolutely sure on the point of sex, kindly write me again.

BIRD LIME (F. C. Ford).—You can buy bird-lime at many of the London shops; and it is sold by practically all the large advertisers of fanciers' goods using our columns. It is regularly offered for sale in our advertisement columns during the catching season. As regards making it, very full details were given by Mr. Steel in the correspondence columns of our double Spring Number (dated April 26th last). Did you not read his account of the process? I can add nothing thereto.

ABOUT A JAY (S. Ryan).—Cock and hen Jay are practically alike in plumage; the difference is so slight that it could not possibly help anyone who had no acquaintance with the species to sex any particular bird. The sex does not matter at all, however, so far as talking ability is concerned. The Jay is a fine talker and mimic; it is generally better to start with a young bird. In my opinion it is easily in front of the Jackdaw in this respect, and quite the equal of the Magpie. The price you mention is very reasonable. Respecting the food, see the reply given "T.W.C." this week.

THRUSH'S "UNWELCOME" SONG (W. Campbell).—Should a number of the neighbours choose to combine and institute proceedings against you before a magistrate on the ground that the early—very early—morning song of your Thrush is a "public nuisance," then if the magistrate considers the case proven, you can be legally compelled to "abate the nuisance"—you would have to keep the bird indoors at night. Of course, you might be able to call some of the neighbours to depose that in their opinion the song of the bird was not a "nuisance" at all. Cases of this kind have occasionally come before metropolitan magistrates, and the latter have usually shown that they require a lot of convincing that the song of a caged Thrush or Blackbird can possibly be a nuisance.

A QUESTION OF VALUE (F. Wickins).—The value of a bybrid from cock Bullfinch and hen Canary would depend on its sex (a hen would be worth very little), and its excellence from the show point of view. The latter, of course, could not be appraised without seeing the bird. I presume you are aware that this particular cross produced from the cock Bullfinch is exceedingly rare; but I question if this in itself would help on the show-bench. I mean that the Bullfinch-Canary would have to exhibit points of excellence (colour, markings, size, and quality) equal to and even in excess of, the Canary-Bullfinch to enable it to be sure of beating the latter. And it is the ability to win prizes that largely determines the value of any Hybrid. Thus a Bullfinch-Canary might be worth only 40/- to 50/-, or it might be worth £10, possibly more—the show-bench is the real test of value.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

MOCKING BIRD (C.L.H.).—I think the bird you refer to is the Cuban Mocking Bird (Mimus orpheus). The Mocking Birds are Thrush-like birds, mostly clad in pleasing arrangements of grey and brown, with undeniable capacity for song, which usually is very varied and melodious.

WHAT PARROT? (H.P.G.).—I am still unable to identify your bird, and think one or other of the following alternatives is the cause, either it is a young bird of a species in which the young has not been described, or you have been wrongly informed as to the locality it came from. If you could send me a roughly coloured diagram of the bird, I think I could then solve the difficulty, quite apart from locality. Of course, if it is quite a young bird the colour of its plumage may change materially during the next two moults. Do you live in London? If so, make an appointment to meet me at the British Museum (Nat. Hist. Dept.), Cromwell Road, South Kensington, with the bird, and all doubt as to its identity could then be set at rest.

A SWEET SINGER (Novice).—If you get a good one, the Pekin Robin is a fine songster, and given a roomy cage is long-lived and enduring, but there is much variation in the song capacity of individuals. You should, if possible, hear its song before purchasing. It is also a handsome coloured species. The same applies to the Grey-Singing Finch; this is a pretty but plainly coloured grey bird, but a good one has a sweet and varied song; it is much smaller than a Canary. The Grey-necked Serin (Cape Canary) and Alario Finch are both good songsters of the Canary type, the former resembling a small Green Canary, and the latter is an arrangement of black, cinnamon, and white. The value of the above for a singing bird would be about 10s. 6d. each, while if you take your chance as to their song capacity, you could pick them up for about half that amount.

CARDINALS, ETC. (T. G. S.).—(1) Oyster shell, if crushed as small as white millet seed, will answer as grit, and with it may be mingled crushed eggshells. (2) It can arise from many causes, such as indigestion, parasites in the throat, and also natural weariness—if the "gaping" is excessive and not natural, a little Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water—one part magnesia to four parts water—should soon put matters right, at this season with grit, green food, etc., they should soon tone up if there is anything wrong. (3) I have found the Virginian Cardinal quite hardy and to keep very fit during English winters, and but for the man with the gun might easily be acclimatised in this country. Supply ripe fruit and some insects daily.

GREEN HOUSE AVIARY (E. W.).—As you have covered in the left side and part of back, I should screw boards to the sash bars of the roof of greenhouse on the underside of the whole portion over aviary, there will be ample light, and if you can let some creepers grow through the netting into aviary it will much enhance the effect. It is the too humid atmosphere you must guard against; ventilation must be ample, but it must be secured without causing a draught through the aviary. I consider the list you send—12 pairs—sufficient for the size of the aviary, at the most only add three pairs, say Green Singing Finches, Silverbills, and Bib (Dwarf) Finches; or you could have Olive and Ruficauda Finches, and leave two of the others out. You will require nearly a score of nesting receptacles hung from the roof and fixed to back and left side of the aviary, and you will soon see that the accommodation provided is fully occupied. So as to minimise the sun's heat over aviary I should paint the glass white, as well as putting boards underneath.

WILL IT TALK? (D. Walsh).—The bird you refer to is the Ring-necked Parrakeet. I have heard and known of many really talented individuals of this species, but some of them also scream more than is pleasant. You must first of all tame it, and get its confidence, and when this occurs you can commence training. While at first you must avoid scaring it (if you do this you will train a screamer), but as soon as it is a bit steady, keep it in your midst, where it will have plenty to see, and hear and engage its attention. It will pick up many sounds and words that it hears, and you can also teach it words and short sentences by the constant repetition method, but I repeat you can do nothing till it has ceased to fear you; winning its confidence is the first step.

GREY PARROT BARE OF PLUMAGE (Constant Reader).—I cannot assist you till you give me fuller details. How has it been fed and treated generally? How long has it been in your possession? As a preliminary I can only suggest thoroughly scalding out its cage with boiling water, also the perches and food vessels, and spraying the bird with quassia solution. Irrespective of the looseness, give the bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and repeat the dose after an interval of three days. Keep clean cuttlebone in the cage. Nothing more can be done till I get your reply to above queries.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (H.J.D.). — You omit a rather important item, viz., the depth of the aviary from front to back, so I cannot give you its holding capacity, but I am basing the following reply on a depth of not less than 30 inches. Do not in an aviary of this size introduce British species, and I am inclined to advise you to exchange the Grey Javas for some other species, as they often prove troublesome in a small aviary. Some of them should breed. As opportunity offers add to your present stock pairs of Zebra Finches, Bronze Mannikins, Gold-crested Waxbills, Green Avadavats, and procure a mate for your Cordon Bleu; the cock of this species has red ear-coverts, which the hen does not possess. You can take your chance if you choose, but I fear the Bullfinches will spell trouble. I think the Madagascar Weaver will be all right, but he may prove troublesome; if so, you must cage him up again. As regards winter, unless your county is a very northern one, they should weather all right, providing they are thoroughly fit when winter commences, but all unfit specimens should be caged and brought indoors till spring. As the aspect is N.E., I should certainly advise stretching canvas or felt over the wire netting flight during the winter, and also a wood and glass shutter for the front, to be closed every night, and also during the days of severe periods, or spells of cold driving rain.

WHAT BIRD, ETC. (H. J. E.).—Your sketch has removed all doubt; it is the Orange-flanked Parrakeet, and as I suspected all along, a Brotogerys of some kind. As regards diet, etc., treat much as you would, a Budgerigar—canary and white millet, with a few oats and a little hemp, also fruit and green food, with cuttlebone, grit and water will keep them fit and strong. In a large cage or aviary they should breed if given a small barrel as nesting receptacle. I can put you on to a suitable one if you send me your address, or a well cleaned out oyster barrel would do. They are by no means common, and when fit should stand a good chance of catching the judge's eye. In good feather and condition, their value is about 60/-. Re the Plumhead, there should be a good chance of its crossing with either a Ring-necked or Alexandrine, as most Parrakeets will mate with other species in the absence of one of their own kind; but when, or how long they will take about it, is an uncertainty; in fact, just as uncertain as your luck would be with British Hybrids—ultimate success is, however very probable. Keep them in cages side by side for a week before putting them in the aviary.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

GREY PARROT (A. D. B.).—You must continue your present diet (which is fairly wholesome), though a Grey is better without boiled maize, except in the case of a very young bird, but you must continue it till the bird is well on seed. Let the bird have all the air and light it can without draught. From your letter it would appear that the bird has had a short spell at any rate of outdoor life, and the warmth of your kitchen has thrown it into a partial moult, but no harm should accrue—at this time of year an unheated room would be the better place for it, and at any period the sitting-room in preference to the kitchen. Get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager; it will remove your doubts. There can be no Parrot mixture for all species, you had better mix your own as often advised in this column—the mixture must vary more or less with each group. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food, and it should do well.

A FEATHER PLUCKER (Anxious).—It is almost impossible to cure feather pulling unless taken in its earlier stages; it often is a vice, and incurable; you can only use such palliative as spraying with quassia solution, painting bare parts with bitter aloes, and rubbing in a little paraffin, but not sufficient to run among and grease the plumage. Treat the bird as follows: Every fourth day for a month give in lieu of the drinking water the following: One part Dinneford's Magnesia in three parts water; on the intervening days put a little bynophosphates in the drinking water, but you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Diet: A seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet seeds, one pint each oats and hemp; half a pint each shelled nuts, maize, paddy rice, dari, and sunflower seeds, one gill of grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit liberally, plain biscuit, or crust of household bread, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage; give seeding grass, lettuce, etc., as green-food. The bread or biscuit should be moistened, not soaked, and dusted with flowers of sulphur. Use the quassia solution; give the bird all light and air possible without draught, and on favourable days have it out of doors, but not in an exposed position. You will have to persevere with the treatment. Report progress a month hence.

GREY PARROT OUT OF CONDITION (W.H.B.).—A long course of unwholesome treatment has brought about the usual result—system quite out of order. Stop at once tea sops, bits of everything, etc., and confine its dietary to seed mixture (canary, white millet, oats, hemp, dari, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep supply in cage), ripe fruit, plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread (if moistened, use chemical food one part, chilled water two parts, for the purpose), and nuts; add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Give every fourth day—water three parts, Dinneford's magnesia one part—in lieu of the ordinary drinking water, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, if this occurs you must lengthen the period between the doses; on intervening days well colour the drinking water with chemical food, but you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Get some honey and boax from your chemist and put some on the bird's tongue, twice daily, with a feather or camel hair brush, which must only be put into the bulk of the mixture when quite clean. Keep the outside of its mouth quite clean by sponging with tepid water and if there are any sores anoint with a little antiseptic ointment. You must persevere with the above as it will take time to undo the mischief—three months was a long time to let the trouble run on. Our Nutshell "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you as to dietary, etc. Report progress a fortnight hence.

CALIFORNIAN QUAIL AND BUDGERIGARS (J. H. E.).—As regards the mutilation of the Budgies, you can be quite sure one of the larger Parrakeets is the culprit, very probably the Red-rump. The Bramblefinch is a dangerous bird among small species, but it would come off "second best" with a Budgerigar. Californian Quail and other species of Quail often act as yours are doing, leave them to take their own course, the better plan is to place the eggs under a bantam or any other small variety of fowl (Silkies are good), as they need brooding. As regards diet, maggots, live ants' eggs, preserved ants' eggs, soft food, seed, etc., should all be supplied, the young will soon take to the two latter items, but till they do so, should be liberally supplied with small live food. A hen in my aviary laid 22 eggs in a nest and did not sit, then I found another nest (both on the ground) containing another score, which she has incubated and is about due to hatch.

BLACK-CHEEKED LOVEBIRDS (C.M.).—This species is not always amiable with Budgerigars, and when they do not quarrel are apt to fill all available husks and logs with rubbish to the utter discomfiture of the poor Budgerigar, and I suppose this is why they have not "caught on" like the Budgerigar, for they are equally beautiful, prolific and hardy. However, I should try them, they may ignore the husks, if you put in a small barrel and a square box (entirely closed save for entrance hole), say 9 inches square at base by 12 inches high. Supply them with withered leaves, pieces of thin bark, etc., to line their nests with. They will thrive on the same treatment as that given to Budgerigars and Cockatoels, but should have a continuous supply of spray millet, especially when they have young to feed. Be very liberal with green food, the withered stems of which they will use for nesting material.

AMAZON ILL (A. Hermann).— I could not send a reply per post as there was no address on your card when it reached me. In cases of this kind an aperient must be given to clear the bowels—Dinneford's and water in equal parts—see that the birds get a good drink, remove it and replace it again in a couple of hours' time, afterwards put three drops of tincture of opium in two tablespoonfuls of water (supply for one day) give two doses on successive days, and then another dose after a day's interval, repeating it on alternate days for a few doses if necessary, but three doses should suffice. Afterwards a course of Byno-phosphates should prove a good tonic. As regards diet, do not give any slops, table scraps, or messes of any kind—you do not say how you have been feeding or whether it is a young or aged bird, so I cannot advise you further as to diet.

YELLOW-WING SUGAR BIRD (Para).—Instead of a stiff perch, give this bird a small twiggy branch, this will keep the muscles of the feet better exercised, bathe the swelling with tepid water, and if there is any pus, carefully lance and exude same by gentle pressure, well cleanse with tepid water, dry and lightly anoint with a little antiseptic ointment. To accustom the bird to take a little fruit, put in some split grapes, and half a tangerine orange. The sop must be prepared fresh daily. I have a pair of these birds in my ont-door aviary and they are doing grandly, but they take fruit (mostly banana), and also eat the sponge cake portion of the sop. By all means let it take a little orange-juice, but it would be much better if it would extract the juice from the fruit itself. Just a word of caution, a bird's leg is easily broken, so handle it carefully when treating the sores.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. Whiteley, Ltd.—Acute enteritis, or inflammation of the bowels, probably induced by the formation of ptomaines within the food.

G.D.—Hen died of septic poisoning due to infection from the oviduct. Both the ovary and oviduct (egg passage) were considerably inflamed.

E. J. Lamb.—Pneumo-enteritis, viz., inflammation of the bowels, complicated with pneumonia, due to the production of ptomaine poisons.

D.E.—There was no evidence of constipation, nor was the food at fault, death resulting from peritonitis, a common trouble with hens during the breeding season, infection occurring by way of the oviduct. The ovaries were active and enlarged, and if egg production had not already occurred, it soon would have done.

Fluff.—There was no direct evidence of death from violence. What you take to be a puncture at the base of the skull is in reality a natural foramen for the passage of the spinal cord given off from the brain, nor was there anything like shot within the skull. This foramen was certainly enlarged, but this I consider due to the action of the ants. The two sharp bones you describe are anatomically correct, and not peculiar to the Bullfinch. It is impossible for me to say the true cause of death, owing to destruction caused by the ants. Your suspicions are probably rightly founded, but in the absence of any definite lesions, or the presence of shot, you are unable to justify these suspicions.

Madam.—Goldfinch died of enteritis as the result of ptomaine poisoning. It is evident that there is something wrong with the diet, from which they have all succumbed. The bird was very thin on the breast—a symptom of high fever, such as would be induced by the absorption of ptomaines.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

W. McMillan; J. Moore—We are much obliged to you for the notifications so promptly sent us.

A. E. Morris, J. Brown, and Others.—Our Mr. Weston thanks you heartily for the kindly letters of sympathy in his recent indisposition, and is glad to be able to say that he is once more back again at business.

J. McIntyre.—We appreciate the suggestion you are good enough to make, and will see if something cannot be done in the matter.

Thirty Years Old Grey Parrot Commences to Lay Eggs.

Sir,—A friend of mine would like to know if any of your readers have ever experienced anything like the following: He has a Grey Parrot, no less than 29 or 30 years old, and it never laid an egg until last Friday week, at 8 p.m., and then it laid another on Tuesday night last at 9.20 p.m. It has never been with a male bird during the time he has had it (some 25 years); it is very tame, and answers to the name of "Jacob," as it was supposed to be a "male." If any reader can relate a similar experience, I should feel obliged. The owner is Mr. John Woolston, of this town.

The Breeding of Chaffinches in an Aviary.

Sir,—I have had a pair of Chaffinches in my small aviary about ten months. They have built a nest in an ordinary nest pan. The hen has laid three eggs, and is now sitting on them, and I think will hatch them out all right. In the same aviary are a few Linnets, Redpolls, and Canaries, but I am certain it is the Chaffinches that have paired up together. They were outside in the garden all last winter, but the aviary was moved into a partly glass building about three months ago. I have four Canaries sitting in the same aviary. My reason for writing you is that I have taken your paper for some years, and during the whole time I do not recollect seeing any record of Chaffinches breeding in a cage or aviary. The birds have been fed and cared for by my son, who is very interested in all kinds of birds. If you think it will interest your readers, I will let you know the result later.

The Chiff-Chaff in Scotland.

Interesting Notes by a Perthshire Bird Lover.

Sir,—All interested in bird life may like to know that for some days past the writer has seen and heard the Chiff-Chaff in Perthshire. So far as I am aware, this bird is not one of our regular summer visitors, and I never remember seeing or hearing it in Scotland before. It is an early bird to arrive in the south of England, being noticed as early as the end of February, but its range to the north does not appear to extend beyond Northumberland. This I gather from Yarrel's "British Birds," but as this is rather an old book, the bird may have been noticed by some other recent writers as a Scottish visitant. It is the first time to my knowledge, however, that it has been seen or heard of in Perthshire, nor have I come across any person who has heard it in any other part of Scotland. The Willow Warbler is a constant visitor to this country, and is about the first, if not the first, summer bird to arrive. This year the writer heard it early in April; this is late, as it often arrives in March. These two little birds referred to are so like one another in size and colour that it is not easy to distinguish them by their plumage, but their notes, of course are very different. The Grasshopper Warbler, is known to visit Scotland, and has been seen in Ayrshire. I have heard its peculiar note, which resembles that of the cricket, in the south Ayrshire neighbourhood. Is it not a little remarkable that birds so similar in many respects should so differ as to their range of flight. The Chiff-Chaff has been noticed in Norway, and is a hardy little bird. Why, then, should it not pay us more frequent visits? Another interesting feature is—how does the female bird find its mate? The male bird is supposed generally to arrive about a week before the female, and yet I am pretty sure that the mate of this Chiff-Chaff has joined it.

Indian Meal as a Substitute for Egg Food.

Sir,—In answer to Mrs. E. Geddes, I put meal in a cup and pour on it just enough boiling water to cover it, as I find all meal swells when it is wet; so get it to swell before giving it to the birds. Put a little sugar and mix the bread in till it is crumbly.

On Collecting Dandelion Seed.

Sir,—Wait till the seed pods have expanded, then collect early in the morning, when dew is on them, as then the seed will not fly about. Hang up to dry in a bag, then gently rub together, when the seed will sink to the bottom. In this way I can gather half a pound of clear seed in two hours. If preferred to gather when dry, collect in same way, but when seed pods are dry; rub together as before. A day with no wind is best for gathering when dry.

Why Not a Yorkshire Canary Club in Lancashire?

Sir,—Having seen how well other varieties of Canaries are catered for, I thought I would write and see what the feeling was in regard to Yorkshires in Lancashire. When you read what the Yorkshire Union are doing every year it makes you think it was time something was done in Lancashire for this variety. I am sure there are plenty of good birds to run a club, also there are plenty of shows where the patronage could be given. Hoping that some abler pen than mine will take up this matter.

The Nut.

How the Lesser Whitethroat Builds Its Nest.

Sir,—In my bird-nesting days I found several nests of the Lesser Whitethroat. These birds seemed to me very partial to certain nesting sits, a typical place being the small clearings in woods. These spots are usually covered by rank vegetation, with small briar bushes and brambles dotted here and there. In one of these briar bushes that was thickly entangled, with coarse grass and weeds, the nest would be situated, a frail looking structure about a foot from the ground, cup-shaped, but very shallow, composed of dead grass and lined with horse-hair.

Rare Visitors and the Gun.

Sir,—During the spring several birds not previously known to Great Britain have paid the penalty of death for favouring us with a visit. It is well-known that if it were not for the "sportsman" with a gun, acting in many cases for collectors of rare specimens, a number of beautiful birds, such as the Hoopoe, Golden Oriole and Waxwing, would be frequently seen in our islands. Now "several examples" of the Siberian Nutcracker, and at least two Collared Flycatchers, have fallen victims. A favourite argument of the humanitarians is that if there were no bird-keepers there would be no bird catchers. Is it not more true to say that if there were no moneyed "collectors" there would be no "sportsmen" prowling in search of solitary, rare and beautiful visitors.

Nightingales at 7s. 6d. Apiece.

Sir,—Although I am a member of the Cage Birds League, when I read advertisements at this time of the year of Nightingales for sale at 7s. 6d. each, I cannot but sympathise with people who object to caged birds, for it is perfectly apparent that these Nightingales are fresh caught ones, seeing that such advertisements only appear after the arrival of the migrants. Here and there all through the winter there have been isolated specimens to be had for 30s. apiece, and more, but is it likely that tame, steady Nightingales would be sold for seven shillings and sixpence? It is a cruel act to catch them just as they have safely accomplished their long and arduous flight, and are looking forward to mating and rearing their families. Neither are they the only victims, for with the spring migration, there at once appear advertisements of Wheatears, etc., etc., to be sold at a cheap rate. Of course, these are wild caught birds, and Wheatears are diminishing in numbers. That quantities of birds are absolutely content and happy in their private houses—their cages—I think I know as well as anyone, after an experience of at least 30 years, but I strongly object to our native migrants being decimated.

HYBRIDS WITH ALIEN PARENTS.

The Britisher Staunchly Supported.

Sir,—Re the interesting question raised by Mr. Meek, we would like to see this carried out, but would it be practical? We are afraid not. We are bound to agree, word for word, with Mr. F. Archer, for half prize-money, with the excessive railway charges, would simply spell ruin to the exhibitor, and he would be compelled to keep his birds at home. What would be more to the point at present would be better classification. Take the majority of schedules, the utmost they seem to be able to do for the exhibitor is "Any variety Mule or Hybrid," whereas if this were divided into two classes, say, "Any Variety Hybrid, including Canary-Bullic," and "Any Variety Mule," we venture to think that classes and shows in this section would be better supported.

T. Bowler (F. and T. Bowler).

Sir,—I have been greatly interested in the various views expressed by several fanciers in your correspondence column, under the above heading, and therefore venture to reply to Mr. Archer's letter in your last issue. Accepting Mr. Archer as a connoisseur on hen Bullfinches, I doubt very much if he could select or distinguish a German hen from a Britisher, if kept under proper conditions. Personally, I have failed to detect the outstanding features in the British hen your correspondent mentions. I am afraid I must have seen either really good Germans or possessed poor British specimens. He asks who is likely to suspect a hybrid bred from a German hen, exhibited in a class provided for British specimens. Unfortunately, all exhibitors are not true fanciers. Strictly speaking, a fancier is an individual with a conscience, and he would not venture to exhibit a bird in any class other than the correct one. Our "conscience makes cowards of us all," and one could not feel greatly flattered by winning unfairly. Mr. Archer is glad to see that classes are to be provided at our large shows for foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches (have they not already been provided?), so that they will not be allowed to compete in British classes in future. I was not aware that foreign Goldfinches or Bullfinches were ever allowed to compete in classes specified for British specimens. Perhaps your correspondent could inform me at what shows foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches competed in British classes? To return to the Hybrid controversy. This branch of aviculture needs encouragement. It is not very encouraging to the fancier with limited means to breed British Hybrids, and to know that he has to compete with the "money bags" of the Fancy, who can pay large prices for large birds, viz., Siberian hybrids. I am of the opinion that there are more British hybrids kept at home than there are sent out, owing to unfair competition. I know several well-known exhibitors who are exhibiting birds, known for a fact to be bred from Siberians in classes which clearly state "hybrids between two British birds." I contend it is quite time this state of affairs was ended. Mr. Archer states that if classes were divided the result would be that the few remarkable hybrids (he admits there are some shown in British classes) we see now and again (I presume he means birds bred from Siberians) would no longer be benched. Personally, I would rather see a really good class of British hybrids than a half-filled class possessing a remarkable specimen such as your correspondent refers to. No doubt Mr. Archer and his partner are in a position to purchase these remarkable specimens and would rather exhibit them in classes which contained their smaller relations, than in a class where foreign hybrids competed together, where competition would be keener. I should like to ask Mr. Archer if he is a breeder as well as an exhibitor of hybrids? I think Mr. Archer's chief interest in the Fancy is that of exhibiting and winning, no matter whether it be with hybrids, British (normal) or albinos.

Can Glass be Cut with Scissors Under Water?

Further Amusing Differences of Opinion.

Sir,—After carefully trying repeatedly to cut glass with scissors, both under water, I have absolutely failed to perform the feat.

J. Blaine.

Sir,—My method of cutting glass is to procure a piece of iron (square or round will do), and put this in the fire, making it red hot. Take the piece of glass, notch a little out of each end where you want it cut (as seen in sketch "A" and "B"). Then put the glass on a table, or anything flat, with one end overhanging, as seen in sketch. Place the red hot iron flat across from A to B, and you will be surprised at the effect it produces.

A. Boyd.

Sir,—I have tried the experiment of cutting glass with scissors under water. It is quite easily done, but the glass breaks into small pieces when being cut.

Anon.

Sir,—I have cut glass with scissors many times. The glass and scissors must both be entirely plunged under water to stop vibration. Thin glass can be cut with ease, although it is not possible to get a straight edge like you do when cutting paper. It looks as though it had been sawn off.

Thos. Robson.

Sir,—It is quite true, as one or two of your correspondents have suggested, that a broken fragment of an old file will at a pinch make a tolerable substitute for a glass cutter in a small way. So will a broken fragment of any other thoroughly well hardened steel implement. The fragment only needs to be broken in such a way that it has a point—or several points—which will "bite" or get a purchase on the glass to scratch it. The cutting powers of these improvised cutters certainly seem to be improved by keeping the point moist, but do not moisten them with water. A drop of turpentine or turpentine in which a little camphor has been dissolved is the thing for the job. Having at various times been interested in many hobbies, I have come in contact with most or all of these dodges, and I do not think the little wheel glass cutter is to be beaten for the purpose in view.

Claude St. John.

Sir,—The hint that glass could be cut with scissors if the operation was performed under water was so interesting that I at once proceeded to put the matter to a practical test. I found it was possible to do so. The glass I used was comparatively thin, the scissors very ordinary, and the resulting edges very rough.

George Oglethorpe.

Sir,—Years ago this idea was given me by a plumber friend, and I used to cut glass in this way for my seed boxes, also with a red hot iron; both ideas are old, and both answer their purpose well. The scissors must be sharp.

How to Dry Yolk of Egg.

Sir,—My method is to place the hard-boiled yolks of eggs in a basin, mince up as fine as possible with a fork and place in a gas oven for forty minutes, taking out every five minutes to stir and mince with the fork (this prevents the eggs burning). It is imperative that the egg is thoroughly dried, otherwise it will turn mouldy. I consider this method the most satisfactory for making egg food. Keep in a tin and use as required.

Affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

Sir,—Mr. Holley, the secretary of the above society, writes me that his council have unanimously decided to elect me President for this year, and I wish to decline their generous offer with thanks. Since the general body failed to elect me as vice-president at the general meeting, the position which I have held since the formation of the society, I will accept no office from the council. We got on very well without a president up to this year, and as one of the present council sent me a voting list with my name struck from the V.P. and two others substituted, and told me that for the benefit of the society a complete change would be necessary (which he and his colleagues have managed to get nearly to their ideal), we will hope for a record 1912 show, with everything they desire, as they have managed to get those "objectionables" removed, and have now no obstacle. We will also hope for an unquestionable balance sheet, with a record balance, as the fruits of their labour. By the way, I would like to know what was the result of balance sheet last year? The club seems to be carried on in secrecy; no show advertised, no monthly meetings. Well, I suppose we are to be ready when the call comes to send entries and specials, which help to draw big entries. We are to do as we are told and ask no questions. Pay our 2s. 6d. and be thankful it is taken from us. It is one of the privileges to be allowed to pay a member's sub. Wishing all shows the success they deserve.

Moulting Linnets for the Catching Season.

Sir,—I was much surprised to see in your last issue that the Doncaster and District C.B.S. had committed an offence in the eyes of the would-be fanciers. What a pity is it that Mr. Abbott had driven it so long in making up his mind to become a member of the above society, when it is possible his vote would have been the means of its meetings not being taken to a "pub." Mr. A. must be very short-sighted, or he would see by the society's doings, since its formation in July, 1910, that every encouragement has been given to fanciers in the district (which has been extended to 12 miles radius) to become members. In conclusion, allow me to give Mr. Abbott a pressing invitation to join this society of honest and hard-working fanciers who are determined not to rest until Doncaster can boast of one of the strongest cage bird societies in the country.

G. Thomas.

Is a Specialist Norwich Club Wanted in the Midlands?

Sir,—The meeting advertised to be held in Birmingham on Saturday last could not be held owing to the non-attendance of fanciers, and to put the matter lightly, this must have been very disappointing to Mr. Collier, after the expenditure of much time and expense in bringing the matter forward. Mr. Collier assures me he had been promised support by about twenty fanciers belonging to Birmingham, West Bromwich, and Wolverhampton Societies, but only three persons attended, while a letter of regret for non-attendance was received from the Wolverhampton chairman, and enclosing half-a-dozen names for membership. It makes one wonder whether a Norwich Plainhead Specialist Club is wanted in the Midlands at all, and if fanciers wish Mr. Collier to continue his efforts on their behalf, a great deal more enthusiasm must be shown if the Wolverhampton Society's desires are to be attained. A club containing only members of the three societies previously mentioned seems to me to be of little advantage from the "entries" side of the matter, seeing that the inter-club cup competition is a great success in that respect; but if the Norwich fanciers in Staffs, Derby, Leicester, Coventry, etc., joined, then we should have plenty of competition, and our patronage would be sought for by those wanting a bumping entry in our section at their shows, while special prizes would be found by the new club for competition amongst its members at those shows. The suggested club was broached to me while secretary of the Birmingham C.B.S., and if the Norwich men really want one, now is the time to say go "or for ever after hold their peace." Mr. Collier's address is 110, Abbey Road, Bearwood, Birmingham.

Early Nesting and Rambles.

Some Hints about Young Birds.

Sir,—I do not think I can remember so many early nests and nestlings as reported this year. The season being so open, the birds started nesting much earlier than usual. Nests with young of both the Blackbird and Thrush were fit to take early in April, and budding fanciers have in some cases procured the first nests in the hopes of getting (as most generally is the case) the most cocks in the early nests. In my experience of many years, when I used to hand-rear so many nests, I always found that four out of five young in the Blackbird's earlier nests were cocks, and as the season went on and the late nests, the second brood most of the young would be hens. I found out that it was not of much use to raise them, so I left them alone, and always went into raising the early broods. In raising or trying, too, the early nests, I can give you five instances of this season, which might be of some interest to those who wish to hand-rear a nest of young birds; in fact, of any kind, that the principal secret lies in keeping them warm at night. The food may be all right during the day, but the nights have been so cold; that's where the loss comes in. All five cases which these young would-be fanciers tried to raise were lost through their getting off the nests and getting cold. If they could be kept all together they would help to keep each other warm, but when they get separated they feel the cold and soon succumb, as the nights have been very cold during the second week in April, although the days have been summer-like. Now, anyone out on their rambles and find a nest of young and wish to raise them, care must be taken to keep them warm at nights, besides covering them up with flannel. The flannel is not like the old birds sitting on them to produce the warmth. A good plan I once adopted over some young Nightingales was an old hot-water bottle, which I filled with boiling water and placed in a box and put the nest on that, which kept them nice and warm all night. This I kept up until they were well feathered. By this simple means they came on apace. Before I tried this dodge I had lost several nests of the more hardy kinds, so now when I have anything good I use the bottle. Another great secret is the early morning feeding as soon as it is daylight. That, of course, means a lot of extra trouble, but it is well worth it for a few weeks only; besides being healthy for yourself.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

A Grand Array of Foreign Birds.

A tit-bit in the birdie world of Sheffield was the table show of foreign birds, held May 7, at the Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, under the auspices of the Sheffield O.S. Mr. T. Dawn presided, and was ably supported by Messrs. J. Woodall and H. J. Chick, of Nottingham, and all the principal exhibitors and fanciers of Sheffield and district. It was indeed a great night; 45 birds were staged, and these included some of the rarest species in the country, some of them having scored premier honours at the Palace show. Many open all England shows cannot boast of 45 foreigners. The interest taken in this particular section by the Men of Steel is very great, and there are indications of other members adopting the strangers from foreign lands. The leading exhibits included Yellow Rumped Parrakeets, pair of Brown's Parrakeets, pair of Spotted Bower Birds, Cuban Finches, American Nonpareils, Red-headed and Black-headed Gouldian Finches, and Diamond Sparrows. All these were staged by Mr. G. Fletcher. Other notable exhibits were grand Eclectus Leadbeater Cockatoo, Red-cheeked Lovebirds, pair Pintailed Nonpareils, and many other small species of the commoner varieties. A very able lecture on the keeping and exhibiting of foreign birds was given by Mr. E. E. Smith, who also placed the cards. This was en-

PORTMADOC.

Annual show, held May 14, in glorious weather, being, as usual, in connection with the old-established Horse, etc., Show, shelter being provided for the cage bird section. The classification was meagre, especially in the Canary section, two classes only provided in the open, and these, according to the wording of the schedule, confined to Yellows, which no doubt accounted for the small entry. We hope that the committee in their own interest will give this consideration another year to improve matters. The secretary, Mr. D. R. Evans, and the stewards worked hard, and did well. The attendance was very good all day. A few of our best birds graced the show once more, the chief exhibitors being Mr. W. H. Williams (Llangoed), and Mr. R. E. Griffith (Carnarvon), who had a field day. Mr. T. H. Furness made the awards.

The best nest-pan holder I have ever used is easily made by anyone, or a wire worker would supply them for about sixpence a dozen. I have discarded all my old wire brackets, as I find this one is firmer and safer. Cut a piece of wire to a length of nine and a half inches, flatten out the ends, and bend each at right angles for three-quarters of an inch. Drive the ends into a piece of wood, and the holder is complete. Glue the nest pan to the wood.

A Combined Draught Screen and Sun Blind.
Sent by W. Bloomfield, 28, Havenhill Road, Balham.

Now that we shall be having the warm and sunny days and the youngsters are leaving the nest, the order will be open windows, as fresh air is the finest tonic they can have. At the same time, we must guard against draughts, the deadly enemy of cage birds, and I have found the following "idea" a preventive, at the same time allowing plenty of fresh air to enter the room. Measure top half inside of window frame, and get four strips of wood 1½in. wide, ¼in. thick, and make a frame, as Fig. 1—a simple thing to do. Now get a piece of common unbleached calico half an inch larger than frame (this is to turn under to prevent tearing) and tack on to frame, and get a small pair of hinges, screw on side of frame and then on to window frame (the same as an ordinary door). It can then be shut or open at will. The same screen will also act as a sun blind during the period of moulting.

Wild-Bird Life.

Habits of the Charming Willow Wren.

In spite of his small size, the Willow Wren is one of the most conspicuous birds of our summer visitors. He is not at all shy, and one can stand under the branches of a large tree and watch him with ease as he flits from branch to branch, peering under the leaves for tiny insects and caterpillars, and stopping from time to time to warble his pretty little song. This graceful little bird is frequently seen in village gardens in the South, and nests in suitable spots in some of them. One occasionally visits the writer's premises, hunting over the fruit and rose trees, going from one to another carefully searching each twig and cluster of leaves. No doubt green fly and small maggots are its principal find, and as these are generally fairly numerous, on the trees, we are careful not to disturb our visitor, although anxious to watch him and note his active habits. The Willow Wren is frequently confused with the Chiff Chaff and Wood Wren, but it is more brightly coloured than the Chiffchaff, and has a paler eye stripe than the Wood Wren. It is much more numerous than either. Its pretty song is quite a distinguishing feature, for the bird is one of the brightest and sweetest singers visiting us in the summer. The song is somewhat short, and lacking in variety, but is delivered in such a sprightly simple manner that it is really charming. The nest of the Willow Warbler is dome-shape, and rather difficult to find, as it is generally situated upon the ground among the grass and coarse herbage, and possibly sheltered by the overhanging branches of a small bush, although one the writer located last season was quite in the open in an old chalk pit, the nest being placed under a thick branch of dead woodbine. It was composed mostly of moss, and assimilated so well with the surroundings that although the fact of the sitting bird flying off disclosed its presence, it was not for some minutes that it could be properly located. The Willow Wren is one of the early arrivals in this country, and proclaims his presence by commencing to sing at once, and he may be heard still singing when the harvest waggons are trundling along the country lanes.

No. 25 of the series "Through a Birdroom Window," specially written for CAGE BIRDS by this popular aviculturist.

FOR many years I longed to breed King Parrakeets, but as usual, the difficulty was to get a Queen, for that is the name by which the female King is known in the trade. One can generally secure a King, for they are excellent show birds, and generally manage to catch the judge's eye—I suppose because the most ignorant judge can recognise a King—and if you ask him why he has passed over some very rare specimen and put the King first, he will not tell you that he did not know what the other bird was, but will dwell long on the lovely colours of the bird of his choice. In my time I have been the proud owner of many Kings, from the raw young nestling that I fondly hoped might prove a hen, down to the venerable old fellow whose age could only be guessed at. Once I bought one that the man assured me was five years old, but I felt very like the village rustics at a funeral when some old inhabitant passes away; they take a last look at the coffin plate to see how old he was, and some shake their heads, as if, even in the grave, he was not quite candid about his age. I always thought that that King looked more than his five years!

Introducing the Royal Couple.

One day I made up my mind that I should like to breed Kings, and therefore I set about looking for a Queen. As luck would have it, Fortune favoured me. I happened to be writing to Mr. Arthur, of Melksham, about something else, and in his answer he happened to say that he had a good Queen for sale for 25s. Would I care for it? My readers will guess what my answer was. A few days later the lady arrived, and proved all that had been said about her. I at once introduced her to my King by placing their cages side by side. I am too old and experienced a hand to put two strange birds at once together, especially if they are of opposite sexes. An old writer says that it is necessary that a man who visits ladies should wear good clothes, even to magnificence, if he may do so without impairing his fortune. The expense we make in habits bears us through all, as an ingenious man once said; it opens all doors to us, and always procures us an obliging reception, and as the exterior part, striking first the sight, is that which makes the first impression on our spirits, doubtless we ought to take some care to render that impression favourable. Nature has clothed the King Parrakeet in the most gorgeous colours. They may be a little loud for some tastes, but they are undeniably striking. A King Parrakeet, with his vivid scarlet and green uniform, is sure to catch the Speaker's eye in any company. My bird evidently pleased the lady's eye, and they were soon on the best of terms.

Of course the bars of the cages were a drawback to their close and intimate relationship, but at the same time they enabled me to judge of the dispositions of the two birds before putting them together.

For a week I kept the birds under observation, and then I thought there would be no danger in putting them together. I accordingly placed the cages side by side, opened the door of the King's prison, and let him pass into the lady's chamber. Babel was a Quaker meeting to what went on. They screamed at each other till you could hear them all over the garden; but I am bound to say I believe it was only a rather exuberant way of expressing joy, as no harm was done to anybody's person. Still, for a time, I kept a careful watch, for I can run no risks. I have skirted too close to the rocks of Death to enjoy the sensation, and I must confess that for a time my heart played postman at my ribs.

After a while the screeching ceased, and when I stole away they were sitting comfortably side by side on their perch, like a regular Darby and Joan.

Two Strings to the Bow.

My readers will hardly believe me, I fear, when I tell them that after waiting in vain for Queens for years, I actually got hold of two in a fortnight; but, as we say of the weather, it never rains but it pours, so it is sometimes of Bird-dom. In making this revelation, I shelter myself under the authority of Goethe, who remarks on such grand old tales as those of Horatius and Scævola: if the Romans were great enough to invent those stories, we ought to be great enough to believe them. I hope my readers will believe me, when I tell them that I once actually had two Queens at the same time. There is nothing like having two strings to your bow, as then if anything goes wrong you have something to fall back upon. I regret to say that my King was an exceedingly greedy bird, and would never let his wife feed, till he had done. He reminded me of Peter Bridge Ward, who, when moved to an act of piety, assigned to the pilgrim's use the ill-baked bannock which the bairns couldn't eat.

Jealousy At Court.

I was rather glad when I got my second Queen; but I found that you can have too much of even a good bird. The awful jealousy that these hens exhibited towards each other was painful to witness. The cock seemed quite unable to settle so long as both dear charmers were within sight or hearing; so I reluctantly determined to part with one. My readers will all remember how Master Mills' double-bladed knife with a corkscrew in it was sent by his stepmother to the missionaries, and even so can an inconvenient bird be always utilised as a wedding present, or a Christmas gift, especially if the receiver lives somewhere near you, so that in case of anything going wrong at home, you can either buy it back, or, better still, get it on loan!

The hen I retained was a particularly fine one. It reminded me of Mrs. Gamp's oracular sayings anent a certain cucumber: "I don't believe a finer cowcumber was ever growed. I'm sure I never see one." I had kept the pair in a perfectly cold room all the winter to harden them off; and so I had no great qualms about turning them out when the days began to get warm towards the beginning of April. Luckily for me, it was a particularly genial spring, or I might have paid for my temerity by the loss of the Queen with egg-binding. But there, we have to take these risks with Parrakeet breeding; for they all go to nest early, and if you waited till the weather was really warm you would lose a year. Of course, when I am going in for early breeding, I take care to provide a warm and well-sheltered aviary. Then if the birds are in good fettle they will take but little harm. I gave them two or three ideal logs to choose from, but they would have nothing to do with them. I don't know how it is, and I can't say whether mine is an exceptional experience, but I have found that both Kings and Rock Peplars prefer to nest on the ground in some retired corner. It is very disconcerting to the owner, as it gives him agonising fears as to the fate of the eggs and young at the jaws of marauding rats and the scamperings of inquisitive mice; but when the hen Parrakeet selects a site for her home, mortals can only bow before her decision. Still I saw before me a vista of very dark possibilities.

The Queen Commences Housekeeping.

For some days the Queen groped about in a corner, endlessly shaping the spot to her liking, though so far as I could see she did little or nothing but turn round and round an indefinite number of times and collect a few stray chips and little bits of wood. But one morning as I looked through the wires I saw the gleam of something white in the shadow. It reminded me of the skull of historic fame which Kasper's little grandchild found beside the cottage door, and which was so large and smooth and round.

The egg really did look very big for the size of the bird, and it was certainly smooth and round. On three successive mornings she added one more, and then she settled down to sit, just like an old broody hen. The King meanwhile spent most of his time in sleeping. Probably he was getting ready for the hard work which he knew lay before him. Occasionally he would make a remark to his wife, and then shut his eyes and relapse into slumber. Once or twice during the time of incubation I saw a mouse, bolder than the rest, run quite close to the nest, and then the Queen would give a vicious dab at it, which, had it reached its mark, would have ended an interesting career on the spot. At the end of the three weeks I got up very early in the morning to see what had happened to the eggs. The parents were suspicious, clearly; and, with the lower creatures, as with men, the best rule in such a case is to act naturally, with more quietness than usual, and give them time to forget their suspicions. I accordingly stepped quietly into the aviary, hoping that the hen might shift her position sufficiently to permit me to see if anything was moving under her. I was delighted to see a little bit of yellow fluff, which told me that the good beginning had been made, which I hoped would make good ending. The hen hardly ever left the nest for days, but at stated periods the cock would descend to earth and feed her, and she then passed on the nutriment to the babies. After a time the Queen flew up on a branch and the cock fed her there; and then they would both visit the nest, in which there were now three youngsters, and feed them. At first they were a bit shy about feeding coram populo, but after a while they seemed to consider me a necessary evil. It is not often that you can watch a nest of baby Parrakeets from the first moment of their existence till they can proudly sit nodding on a branch. The only other time I have been able to do so was in the case of my baby Rock Peplar, who, like these little Kings, was born behind a brick.

The Royal Family Growing Up.

At the end of a fortnight they resembled three little porcupines. In a few more days the sheaths of the feathers burst, and they were very like their mother, except that they had not a beautiful tail like she has, but only a sort of little paint brush. They grew wonderfully fast, and at the end of five weeks were quite a respectable size, but, of course, only about half that of the old birds. In their first feathers they all resembled youthful Queens. It is not for two or three seasons that the cock assumes his gorgeous scarlet coat. I was proud of those three birds, and my eyes flew from one to another, like bees from flower to flower. As they sat side by side on an old apple branch they looked as innocent as a boy on an errand, and St. Anthony had no harder fight with the ladies he was impolite enough to call demons, than I in resisting the temptation to take another look at those birds. We all like something new. Nature has no more interesting illusion than that of turning over a new leaf or beginning a new life. I suppose it is the same feeling as makes my little dog shake the sheep-skin mats when overjoyed at my return.

I intended to keep the happy family together till the following year, but Fate ruled otherwise; for the King turned so spiteful that I felt that the only way to save the family was to remove them out of the paternal circle. I accordingly caught them up and transferred them to another compartment, and saw all my splendid creations dissolve like Ariel's pageant. It is very seldom that birds, when they want to go to nest again, will tolerate the presence of a former family. Parrots never will.

Shattered Hopes.

I put these youngsters, unthinkingly, into a recently painted aviary, never dreaming of harm. True, the paint smelt a bit strong; but it never struck me it would hurt the birds. Alas, it did. The next morning they did not look well. It is easy to tell when a Parrakeet is not well if you are experienced. That evening they were very mopy, and did a deal of sleeping and a lot of drinking, which I knew was a bad sign. They gradually got worse and worse. It was a case of painter's colic, and soon I had three lovely corpses. I sent them to a taxidermist, and when they came back I wished I had given them decent burial. For years they confronted me in a big box with a glass front, till I could bear it no longer, and I gave them away. I suppose, as such things go, it was a rather fine specimen of the taxidermist's art. It ought no doubt to have reminded me of that large domed edifice in the Duke of Hamilton's park—something like the tomb of Theoderic at Ravenna. It was erected by the last duke for himself, his son, grandson and his nine predecessors. "What a grand sight it will be," he said, "when twelve Dukes of Hamilton rise together at the Doom." I suppose I ought to have felt something like that, but I never could.

I felt very wretched, but I consoled myself like the widower who inscribed on his wife's tombstone "The light of my life has gone out," and who excused himself to her successor by adding "but I have struck another." For I at once got the old birds to go to nest again, and ere long was rewarded with another family. You may be sure that when they needed to be moved into new quarters I did not put them into a newly painted one.

TIMELY HINTS.

Our New Helpful Competition

Four prizes of 2s. 6d. each (cash, or our books to value, at option of winners) given weekly to the senders of the four best Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POST-CARDS, with sender's name and address at foot, and reach us by Monday's post.

When Hand-rearing Birds.

A useful appliance for hand-rearing Finches or Warblers is a feather with most of the web cut from each side, just leaving about half an inch of web on the quill to feed the young birds with. I find this very satisfactory, as it does not bruise the mouths of the "babies" like the hollowed-out stick.—R. Blake (Overross Road, Ross, Herefordshire).

Egg-eating Hen Finches.

Many fanciers like myself, who have to go to work early in the morning, find on their return that the hen Finches have eaten their eggs. The safest method is to procure two nest pans, one larger than the other. Half fill the small one with bran or sawdust. Pierce a hole, large enough for the egg to pass through, in the bottom of the larger one, and place it on the top of the smaller one, and hang up in the cage or flight. When the Finches lay, their eggs will drop out of sight and will be safe until you get home. I have tried this and been successful.—E. Toulson (3, Powell Street, Worsbro' Dale, near Barnsley).

Marbles as Dummy Eggs.

I have found marbles placed under the hens while laying their clutches of eggs answer quite as good as dummy eggs, and much cheaper.—David Higgs (Tipton).

To Prevent Plucking of Young.

Get an old piece of veil or window curtain, about six inches square, fill with feathers, afterwards closing it and fastening tight with string. Then place same inside cage, just within reach of the hen. This you will find will prevent even the most forward hens from plucking their young. This device will also answer for the birds when beginning to nest, as it will prevent the littering of the cage floor with nesting material.—F. G. Ball (Shotton).

Cook the Red Mite.

If troubled with red mite in a small singing cage, take the bird out and put the cage in the oven after the "missis" has cooked the meat, and so cook the mite and its eggs. Put the nest pan in also before letting the hen sit, as very often it has already got some in it; and when changing the nest pan for the young ones, put the pan in the oven at once—don't leave it lying about for the mite to escape.—E. James (73, Carlisle Street, Splott, Cardiff).

Preventing Bird-cages Marking Walls.

To prevent a cage from marking walls, or wall paper, cut four cork studs from a bottle cork, and glue one on each corner of cage. This idea will also prevent red mite from harbouring between back of cage and wall.—M. Hopper (Millbeck).

Cheap Nest Linings.

Get a yard of carpet felt 1½yd. wide, costing a shilling. Cut into five-inch squares; round off the corners and cut a V-shape out about an inch at the top edge, and cut a hole in the centre. Tack in the nest pan. It makes a nice warm lining for the birds. This quantity makes six dozen linings.—Mrs. Manners (79, York Road, East Ham).

To Preserve Dandelion Seed.

A method I found very successful last year, and have again this season, is to gather the dandelion flower just after the flower has closed and the fluffy part forms on top, then with a pair of scissors snip off the fluff just clear of the seed, then cut seed head off the stem and put in a shallow box (cardboard for preference) with a piece of glass on top, and put in the sun to dry (by so doing you will have no fluffy litter flying about the room or cages). When dry, the seed will then shake out, and can be stored away in paper bags until required. For use this year up to now I have dried nearly a pint.—H. Jones (3, Brightside Road, Hither Green).

An Interesting New Book.

THE FLIGHT OF BIRDS, by F. W. Headley, author of "The Structure and Life of Birds." Crown 8 vo.; price 5s. net. Published by Witherby and Co., 326, High Holborn, London, W.C.

An intensely interesting investigation, written in a style delightfully devoid of abstruseness, and technical terms. The question "How does a bird fly?" is very fully answered in this volume, and the solution is given in terms that may be understood by everyone. The structure of a bird's wing is explained, and illustrated by simple diagrams, and different forms of wings are shown in some very well-executed photographs. Besides the text drawings, there are fifty or more photographs of flying birds shewn in the sixteen plates contained in the volume. Many of these are strikingly beautiful, and all of them go to elucidate in the clearest possible manner the letterpress.

The majority of the photographs are of Pigeons, but they include also some striking representations of the flight of Gulls. Not the least interesting part of the work is the comparison between aeroplanes and birds, in the course of which much interesting information is given relating to man's latest conquest of the air. Altogether the volume may be unreservedly recommended to all interested in a truly fascinating subject.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Club Reports.

BURTON-ON-TRENT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 7th, at the Staffordshire Knot. The question of using closed rings was laid before the members, and after a lengthy discussion on the advantages and disadvantages of the closed rings, it was decided to leave the matter open. Nest feather show, July 20. Birds to be staged at 2.30. Mr. Walton (Leicester) judge.—A. Wood, Sec.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 13, Mr. William Pope in the chair. The following new members were elected: Messrs. W. Reid, J. J. Hutchinson, W. Howe, J. Wray, J. Bowes, J. Bowerbank, T. Fawcett, T. Keen, W. Graham. Nest feather show, July 20. Classes: Borders, Norwich and Yorkshires (3 each), Mules and A.O.V. As this is our first attempt at a Nest Feather show, we hope all the members will try and make it a success.—Nicholson and Tailantyre, Hon. Secs.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The arrangements that were made for a visit to Ingleton on Whit Tuesday afternoon will have to be cancelled, as no half-day excursion will be run on the Tuesday. Thus railway arrangements have interfered with both rambles this year, and no doubt the officials will arrange one on a Saturday afternoon a little later on, in order to allay the disappointment this has caused. Members reading this would greatly oblige if they would communicate the postponement to any member or members they may meet during the holidays. Don't forget the First Feather show on June 8.—H. Hill, Sec.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 14 at Castle Inn. Mr. D. Barker in chair, before a good attendance of members. Two new members elected; Messrs. J. Peake (Stoke), W. Hickman (Longton). F.F. show, July 6, at Portland Hotel; two open classes, 1 Nor., 1 Yorks, for members of North Staffs. Societies; Mr. F. Bate, judge. Birds staged at 2. Specials total 7 up to the present. Mr. J. Pitchford gave a paper on colour feeding for the show bench. Afterwards Mr. Pitchford offered to answer questions, but he had so explained his subject that it was impossible to put any questions. A vote of thanks was unanimously given to Mr. Pitchford. A good number of members is essential for the progress of the Society.—Geo. Lea, Corres. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Committee meeting, May 16. Mr. C. Crawhall, in chair. On the proposition of Mr. Crawhall and seconded by Mr. Tindall, a vote of sympathy was passed with Mrs. Taylor, on the death of her husband, Mr. Thos. Taylor, our esteemed fellow member and committeeman. Mr. Taylor will be sadly missed by fanciers in the North. Correspondence read from Cinnamon C.C., Northern Lizard Club, Yorkshire C.C., E. and W. B. F.C., Norwich P.C., Border Fancy C., Green Canary Assn., and Nat. B.B. and M.C. Will members who intend going to picnic on Whit Monday to Bothal kindly note they must take their own eatables with them; train leaves 1.30 p.m.; meet station (Central) 1.10 p.m. Annual subscriptions must be paid before being able to show at nest feather show, June 22. —J. W. Reed, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN AND DISTRICT

Meeting held May 11th; chair taken by Mr. J. Hall. Messrs. McKay and J. Biddle were elected members. This society is going up by leaps and bounds, and still we strongly advise fanciers to join us. It was decided to change our meeting place. Next place of meeting I will notify in Fancy press. A deputation formed to inspect school for show January 4th next, reported that school gives every satisfaction, plenty of light, and free from draughts, convenient in every way, close to station; also a separate room for the cage birds. Birdie men please remember we are doing our utmost for you. We strongly plead for your support to make our first venture a success. Re prize drawing, I strongly urge members to do their utmost in selling these books; they mean £20 to us, so "buck up" and let us see this sum of money behind us. Any members who have not received these rings kindly apply to me.—J. W. Chiston, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held Crown Hotel, May 15th, Mr. A. Anderson presiding. Agreed to engage the Drill Hall Stenhouse Street, from 15th to the 17th November inclusive. Judges appointed:—Borders, J. Patterson (Chirnside); Yorks., J. W. Bruce (Coldstream); Norwich, C. Campbell (Glasgow); Cresta, G. Arnott (Sinclairtown); Scotch and British judges were delayed, awaiting replies. Estimates for show printing, agreed to delay till secretary enquire re marked catalogues. Decided to apply for patronage of all specialist clubs. Club smoker will be held in the Old Inn (Mr. Lean's), June 4th, begin at 6.30 p.m. Decided to ask Mr. McLean to supply sixpenny pies and two refreshments; admission to be 1s. All members present gave in their names. Would all members who intend going kindly let secretary or members of committee know at once, as this will be a special order, and we will require to know the number to cater for. Next monthly meeting, Commercial Hotel (A. Campbell's), June 19th, when we intend going over the show rules.—R. Reid, Sec.

CINNAMON C.C.

Annual general meeting held at Blackburn, May 9. Mr. L. Roberts in the chair. A letter was read from Mr. Stephen Wilson, offering a silver medal for most points gained by a member joining in 1912. Same was accepted, and a vote of thanks passed to Mr. Wilson. Free membership is to be given to non-members for most points in Cinnamon classes. Societies to notify secretary if they are providing Cinnamon classes. Patronage granted to Newcastle, Manchester (club show), Liverpool, Bradford (Cinderella), Aberdeen, Scottish National, and Palace. Five classes to be provided, including one for novices, at every show. In future, points gained in foul classes not to count for season's specials. Mr. Heys brought forward a scheme for amateur exhibitors; this left over until the specials are allotted. The question of purchasing trophy was gone into, and the following are the subscribers to date, and the Secretary was instructed to purchase the trophy. Messrs. Deacon, £2 2s.; W. Dormer, 10s. 6d.; J. Wones, 10s.; J. W. Metcalfe, 5s.; H. Smalley, 5s.; J. Norman, 2s. 6d.; L. Roberts, 2s.; Hartup, 2s. 6d.; T. Proctor, 2s.; W. Hales, 2s. 6d.; S. Wilson, 5s.; W. Chubb, 2s. 6d. One or two dates remain open, so societies that wish for our patronage apply at once, please.—J. W. Metcalfe, Hon. Sec.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, May 18, Mr. W. Butler in chair. Schedule adopted for annual open show. Open classes: 4 Nor., 5 Crest and C.B., 7 Yorks, 5 Bord., 1 A.O.V., 3 selling, 2 Mule or Hybrid, 7 British, 2 Foreign; 35 classes in all. At next meeting a schedule will be drawn up for the members' classes.—W. Elliott.

SPRINGBURN & POSSIL PK. C.B.C

Monthly meeting and show of British held in Reid Hall, May 8. Mr. A. Sloan, the President, judged the birds. Awards: Light Mule or Hyb., 1, F. Taylor; 2, 3, J. Dunlop. Dark, 1, W. Dunlop. Bramble or Chaffinch, 1, 2, R. Reid, 3. 5, A. Gordon, 4, J. Dunlop. Bunting, A.S., 1, J. Crawford; 2, A. Gordon; 3, 4, J. Dunlop.—J. Waugh, Sec. and Treas.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held May 18, in Club Hall. There was a moderate attendance of members as usual. Mr. W. Carr was elected treasurer, Mr. M. Simpson chairman (pro tem), and Mr. J. Walker a vice-president. Open show on Oct. 5. Decided to apply for the patronage of the N.B.B.M. and F.B.C., N.Y.C.C., and N.B. and S.F.C. Next meeting, Club Hall, June 1, at 6 o'clock. All members and intending members please try to attend.—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

MORPETH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 10th, Mr. H. Seely in the chair. There was a good attendance of members, and four new ones were enrolled. Everything seems to augur well for the success of our next show. Intending members should send in their names, or come to our next meeting, June 10, when we shall be pleased to welcome them. Members who have not yet paid their subscriptions kindly do so at their earliest convenience.—E. Cowling (Hon. Sec.).

HULL C.B.S.

Annual ramble fixed for June 1st, when the committee hope all members will make a special effort to go, and bring their friends. Barton-on-Humber is the venue, and members and friends are requested to meet at the Victoria Pier, at 1.15, in time to catch the 1.30 boat. A cheap booking has been arranged, 1s. return fare. Tea at 6 o'clock at the Red Lion Hotel, Barton. After tea a convivial evening will be arranged, at which Mr. F. H. Stamford will preside. It is hoped all members will stay and make the concert as big a success as the past rambles at this place have been. —E. A. R. Ridley, Hon. Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held May 15th, at headquarters. A very interesting and instructive paper on Mule Breeding was read by Mr. G. Mortlock. In answering the questions on the various crossings, Mr. G. Mortlock gave ample proof of the life study he has given in this direction, and the members' thanks are due to him for the splendid support he gives us. It is a great pity the members do not show their appreciation by attending in larger numbers. I trust they will take the opportunity at our next meeting to be held on June 19th, when Mr. A. J. A. Marley is due with a paper on British Birds, and judging by last year's, we are in for an enjoyable and instructive evening. Another very pleasant item was the presentation to the Association of a handsome silver cup for the British section. This was given by W. Raymond Greene, Esq., M.P., to whom the members accorded a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks. The cup will be on view at our next meeting, which I trust will be a record.—P. H. Jeffries, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Annual general meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, May 18th, Mr. H. H. Towers presiding. The balance-sheet was adopted as being satisfactory, showing a balance in hand of £1 3s. 11d. The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. W. A. Cowgill; vice-pres., Messrs. A. Brown and T. Ogden; hon. sec. and treas., Mr. E. Clegg, Victoria School House, Dewsbury; committee (inside Yorkshire), Messrs. W. Crabtree, C. Pickup, R. Sutcliffe, H. W. Walsh, L. Dykes, J. Bailey, S. Dean, H. Hill, H. H. Towers, and F. Townsend; outside Yorkshire, Messrs. T. C. Crawhall, J. W. Ramsden, R. C. Bullen, A. Hirst, and J. Currie; district representatives, Messrs. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), J. W. Middleton (Keighley), H. Ramsden (Leeds), and C. Morrison (Brighouse); auditors, Messrs. R. Halliday and S. Dean; scrutineers, Messrs. F. Allen and S. B. Grayshon. The following new members were enrolled: F. Oldfield, J. E. Pickup, M. Moore, and Pearson. Revision of rule: That an amateur is one who has not won more than three first prizes. Decided that the competitions, specials, etc., be left in the hands of the new committee.—E. Clegg, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

An Interesting Lecture on Softbills.

Monthly meeting at The Raglan, May 16th, Mr. Crabb in the chair. A large number of members were present to hear Mr. Otto Puck's lecture on Softbills. Mr. Puck said, in opening, that he was a member of the L. and P.O.S. 25 years ago, but dropped out from the society for some time, and re-joined about 12 months ago. He did not like the name of "bird-fancier," but liked bird-keeper much better. Mr. Puck gave some very interesting and amusing anecdotes of his early days, when he started keeping Warblers and Nightingales. He said Nightingales must be fed on live food, and this must consist of various grubs, also dry "ant eggs," worms, and gentles. Staple food to consist of ant eggs and "whiteworm." Food must be crumbly moist. Blackcaps must have fruit all the year round. Water was one of the principal things; it must be fresh every day, and a bath was an important necessity. Cage must be large, so that the birds may be able to use their wings, the top being soft. Mr. Puck advised using the box pattern cage, as it excluded the draughts, and he showed a very fine cage with side panels of glass which could be removed, and also a dome to place on the top of cage after removing a part of the original top, this dome being surrounded with artificial foliage. The perches of this cage were covered with india-rubber, so as to be soft to the birds' feet, and were of different thicknesses. Mr. Puck said there were three periods of the year which were very trying with Softbills. First, when they were fresh caught, then the cage should have a false roof of calico; second; moulting time, when the food should be most nutritious; third, the migratory season, as the birds jump about at this time. He said it came quite naturally to the birds, and that it was impossible to stop it, first and second years worst, but they settle down in time. He advised feeding Softbills up to 8 p.m. or 10 p.m. in winter, as he considered that from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. was too long for the birds to go without food. By doing this you get the birds singing about Christmas. The Blackcaps, he said, support each other while singing, but the Nightingale was just the reverse. He would stop singing if moved, or if another bird was singing. Mr. Puck showed a Blackcap which had been caged six years, and which had won several prizes, including a win at the last L. and P.O.S. Show at the Palace. Also a melodious Warbler caged three years. He said these birds were kept on the Continent a great deal. He believed in plenty of sunlight during the moult. Mr. Puck also brought samples of pine kernels, Styrian ants' eggs, and whiteworm. Several very interesting questions were asked by Messrs. Mortlock, Ward, Crawford, Matthes, and Crabb. Mr. Crabb proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Puck for the very practical information he had given of this most interesting part of bird keeping. He said the information was of considerable value, coming as it did from one with 40 years' experience. This was seconded by Mr. Couzens, and carried unanimously.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Maskell's Hotel, May 16. Mr. Wheeten presided; there was a good number of members present. Resolved, to accept Mr. Silk's offer of cup for competition at our open show. Young bird show July 10th, with an outside judge. The guarantee fund scheme was left over until next monthly meeting.—E. Thomas, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held May 11th, Mr. J. Farrer presiding. It was decided to cancel the proposed F.F. show on July 13th, and to hold a table show instead, on same date, in club room; entrance fee 3d. per cage. The following classification was suggested: Nor. yellow, Nor. Buff, Yorks. ditto, Bord. ditto, Lizards, A.O.V. Canary, and A.V. British.—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

SALFORD LINNET CLUB.

Meeting held at Boathouse Hotel, on May 19. The club will be well represented at Blackburn on May 25th. The following delegates were elected:—Messrs. J. Caskell, A. Marshall. A special meeting for the picnic party will be held May 26th, at one o'clock prompt, when a good attendance is requested. Members and friends wishing to join the party kindly send their names to Mr. Cootes at the earliest.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

THATTO HEATH O.S.

Special meeting, 13th May, at Railway Hotel, Mr. Enever in the chair; a good muster of members. Resolved, that headquarters be transferred to the Railway Hotel, where there are greater facilities for shows, etc., and that the monthly papers by members or friends be continued. Mr. Cutler kindly promised to give one in August on "Wild Seeds," and R. P. Bixter one in September on the Breeding of the Norwich Plainhead." A very enjoyable evening was spent. Votes of thanks were given to Mr. J. Ashton and Mr. H. Enever. Next meeting, 3rd June, when nest feather show will be discussed.—H. R. Macdonald, Hon. Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held May 9th, at the Duke of York, when Mr. F. G. Weaver presided over a good attendance. The cup rules, which had been drawn up by the sub-committee, Messrs. Rowley, Robinson, Weaver, and Gibbons, were accepted unanimously, the Secretary to frame and hang up in the meeting room. First nest feather, June 13th, birds to be staged at 7 p.m.; judge, J. A. Tonks, Esq. No entrance fee, but every exhibitor to pay 6d., which shall be given to the best bird or birds in show. Classes, Nor. clear, lightly mkd., and heavily mkd., Yorks. clear, lightly mkd., and heavily mkd., and A.O.V. Can. Annual nest feather and cup show, July 27, which will give all those a chance that have had a bad start. A prominent reporter and judge has been communicated with to judge same. The classification was left over to give consideration to sufficient novices' classes.—J. Gibbons, Hon. Sec.

ANFIELD, EVERTON & DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Headquarters, May 13th; Mr. W. Bell, chairman. New members were enrolled. Schedules for the four shows down for competition for the three handsome cups, gold and silver medals, numerous specials, and money prizes, were got through. The first show on the list is the nest feather, July 13th, at the Mission Hall, Burleigh Road South. All that remains is to give a good big entry, thereby increasing the prize money. There will be some competition, judging by the enthusiasm displayed. There are not a few dark horses, so look out you champions. Who are those two members who have been doing the Bradford district; were they trying to keep it dark? That yellow cock bought at £4 10s. should be somewhere about when the points are counted up. The classes for the nest feather show are very comprehensive in Canaries, Hybrids, British, and Foreign, and they should catch on all right. The cups and medals were given to and accepted by the officers of the society on the following conditions: That all members be considered novices and all members be eligible to compete for same; that an equal number of flighted and unflighted classes be provided at each show (not including nest feather show); that no arrangements be made to "star" birds; that every member be encouraged to put on the bench as many birds as possible, and that all birds winning count for points upwards: that one cup be for Yorks. clears, etc., one cup for Yorks. greens, one cup for Norwich, Borders, and British. Any further discussion on these points would be entirely out of order and discourteous to the donor, who, by the way, is one of the oldest fanciers in England to-day. Any further information will be given by the secretary, if necessary, on July 8th, when that well-known fancier, Mr. L. Hamilton, will give a most interesting lecture on colour-feeding. Our first ramble takes place on Sunday, June 2nd, through fine woods; a free lunch will be given to members and friends. A special invite is extended to members of any other society.—R. B. Wright, Hon. Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held May 20th; Mr. James Jones presiding over a full attendance. Preparations were made for Whit Monday members' show. Splendid special and extra special prizes have been received; the prospects are very good.—John Wynne Parry, Hon. Sec.

GARSTON B.B.A

Monthly meeting held in club-room on May 16th. Nest Feather Show July 11th. Any fancier in district wishing to join should do so at once to be eligible to exhibit. Mr. Wilkinson having resigned, all further correspondence should be sent to me—A. T. Mullock, 26, Gladeville-road, Aigburth, Hon. Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 9th at Horse and Jockey; Mr. Havenhand presided over a good muster of members. For the coming Nest Feather Show in the Vestry Hall, Attercliffe, June 22nd additional classes were made, including a cottagers' class. Three competent judges have been engaged, and I hope all members will stage a good array of birds. We are having a ramble on Whit-Monday to Tankersley Park, taking train to Ecclesfield. All those going please meet at the Great Central Station by 12 o'clock, Whit-Monday morning.—W. Hailstone, Hon. Sec.

BELFAST N.C. AND Y.C.C.

Meeting held May 4th, in Clarence Place Hall, May Street, which was well attended by members and friends. Three new members were nominated by Mr. Lavery. This society has increased its membership considerably this season. Members present had only poor results to report for their first round, though one or two have done fairly well; it is to be hoped the next round will be more successful. Next meeting, June 1st, and as all contributions should be cleared up on that date, members not clear will please note.—Walter Connell, assist. Hon. Sec.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

At the Irwell Castle, May 13, Mr. W. Bancroft gave a paper on Breeding and Feeding for colour, and was keenly listened to, the lecture being very interesting, and given by a fancier who understands his subject thoroughly. Some very useful tips were given, and the novice would have every chance in competition with the champion if he would follow Mr. Bancroft's methods and advice. Lectures like these are not given every day, and it behoves members and friends to make sure of attending them. There would be less grumbling at our judges, and our reporters, who really do their best to wake fanciers up to the little defects in their exhibits.—Critchley and Metcalfe, Secs.

YORK C.B.S.

Well attended meeting, held headquarters May 13, when a very interesting lecture on British Birds was given by Mr. H. E. Shorney. Wild birds of every description were mentioned, and many of us were very much surprised to hear of the quantity of birds of various kinds which may be found around York. Mr. Shorney gave a description of most of them, their habits, and their nests, and kept every one present interested. Several questions were asked and were answered by the lecturer, after which Mr. D. Hunter proposed a hearty vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. Humphries. Decided to have another cycle run on June 5, when Haxby and district will be visited, so we are hoping every member who can possibly come will do so; ladies, as usual, are invited. Classes for nest feather show fixed, and one class and a special prize added for junior members. Specials also for best young bird champion, best bird novice section, all points gained will count for the many prizes already given. New members are wanted, and will be given a hearty welcome. Members requiring colour food, kindly let me know quantity required by next meeting night.—H. Sayles, Hon. Sec.

LEITH O.S.

Monthly meeting, held Liberal Club, Hope Street, May 11, Mr. Jas. Lumsden in the chair. The following gentlemen have consented to judge at annual show on November 9th: Scotch Fancy, Mr. Jas. Carlow (Falkirk) and Mr. A. Hamilton (Caldercruix); Norwich, Mr. Chas. Campbell (Glasgow); Borders, Mr Robert Lamber (Whitburn), and Mr. Joseph Thomson (Newtongrange); Brit. and Mules, Mr. Jas. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). It will be noticed that two judges have been appointed for Borders this year, as owing to the heavy classes last year, and the increase of breeders of this variety who have joined the society, the members thought it advisable to do so, as to get the judging through in good time. In connection with the ramble to Musselburgh at an early date, the Secretary intimated that he had made enquiries about a conveyance for a party, and found that they could secure one for 1s. 6d. per head for a company of 20 or more. The matter was left in the secretary's hands to make the most suitable arrangements, when date of ramble was definitely fixed. It was agreed to send out collector, as usual, and to apply for patronage of the various specialist clubs. Next meeting, September 14, when Mr. Steele (Dalkeith), will lecture on "Wild Seeds and their Uses." Members are asked to keep this in mind, as they can depend on the lecture being both interesting and instructing.—G. Brown.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Meeting held May 8th, Mr. McColl in the chair, with a large number of members present. All being well, we are looking forward to having a large open show next year, as the society is growing. Our judges for this year are: Mr. W. Ronald (Walker) for N. F. show; for November show, Mr. A. G. Cameron (Kelso), Canaries, and Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle) Brit. and For. The latter has on many occasions honoured us and asked no fee, but this time the members are determined to pay him. Six new members admitted:—Messrs. Murray, T. Decker, W. Elliott, E. Dyson, Smith and Thompson, J. R. White and J. Morrison. Messrs. Wigglesworth, McKie, Studham were admitted the previous meeting. Success for this year's show is indicated by the success of members in their breeding rooms, 250 birds recorded. Breeding results of members up to meeting: F. Reeves, 21; W. Greenwell, 29; Stephenson, 4; Stubbs, 2; Elliott, 12; Mackwell, 12; Scott, 12; Jolly, 4; McQuillan, 10; Newton, 13; Hyman, 22; Curson, 15; Hopkinson, 11; Wigglesworth, 9; McColl, 9 (crests); Ronald, 5; McGinn, 20; Hutchinson, 24; Macdonald, 16; Morrison, 16; Young, 26. Many who were not present are known to be doing well. A motion was agreed to thanking the Fancy Press for all favours and for the great assistance received. Many members stated that they had advertised and also replied to others, both buying and selling birds, and this had proved of great service to them. The meeting terminated after a most harmonious evening.—J. M. Macdonald, Hon Sec.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

14 Days' Free Trial.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. C. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

See Editor's remarks in Twitterings, March 30th issue. Sole manufacturers:

C. H. GOODMAN AND CO., 24, Bedford Rd., Kempston, Bedford.

READER!!

If you only knew half as much as we do the great importance of using foods that are guaranteed freshly made, you would not do otherwise than send to us direct for the foods we mention below.

These foods are made freshly every week—sometimes three and four times in one week—and consequently they are in the best and sweetest condition.

Foods bought at stores, local and otherwise, are often left over from one season to another, become stale, webby, and out of condition. Can you wonder at your young birds not doing well if you will purchase foods in this way.

You should write to us for the following:—

Pure Egg and Biscuit

Guaranteed 50 per cent. pure yolk of egg. ½-lb. tin 1/-, post paid 1/3; 1-lb. tin, 2/-, post paid 2/3.

Pure Yolk of Egg (Desiccated).

A 1-lb. tin contains the yolks of over 60 new-laid eggs. ½-lb, 1/6, post paid 1/3; 1-lb., 3/-, post paid 3/3.

Pure Tasteless Red Pepper

The very finest imported, containing all its natural oil and colour, and we venture to say that there is nothing on the market to equal it. 1/6 lb., post paid 1/9; 7 lbs. at 1/3 lb., post paid 6d. extra.

We invite you to compare and test ours with any other on the market.

Rudd's Celebrated Insectivorous Food

For Valuable British and Foreign Birds.

This is the finest Insectivorous Food on the Market, and has no equal for British and Foreign insect and fruit-eating Birds.

All the ingredients are of the finest quality in right proportion, and blended with Pure Honey. It requires no mixing with water, and is especially suitable for Nightingales, Robins, Wrens, Tanagers, Bulbuls, Shamas, Mocking Birds, Woodlarks, etc., etc. A mere glance will prove to you at once that it is far superior to any similar Insectivorous on the market.

FOR a full description of two of the most popular softbills, you cannot have a better booklet than "Nutshell" No. 4, "The Song Thrush and Blackbird." With its help you will be able to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition. Included in the work are directions for hand-rearing and the selection of show birds, as well as particulars of cages, "Nutshell" No. 4, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London,

THE Skylark is au easily kept species of softbill, and is unequalled as a house bird, provided it receives proper attention. Look here! The feeding of Larks; the taking and feeding of the young; catching and sexing; moulting; hints concerning young birds; the Lark for contest singing; selecting the right bird; getting the right song; training for song and exhibition; these are the contents of "Nutshell" No. 3, "The Skylark," post free 2½d., from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 aud 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

so as to detect when any of your Rollers are going wrong. How can you detect anything wrong? You don't know? Well, you ought to, for your lack of knowledge will be disastrous to the singing powers of your birds. "Nutshell" No. 10 gives you this knowledge, and if you don't get it, it will be a case of "penny wise and pound foolish." Which bird promises to be good with hollow roll, bell-roll, bass roll, and Koller? How do you cure a bird of noisiness? What are the best training methods and the best preparation for contest singing? For answers to these great questions in Roller Canarydom, and also full particulars as to correct keeping and breeding, get "Nutshell" No. 10, "The Roller Canary," 2½d. post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A CHANCE FOR BEGINNERS

to solve all the intricacies connected with the breeding and exhibiting of Yorkshire Canaries is now offered at 1/1½ post free. "Yorkshire Canaries," by H. W. Battye, illustrated by H. Norman, and A. J. Simpson, is a notable work. It is replete with all that is needful for the beginner, and is extremely valuable to old hands. The chapter on the selection of stock is alone worth the money, and there are 14 other chapters equally rich in valuable hints. See those on Breeding Cinnamon Marks; Crossing; Dressing or Faking; Don'ts for Breeders. "Yorkshire Canaries," the unrivalled manual for breeders of Yorkshires, 1/1½ post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

"THOUGH a freely imported bird (it may be purchased for the modest half-crown) when writing of foreign birds in all their glowing tropical beauty, the Pekin Nightingale is in the very front rank . . . the ideal cage and aviary bird." Thus writes Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell" No. 19, "The Pekin Nightingale." He goes on to show how this charming bird can be managed and bred in captivity, giving full particulars as to its treatment at every stage of its existence; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

NOTICE! To those about to buy a Grey Parrot. There are many points to look for when making your purchase, ways of telling at a glance in what state of health the bird is. Though it is difficult to distinguish sex, there are means. The Grey Parrot is a delicate bird, and the feeding of a newly-imported specimen is therefore a matter of the utmost importance. Then, the Parrot acclimatised, care with its general diet is very needful; there are many foods which it will readily eat, but which must be rigidly avoided. With due care you can make a grand talker of a "Grey," and quickly, too, if you know how. What is a common mistake which Parrot lovers make? The answer to this question, and to every other concerning the keeping of this popular bird in health and condition will be found in "Nutshell" No. 17, "The Grey Parrot," by Wesley T. Page; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds, 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

CARNARVON.

Second annual show, held at the Assembly Rooms, Market Street, on Whit Monday, in lovely weather. The quality of the exhibits was of a high standard, and the entries totalled over 100 in the 19 classes provided. The staging was all that could be desired, a nice height and well arranged, while the room is one of the best for the purpose, well lighted and ventilated. Norwich were up to expectations in type and quality, especially the winners, which are so well known all over North Wales. Yorkshires were grand birds, well shown, and the Borders were very fair. Some promising youngsters were also on view; not so numerous as last year, still good. Mules and Hybrids were a treat in themselves, both light and dark, and we have never seen better Goldfinches, some of them being hard to separate, with not a bad bird amongst the lot. Linnets also were good, and the A.O.V. quite one of the best classes. Special for best Canary went to Mr. W. Nolan, with his well-known Buff Yorkshire, in faultless condition; best dark Canary Mule, Mr. D. G. Jones (Jenque Linnet), another well-known bird in the pink of condition. Best British, Mr. W. R. Williams, with the winning Bullie, in superb form. Specials were also given in every class for most points. The show was well managed; from start to finish there was never a hitch. The work was in the practical hands of true fanciers, who worked hard, as usual, for the benefit of the Fancy in general. The Chairman, Mr. James Jones; Vice-chairman, Mr. George Jones; Treasurer, Mr. R. E. Griffith, and the Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. W. Parry, are all very efficient officials; the prize money was paid on day of show, and specials, too, we think. Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) judged, and gave general satisfaction. He got through his work in good time.

HARPENDEN.

Held Whit Monday, in magnificent weather, in connection with the annual gathering of the Harpenden Agricultural and Fanciers' Association. Crowds of people passed through the spacious tent, and the cage birds were a source of great attraction, although not a large collection. Messrs. E. S. Willmott, Weeton, and S. Roberts, the stewards, did splendidly, and everything passed off well under the able control of the excellent hon. secretary, Mr. J. B. Townend. There was a fine class of Mules and Hybrids, and the Foreign birds were splendid, though few in numbers. Some of the specimens entered did not arrive until long past judging time, notably a grand Eclectus, the property of Mr. W. Smith, which otherwise would certainly have won in its class. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were well received.

NOR. (5): 1, Pedder, close feathered buff, good body, head, wings, and tail, nice bottom colour; 2, Davies, capped yellow, fair size, lustrous and very deep in colour; 3, Price, buff, good body, nice quality, tiffle slack at thighs. YORKS. (2): 1, Price, yell., rare length, gets up well, shapely bird; 2, Hawkes, chn.-variegs., slim and upstanding, not quite so well packed as winner. MULES (10): 1, vhc, hc, Andrews, leader very nice Goldie-Bullie Hyb., good face, not as large as some, but very rich in colours; 2, Davies, Linnet-Bullie, very rich colour, smart bird; 3, Price, large light Goldie-Canary, mkd. wings and front of face, only wants tightening up, and will do better; r, Dollimore; c, Miss Sibley. GOLDIE (3): 1, Price, grand blaze, rare bars, buttons and whites well shown; 2, Andrews, fine Finch at all points, not quite so tight in feather; 3, Harris, smaller, but good, well mkd. bird. A.O.V. FINCH (7): 1, Andrews, topping Bullfinch, clear of loose thigh feather, grand breast and poll, won well; 2, hc, Harris, former large well mkd. Hawfinch, nice bib, but showing want of tightness, which hindered its chances; 3, Pedder, another Hawfinch, clean cut and good in colour; r, vhc, Dollimore. FOREIGN (6): 1, Davies, grand King Parrot, very lustrous; 2, 3, Timaeus, Glossy Starling and lovely Limnage; 2, 3, Timaeus, Glossy Starling and lovely pair of Black-cheeked Lovebirds, all in superb feather; vhc, Hawkes; hc, Edwards.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

Amended Membership Terms: Badges Free.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

The Associate Scheme An Assured Success.

Our scheme of establishing a body of Associates of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, a body of bird-keepers who promise not only to minister in every possible way to the requirements of their birds, but to induce others to follow their example, has met with a chorus of approval. The following letter from one of our esteemed vice-presidents, Mrs. M. B. Partridge, is only one of very many written in similar terms of appreciation:

I think the C.B.L. Associates idea is a splendid thing, and will greatly advance the cause of bird-keeping under the best conditions. I wish it every success, and will do my best to induce friends to join.

M. B. PARTRIDGE.

Worthing.

Don't Send in the Pledge Coupons Singly.

I have received a considerable number of single coupons, each signed by a reader. Coupons should not be sent in singly. The idea is that readers should get five of their friends to sign the promise, and then send to me the five signed coupons, together with the one bearing their own signature. Upon the receipt of the parcel of six I will register the sender an Associate Member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and will send, without any charge, a LEAGUE badge. In this band of Associated bird lovers we shall have a living refutation of the accusation made by the Humanitarians that cage-bird keeping is "an acted blasphemy!" and I hope that every reader of CAGE BIRDS will conform to the very simple conditions, and do his or her utmost to establish the fact that there are many thousands of bird-lovers in our country who would be as much shocked at the suggestion that cruelty was involved in the keeping of their pets as the loudest shricker of the self-styled Humanitarians.

In the Matter of Subscriptions.

Although many members whose renewal subscriptions have fallen due have sent remittances in payment, there still remain a number who have not renewed their annual subscription. Recognising the fact that rules in some cases prove only an incumbrance to a voluntary association such as ours, we have endeavoured to get along without any stipulations. It would, however, seem necessary that some limit of time should be set as to the payment of subscriptions, to avoid the trouble and expense of continued applications by post-card, and I will make an announcement next week as to this. It will be seen by the new conditions of membership printed at the end of these notes this week that the ordinary subscription has been fixed at two and sixpence annually, this amount to include a badge of membership. The renewal subscriptions of present members of the LEAGUE will, of course, remain at one shilling annually, but if members allow their membership to lapse by reason of non-payment of their renewals, they will not be able to rejoin the LEAGUE excepting on payment of the half-crown subscription as new members.

New Leaflets Now Ready.

It will be noticed that important alterations and amendments have been made in the Terms of Membership, etc., printed, as usual, at the end of these notes. Leaflets are now ready setting forth the aims and objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and giving full particulars of the conditions under which gold, silver and bronze medals will be offered for competition during the forthcoming season. Secretaries of societies should write for a supply of these leaflets, which I shall be glad to send post free. Societies becoming entitled to the medals may allot them in their schedule in any way they please. No condition whatever will attach to the granting by CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of these medals, excepting that they will be given according to the subscriptions of members of any society to the LEAGUE. For instance, a silver, or bronze medal will be given for every five shillings subscribed by the whole of the members of any society to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. If this total subscription amounts to thirty shillings annually, the society may have one gold or six silver or bronze medals, and it may grant these at its shows in any way it may choose.

Copies of the new leaflet will be gladly sent to any member sending a halfpenny stamp for postage, or they may be obtained from the Secretary of a local Society, or the Local Hon. Sec. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

Wild-Bird Life.

Bird Nesting.

For the reader who is fond of "bird-nesting," the present month is the best for indulging in the pastime. When one writes of nest-finding, one does not mean the hunting for the homes of wild birds with a view to taking their eggs or destroying the young. The readers of our paper are, we know, real bird-lovers, and many of them take a pleasure in long rambles across commons and open fields, along footpaths and through leafy woods. One may not go out with the definite object of nest-finding, but being a lover of birds, the doings of the wild ones are sure to attract attention, and many a securely hidden home has been located by simply noting the bush where the old bird flew in. Frequently the finding of one nest leads to others. As an instance, the writer located a Thrush's nest with three lusty young ones in it, and retired under an old lodge to watch the parent birds feeding. While watching, a little bird flew out of a hole overhead. This hole proved to be the home of the common Wren containing some wee little mites that were probably only a day or two old. They could just be reached with the finger, but not withdrawn. A Robin was busy down the footpath, picking up something occasionally, and flying to some ivy in the bank, his object in doing so was to feed three nearly fledged young ones that would probably leave the nest in a day or so. Crouching down, they tried to make themselves as small as possible, so as to escape detection. Young Robins are totally unlike their parents, being a rusty brown colour, more or less mottled. All this time the scolding note of a Warbler had been heard, and after a time a fine Nightingale appeared in the path; the nest was evidently close handy, and after a little search it was found, within a few inches of the ground, lodged in the fork of a bush, where the young branches had grown from the stub. The King of Songsters has been described as a slovenly builder, but this particular nest was far from slovenly. It was rather large, but nicely woven together; dry grass stems and a few dead leaves formed the exterior, and it was neatly lined with fine roots and grass, and a little hair. It contained a solitary egg, a spray of ground ivy rambled round the edges, forming quite a pleasing picture.

Doves as Weather Propbets.

The pretty Turtle Doves are fairly numerous this season, and country people say that when this is the case we are going to have a warm summer. There appears to be some truth in this, as these birds are seldom plentiful during wet, cold seasons, even in districts which they visit year after year. It is to be sincerely hoped their presence foretells a good summer.

Early Birds and Cold Weather.

Coincident with the arrival of the summer migrants is the departure of young Missel Thrushes from their nests. But the Missel Thrush pays a heavy penalty for nesting early in the season. It is a critical time for young birds. The youngsters are safe enough while in the nest, for the solicitous mother tucks them under her wings from sunset to sunrise. But when they get restless and leave the nest the mother cannot look after them. Recently there have been several clear and very cold nights, and many have perished. Among Thrushes the Missel Thrush is the earliest to nest, and it is probably on account of the destruction of the young by night frosts that the species fluctuates in numbers more than any other Thrush. Some seasons they are very scarce.

Increase of Magpies.

The handsome Magpie is said to be on the increase, especially in the vicinity of towns. The gun is seldom used near towns, and so the artful Pies and Carrion Crows roam in security. In addition, the Magpie's nest is so constructed and placed well out of reach that it seldom gets molested, and so another healthy family is launched on the world.

A Rare Bunting.

The Cirl Bunting is, perhaps, the prettiest of the Bunting family, his plumage being partly composed of yellow and black, two colours that are very striking and conspicuous. He is by far the least common of them all. He frequents farm lands, gorse and bramble-covered commons, and the lanes and highways near them, where the hedges are tall and thick. It is a bird of the south, being found mostly south of the River Thames.

The Uddingston C.B.S. First Feather Show for members, writes Mr. Corgrove, will be held July 6.

Will secretaries and fanciers kindly note that I have removed to 49, Clapton Avenue, Halifax, from 6, Emscote Grove, writes Mr. J. A. Watson.

At the annual show of the Old Colwyn Agricultural Society, July 3, there will be a class for A.V. Canary and one for A.O. Cage Bird. Judge, Mr. G. Furness.

Sheffield C.B.S. ramble to Ridgeway, June 1. Friends meet at Intake Car Terminus at 2.30. Fanciers and members of other societies invited, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, assist. sec.

Owing to the unexpected increase of membership, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec., Anfield and Everton C.B.S., we have had to appoint two judges for each of our shows instead of one.

We had a very pleasant surprise last Friday morning, write Messrs. Phillips and Huxley, in seeing our first prize Yorkshire on the front page of CAGE BIRDS. He has won several times since he was shown at Wimbledon.

Having won out the Scotch Fancy and Belgian Challenge Cup presented by the Cork and Provincial Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. L. Birch (Rathangan), I beg to acknowledge the receipt of same from the secretary, Mr. J. Cottrell.

We have secured Messrs. H. Taylor, T. Ridle, and J. Milne to judge our special table show on June 13, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, assist. sec. of Sheffield C.B.S. Prize money 3s., 2s., 1s., and specials. See syllabus for classes. Fanciers joining same night can compete.

Mrs. Geddes writes thanking Mr. James for his information about Indian meal given last week, and would like to know if any reader has tried feeding the old and young birds on milled groats. She tried it by chance, and has found the old birds feed well with them.

At the next meeting of the Hornsey, Wood Green and Dist. C.B.S., at Mr. Bedford's 165, High Road, Wood Green, June 6, writes Mr. P. Brookes, hon. sec., a lecture on Norwich Plainheads will be given by Mr. J. Hodder at 8.30 p.m. Fanciers and friends welcome.

The following gentlemen have been appointed to judge at our open show, to be held Nov. 9, writes Mr. D. Kerr, Forfar:—Nor., Mr. A. Sloan, Glasgow; Bords., Mr. A. Peters, Buckhaven; Brit., Mr. W. Bishop, Stirling.

Mr. E. Carrol Dawson writes as follows: "Thanks for the honour paid my Mule in publishing the lifelike picture. I was delighted; the drawing is so true to life. It does your artist, Mr. Norman, great credit."

A young stock show is arranged for Aug. 14, writes Mr. F. W. Capell, hon. sec., Croydon F.A., 121, Brighton Road, Croydon. A general meeting will be arranged, of which due notice will be given to members, to adopt schedule drawn up by committee. Will fanciers wishing to join please communicate with hon. sec.; subscription, 2s. 6d.

The Wallasey C.B.S. have secured the services of Mr. Charles Houlton to judge their Nest Feather Show on July 6, writes Mr. T. Edwards (4, Park Way, Wallasey). Several good specials are being offered, and new members are joining, so that things are looking brighter. I shall be glad to give full particulars to any intending members if they apply.

There will be an important proposal discussed on the ramble, June 2, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec. of the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S. A silver vase or rose bowl has been offered by the donor of the cups to the novice gaining most points throughout the season who has never won a first prize at any club show. Novices should attend and give their views on the subject.

I read with pleasure Mr. Jeffrey's article in CAGE BIRDS touching upon the Nightingale in captivity. Information of this kind is both valuable and educative, and has been commented upon by several individuals outside the Fancy. Your coloured plate in the last special number was charming and a great credit to the artist. CAGE BIRDS is undoubtedly a wonderful pennyworth.— S. H. LOVE (Bristol).

Ramsden's Pure Peppers.- Customers should order their stock at once. Owing to the strike of transport workers, it may be difficult to get delivery later on. Ramsden's Peppers are the brightest and best of any undyed peppers on the market. Common peppers, artificially dyed, are practically useless for colour feeding, and should be shunned like poison. Ramsden's Peppers are pure—unadulterated. Sold only in tin canisters, and all canisters over 1lb. are sealed. Prices same as last season.—(Advt.)

I was both surprised and delighted to find my name as winner in the British Bird Section of your recent Essay Competition, writes Mr. Robert Cohain. I may say I never expected to have the honour of winning. My utmost expectation was that my article might be thought to be worth publishing in what I consider to be, without exception, the best bird fanciers' paper in existence.

We have received from Mr. J. A. Taylor, 36, Aireville Road, Frizinghall, Bradford, secretary of Windhill, Shipley, and Dis. C.B.S., a list of members' shows to be held during the forthcoming season. There are two first feather shows—June 15, with Mr. John Greaves as judge; and July 20, judge Mr. Chittenden. The combined show is down for Sept. 28, with sixteen champion classes (judge, Mr. W. Cruse), and twelve novice, two selling, and one gift (judge, Mr. T. Ogden). The December show is on the 21st, with twenty classes and some attractive specials (judge, Mr. J. Broadley).

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret that I have to announce the sad loss that has befallen our treasurer, Mr. Ernest Norton, in the death of his little boy, aged four years and four months, writes Mr. W. A. Wilson, hon. sec., Leeds C.B.S. I am sure the sympathy of all fanciers will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Norton in the hour of their great trial.

The schedule of members' shows of the Bankfoot and Dis. C.B.S. and the syllabus for the season 1912-13 is to hand from Mr. F. Gelder, the secretary, 91, Marsh Street, Little Horton, Bradford. There are to be three first feather shows, June 1, June 22, and Aug. 3. Judges, respectively, Messrs. Bailey, Halliday, and Wilcock; and three old bird shows, Oct. 26, Nov. 30, and Dec. 28, with Messrs. Cowgill, Allen, and Self as judges. Seven classes are given in the first feather shows and fifteen in those for old birds. The syllabus of events for the season promises some interesting evenings for the members.

Owing to pressure of business, writes Mr. John Young, City of Glasgow O.S., our late secretary Mr. Macdouald, is unable to again accept office, and it has been decided to revert to the former idea of two secretaries. I have consequently been elected a Scotch Fancy, Belgian, and general management "scribe," with a colleague in Mr. R. Higgin, 27, West Leman Street, Mount Florida, Glasgow, who looks after the interests of the Norwich, etc., sections. I may say that last year we were hit very badly financially (about £40 and over), but with an excellent committee of thoroughly efficient and well-known fanciers in our service, we go forward with hope, and as we are going to offer full prize money of 36s. in every class, it only requires the general Fancy to give us their support to bring success and keep the senior association of Scotland to the forefront.

Nae Doot!

Bird-nesting stories are all the go at present. The latest is that a Perth workman who hung up his coat in a quiet corner when he began work on a recent morning, found a nest with two eggs in a pocket at dinner-time!

It Runs in the Family.

In asking us to pay over to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, for a year's subscription and badge, his prize won for Illustrated Idea No. 589, Mr. Page, of Rodley, writes: "I am of the fourth generation of our family in the Canary Fancy, and I have a son following in his father's footsteps. I have taken CAGE BIRDS now for about four years, and it takes premier honours in my paper rack."

Northern Counties N.P.C. Appeal.

Societies desirous of having the patronage of the Northern Counties Norwich Plainhead Club during the forthcoming show season should apply on or before June 5, on which date our meeting will be held, when the patronage will be allotted. Societies must provide not less than seven classes for champions and one or more for novices. I appeal to Norwich fanciers to join us; anyone in the following counties eligible: Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmorland. Last season the following specials were competed for: Silver cup, novice special, twelve silver medals. Annual sub., 2s. 6d.—W. Curry, sec. (60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle-on-Tyne).

We are favoured by Mr. Rhodes, 32, Barlow Street, Bradford, with the list of members' shows to be held during the forthcoming season by the City of Bradford O.S. There are to be two first feather shows and four for old birds. In the first feather shows sixteen classes are provided (eight Yorks., six Nor., two Brit.), and in the old bird shows twenty-six classes (sixteen Yorks., eight Nor., two Brit.). The entry fee is sixpence, and the prizes are on the sliding scale, with specials to the value of 15s., 10s., and 5s. in each of the five sections (Open Yorks., Novice Yorks, Open Nor., Novice Nor., and British). Well-known experts are down to judge, and some good shows should result. The dates of the first feather shows are June 15 and July 27.

Reared in a Boot.

A nest was discovered in an old boot at the foot of a garden hedge at Lochgilphead the other day, and four young Blackbirds will soon be on the wing.

Linnet's Nest in Beehive.

On a farm at Nyon, near Geneva, a pair of Linnets built a nest in a beehive, and have continued to live on the best of terms with the bees, says a "Standard" correspondent. There are now several eggs in the nest, and the birds and insects fly in and out, using the common entrance.

Drowned while Bird-Nesting.

Thomas Britton, a boy of fourteen, and Robert Robinson, aged thirteen, both residing at Dumbarton, were drowned recently at Dalreoch Quarry. Along with several companions about their own age, they were bird-nesting near the disused quarry there, when both fell over the unprotected ledge. There is a drop of over fifty feet to the water surface, and the water is reckoned to be twenty feet deep. Grappling irons were obtained, a couple of boats launched into the quarry, and eventually the bodies of the victims of this sad accident were recovered.

Found After Forty Years.

A remarkable discovery has been made in the saw mills of the Great Western Railway Works, Swindon. A number of men were engaged in sawing up the trunk of an elm tree into planks by means of a steam-driven saw, when they noticed a cavity right in the heart of the tree. Upon examination, the workmen were surprised to find in the hole a little moss nest containing five Tom Tit's eggs. The eggs were unbroken. The bark had entirely grown up round the tree, and there was no external evidence of the cavity. By counting the rings it was estimated that the eggs must be between forty and fifty years old. The tree was grown in Somerset, and was bought by the railway company at the beginning of the year.

Curious Method of Stealing Birds.

A mean method of stealing was disclosed at Old Street Police Court, on May 27, when two lads of no fixed abode were charged with stealing Linnets and cages, a Lark and a cage, and eight Chaffinches. The method of theft was with a long bamboo pole to lift the cages from the nails outside the windows of the owners, who were chiefly working men. They admitted the theft, and were remanded in view of a number of other complaints. Detective Rutter said that the value of the Linnets was 7s. 6d. each, and of the Lark 6s. On Mr. Bixon, the magistrate, remarking that he did not know the birds were so valuable, the detective replied that some are worth as much as 25s. or 30s. each, as they were much prized by working men for their song and win valuable competitions.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

I have got such a lot of young birds through following the advice in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Peasland (Northampton).

I am pleased to tell you, writes Mr. Greenslade, Eastville (Bristol) F.S., that several of our members are having exceptionally good breeding results this season, having in several cases over thirty on the sticks the first round. Wishing CAGE BIRDS continued success.

"CAGE BIRDS" LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Fun with Pet Budgerigars:

— By —
W. HAINSWORTH
(Preston).

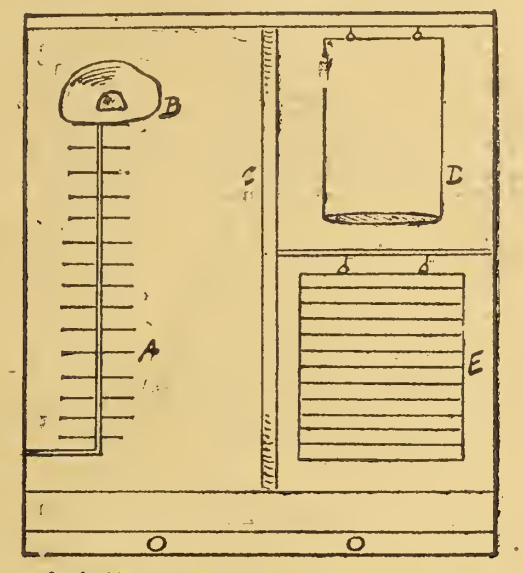
These charming birds may frolic in a novel cage

BIRD keeping can truly be classed as one of the most interesting of all hobbies, and for a very moderate outlay the bird-lover is repaid a hundred times over for his trouble by the beautiful song of his Canaries, the comical antics of his Budgerigars, or the song or mannerisms of whatever birds he may be the happy possessor. With the hope of adding still further to the pleasure of readers who keep Budgerigars, but do not possess roomy cages, I will describe how to make a cheap and serviceable home which, if copied, will delight the owner just as much as the charming little birds who occupy it and cause endless amusement with their funny antics.

First, I procured a large box from the grocer's, which cost me 6d. It happened to be well made, from smooth wood, so that it needed nothing further than a good coat of whitewash in order to enable me to proceed with the interior equipments. After I had made the sand drawer (which needs no description) I fastened a piece of wood, cut from a brush handle, in the middle of the box by mean of a double-ended screw, half of which was screwed into the handle and the other half into the top of the box. The piece of broom handle is cut so as to clear the sand tray by about an inch.

At right angles to this, I screwed another piece of strong wood in the centre, which just touched the side of the box, and on to this I fastened a wire "gate" by means of two little hooks and two small eyelets, such as can be bought at 12 a penny. The gate is very easy to construct, the woodwork being made from lengths of perching and the bars from cage wire. The sketch will make all clear.

DIAGRAM OF MR. HAINSWORTH'S CAGE.



A: Ladder of wire and wood. B: Cokernut husk. C: Broom handle. D: Swing. E: Swinging "gate."

Above the gate I have arranged a good sized swing. Then at the top left-hand corner I have a coker-nut husk nest, leading to which is a miniature ladder, made from perching wood, with wire staves hammered through about an inch apart. I have other perches in various parts of the box, which I simply fasten up by driving a nail through the wood from the outside and then knocking the perching on to the nail point.

The cage front can either be made from fine wire netting, or a loose wire front can be cheaply made to order, just the size required, and this is the most satisfactory in my opinion. I have made use of two stock-sized fronts one fastened above the other; but that can be decided by the maker of the cage.

Anyone handy with tools could make a similar cage in half a day, and at a total cost of not more than about 2s., and if anyone who takes the trouble to make such a cage is not well repaid for his trouble when he sees his pets chase one another up the gate, on to the swing and down the ladder again, I shall be very much mistaken.

I have also similar cages for my Canaries during the "off season" (i.e., when not breeding), with the exception of the ladder and gateway, which are replaced by swings and spring perches. In conclusion, I may say that I am confident my birds are as happy as the day is long.

Hybrids that Pay for Holidays.

ANDREW RAE,
(Wishaw, N.B.)

Two young Mules brought sufficient to defray our contributor's New Year outing. He gives useful hints on the methods which lead to success.

HYBRID breeding has from my boyhood been a passion —in fact it has the same effect on me as the proverbial carrot on the donkey. At present I have about 50 birds, British and Siberian, including Goldfinches, Bullfinches, etc. Having had experience with both aviaries and cages, I must say I have always had the best results with large cages. The hens laid plenty of eggs in my aviary, but they invariably got broken. I keep my birds in a room facing South-East. I have a wire screen made with half-inch wire netting, fixed to open like a door, for the purpose of cleaning the window. I have a weight, suspended from the room door over a small wheel, and attached to a piece of cord. This weight runs up when the door is opened, and closes the door automatically. I made these two appliances after losing a few valuable birds, one a young Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid which came through the drinking hole and escaped, to become the victim of a cat. This occurred when the young one was only thirteen and a-half days old. The same season I had another escape through the room window, which had been left open for ventilation. I have never had any escape since, although I often give them the use of the whole room for an odd flight.

I keep my birds in a large cage, 8ft. high, 6ft. long, and 1ft. wide, fixed against the wall, facing the window. The cage is constructed to form four flights, 2ft. by 6ft. This gives the birds plenty of room for exercise in winter, and with partitions I can make each flight into two or three breeding cages. I always put my wildest pairs in the highest part, and the tamest pairs in the lower part of the cage. The back of the cage is made of 3-ply wood (as advertised in CAGE BIRDS). This makes the cage light and easily handled. Of course, it is essential with a cage of such large dimensions to make it vermin proof, or if you don't you are sure to have trouble later on. I coated the whole cage, both inside and out, with four coats of enamel (even the wires and wire holes). My false bottoms are also made of three-ply wood, well enamelled round the edges. When I buy a new bird I keep it in a cage for a week, and wash it in quassia water twice before transferring it to the flight. If I have a bird ailing I cage it off until it becomes better or departs to the man who gets all the birds on approval but never returns any.

The Birds and the Time.

When buying in birds for muling I always get the largest yellow Norwich-shaped hens I can, and for Hybrid breeding the largest and best coloured wild birds (Siberian preferred) I can pay for. I find it better to buy one good bird than two or three indifferent specimens, for to be successful in competition, both size and colour are necessary. If you are in the country and can get the wild birds' eggs, and have a Canary to hatch and rear them, I should advise you to do so, as Canary-reared hens are more apt to lay in the nests than wild-caught ones. I have Canary-reared hens that will lay in the usual Canary nests, and will sit till lifted off. But I never trust them with fertile eggs, and no amount of persuasion would tempt me to do so, as I think the experiment too risky.

Never be in too great a hurry to get your birds engaged with matrimonial duties. The end of April is soon enough, as wild birds in captivity usually never lay before July or August, and if you have been breeding your Canaries before April they will be exhausted before your wild birds commence to lay, and although you get fertile eggs from your wild birds, if you have no hen Canaries to hatch them, they are, of course, worthless. If your hens seem too forward, reduce their diet to plain canary, giving a little Epsom salts in their drinking water; if the male birds are singing lustily, remove them out of hearing of the hens. This is not always possible, so it is better to keep your eye on the hens, and do not feed them too liberally till you see the Hybrid pairs making ready for pairing. Having got your birds together, look for old nests of the species you are pairing up, and put into them a little of the material at first, till you see they are in earnest, then give them a more liberal supply. Many hens lay on the bottom of the cage, often dropping the eggs from the spars. Your spars should be lowered to from 3 to 4 inches from the cage floor, and the latter be covered with sawdust or some other soft material (I use moss myself), placed thickest below the spars to prevent the eggs getting broken.

Help from the Canaries.

The eggs (if any) should be placed below a hen Canary —the most reliable feeder you can get. It is necessary to have two hen Canaries for every Hybrid pair you have up, and one cock Canary for every three hens. The young cocks from the latter can be sold, and the money will help to reduce your food bill. Keep the hens, if off good feeding parents. Look at your eggs on the seventh day, and if they are dark remove them below the best hen you have, especially if you have any sitting about a week whose eggs may happen to be clear. I always try and get three or four hens sitting at one time, as it gives you a three to one chance of rearing the young. I never disturb the eggs after the seventh day. If the eggs are a day overdue do not get impatient, as I have had eggs hatch on the sixteenth day.

Having had the Hybrid successfully hatched, make sure the hen is feeding. This can easily be seen by looking at the side of the young bird's throat. If there is a big green and yellow lump there, all is well; but if the neck is thin and the youngster obviously making no progress, transfer it to another hen, if you have one with young about the same age.

Always Test Every Egg.

Always test every egg laid whether the pairs seem to have paired up or not. I had a Goldfinch paired to a Canary-reared Greenfinch hen, but the hen did not seem ready for his attentions. I had a spare hen Canary calling for a partner, so I introduced Mr. Goldie. When she had laid her third egg I returned him to Mrs. Greenie, repeating this till the Canary laid her third round. Both the first and second rounds turned out clear eggs. I never saw the Goldfinch near her. Thinking her third clutch would be a repetition of the two previous as regards fertility, I replaced two of her eggs with another two, but fancy my surprise when the eggs hatched and I had two young Goldfinch Mules! I have tested every egg since, and it is mostly the unexpected that happens. I have seen birds mate up and go through the ceremony in faultless style, yet produce nothing but clear eggs, although they would have led the most doubting to expect a full nest of Hybrids. Of course, a great percentage of eggs are clear, and a very large amount addled. We are, of course, always striving after something bordering the impossible; there is no honour, however, in doing anything everybody else can do. Then I have known myself, after a whole season, getting fertile eggs, but although I got them hatched I could not get a hen to feed. Many hens will feed their own species that will not feed Hybrids, so last season I was compelled to hand-feed two. I got a piece of stick sharpened at the point, and moistened the egg food, giving it as often as possible, as it is better to feed often with small quantities.

I always give my young birds well ripened heads of plantain three times a week. I feed as near as possible on the seeds relished by their parents in their wild state. Should any appear a little thick, I give a piece of bread soaked in scalded milk and sprinkled with maw seed or soft sugar.

Never let your "missus" know when commencing in the hobby, the exact price of your birds. I remember the first bird I bought, at £1, after we were married. I went into the post office and got a P.O. for 15s., and placed it inside the addressed envelope. We went out for a walk later in the evening, and I sent her into the post office for a P.O. for 5s. I showed her this disappearing into the letter. The bird arrived, and she was well pleased with it. She told me later, however, when she knew how she had been "done," that had she known it cost £1 there would have been trouble. Some years have elapsed since then, and now she knows the price of a bird so well that if I am in doubt I invariably give her the "ruling vote." This privilege is greatly appreciated, and is worth a trial. In conclusion, I may say that I know of no hobby which, if carried on on proper lines, affords the same amount of pleasure at such a small cost, many, in fact, making quite a cosy "nest egg" out of it. Anyway, I spent my own New Year holidays this year on the money I received for two young birds—a Siskin Mule and a Goldfinch Mule.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence,, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS, Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

BITING OFF BEAKS (R.W., Sparkhill).—It is not possible to dogmatise as to the cause of hen Canaries biting off the beaks of young nestlings. It may be due to a highly-strung nervous temperament, or a form of resentment of undue interference. But whatever the cause it is a bad vice which is not easy to overcome when the hen is the culprit, except by placing her eggs under a more natural and kindly disposed parent to be hatched and reared. If the hen is of only ordinary quality it is best to dispense with her as a breeder altogether, especially if it is this same hen that committed the same vile deed last year. You might try the effect of adding a pinch of maw to the egg food, giving a teaspoonful of soaked tape daily in separate vessel, and at 2 p.m. give a piece of bread sopped in cold milk and drained, instead of egg food. Also give chickweed, groundsel, lettuce or watercress instead of dandelion as green food.

SLIPPED TOE (Anxious).—You ought to have attended to this defect immediately the bird left the nest, or as soon as it was discovered. See that the perches are a proper size for the bird's feet to grip comfortably—about one-and-a-half times the size of an ordinary lead pencil would do nicely. Make them nearly round, and slightly rough them by drawing them through a fold of very rough sand-paper a few times in order to give the bird a good grip. Besides this, put on the leg a rubber band made by cutting an eighth of an inch of the end of feeding bottle tubing, and leave this on a month. To put it on hold the three front toes together and pass ring over them, hold hind toe back against leg, and pass on ring up leg until it is near the end of hind toe, but do not take it quite as far as end of hind toe. Then leave it there when it will hold the hind toe backward after you release the bird. You would find illustrations of various methods in Part VI. of "Our Canaries."

HUDDLED AND SHIVERING (K. Zeno). The bird has got a severe chill, and you will, I think, be rather lucky if it has not developed into pneumonia before this reply can appear. The cause is undoubtedly "dancing in a draughty window," for although you might perhaps get over the difficulty of preventing draughts, I fail to see how you can avoid extreme and rapid variations of heat and cold, which are almost if not quite as bad. Keep the bird in a fairly warm and equable temperature until better. In addition to a staple diet of plain canary seed, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar daily. Every second day add a pinch of maw and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts rape, nigra, teazle and millet. Give a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, and five each of oxynol of squills, ipeca cuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a week, and on the alternate days 20 drops of chemical food.

REARING YOUNG BY HAND (C.D.).—This is quite a simple task if heaps of patient perseverance is brought into play. Make the usual egg food into a soft pap with a little water whilst chicks are very young, say up to ten or twelve days; afterwards make it more like a soft paste. Mix only sufficient at a time to last a few hours, and in the morning and afternoon mix in a little finely chopped green food—just enough to keep the bowels in a normal condition. Feed every hour from dawn to dusk when chicks are very young, and gradually lengthen the intervals to about two hours as they get old enough to leave the nest, and give as much each time as they will "gape" for readily. Keep nest in a cosy place and cover young lightly with a bit of folded flannel or woollen.

MATE FOR ROLLER (Novice, N.B.).—You do not say whether the Roller is a yellow green or buff-green. If the former mate him with a clear buff, but if the latter a clear yellow-bred from two clears for preference in either case. The young will be more or less heavily variegated, with a few ticked, and, perhaps, now and again a clear bird or two, or an occasional self or broken green, according to which parent is the dominant partner.

BLISTERED WING AND SITTING HEN (Constant Reader).—(1) It is quite likely the blister you describe is simply an accumulation of air under the skin. Pierce it carefully with a perfectly clean needle. If it quickly disappears, but returns again in a few days, repeat the pricking each time it returns, which may be several, or, on the other hand, it may not return at all. If any fluid oozes out when first pricked gently press out all that you can without using force, and anoint the "prick" with boracic ointment. Do not anoint it if swelling contains only air. You may add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid to the water every second day for a week. (2) You ought to have said how this hen was fed. See that your nesting material is quite clean, and do not overload nest with needless powders and disinfectants. When she begins to sit next time give a staple diet of plain canary seed. Stop egg food and green food, but give a pinch of crushed dry arrow-root biscuit, millet, rape, and hemp seeds in about equal parts for a few days if any signs of looseness appear. See that the hemp is sound and good, and keep drinkers and water perfectly clean and fresh. Certainly try her again, and if the above treatment does not prevent the looseness, you may, if it becomes necessary, give the eggs to another hen to hatch and rear, or distribute them among two or three others that have eggs at the same stage of incubation.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

ASTHMA? (Amazon).—Please let me know how you have been feeding and treating this bird. In the meantime, while you keep it warm and free from draught, see that it gets plenty of air and light. Whenever running at the nostrils occurs spray or bathe with dilute glycothymoline, it will do no harm whatever if the bird swallows a little. While the trouble lasts change the drinking water twice daily—one ounce (two table-poonfuls) is an ample supply—give one dose Dinneford's magnesia, one teaspoonful in the above quantity of water, and repeat the dose after an interval of three days. When not giving the magnesia put 5 drops of Friars' balsam into the drinking water, and continue for a week at least. If the bird will eat sponge-cake, give it a small piece at intervals during the day, allowing 3 drops of either whisky or brandy to soak into it before supplying to the bird. It will do the bird good to go outside on warm days, and be stood in some unexposed position, but of course it should not be out while cool winds prevail. You must only use a china crock or glass drinker while giving drugs. You have applied rather "late in the day" for advice.

ROSEATE COCKATOO INDISPOSED (R. F. de S.).—Give the Dinneford's magnesia every third day so long as the voidings are not watery. When this occurs you must either lengthen the period between the doses or cease giving it for a time. At all times the bowels should move freely, and this should be secured by an occasional dose of the magnesia. When not giving the magnesia put one teaspoonful of sherry into its drinking water, or in lieu of the sherry give two doses of 5 drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the drinking water, with one day between the doses. Remove all dropping as made, and burn them if possible. Its cage should be cleaned daily while the indisposition lasts. No birds, whether Parrots or any others, must be subjected to draught, more especially so when they are indisposed, but at the same time they should have abundance of light and air. Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo, a very hardy species once it is well established, and as your bird is tame get a light Parrot chain for it; fix this on its leg, and on warm days, when cold winds do not prevail, let it have a roll and tumble on the lawn, using the chain as a sort of lead. There is no trouble in taking the chain on and off, and the bird soon ceases to give trouble during the operation. If not too far gone, this exercise out of doors on suitable days should do wonders for the bird. Its dietary should consist of seed mixture, fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, green food, grit and cuttlebone. Do not give table scraps, sops or any kind of animal food whatever. You had better report progress a fortnight hence.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

SEX OF SONG THRUSH (J. Willoughby). I am afraid I can help you very little, as the only really sure guide to the sex of Song Thrushes is the song. If your bird which is mute is in first-class health and condition, then the chance are that it is a hen. The state of the vent is at this time of the year a certain guide to the sex in birds which are in first-rate condition just the same as it is in the case of cock Canaries. If you don't understand this sex sign, couldn't you get a local Canary breeder to examine the bird and give an opinion?

GONE INTO MOULT (H.H.K.).—If your Linnet has really dropped into moult, its case is hopeless, so far as any further breeding is concerned this season. It is very hard luck. You are feeding the bird in first-rate style.

A BRAMBLEFINCH (Doubtful).—If you want a bird for song, then the Bramblefinch will be useless, as it has no "music" to boast of, even its call notes being, to my mind, harsh and irritating. But a good specimen makes a grand addition to any exhibitor's team. It should be fed the same as a Chaffinch (note the "Nutshell" booklet, also Mr. Steel's recent article).

IS IT A HABIT, (W.H.C.B.).—Yes, the throwing up of food and "feeding the feet" will with it, is a habit indulged in by many birds at the breeding season, when they are in high condition. It is by no means "injurious, but rather evidence of their robust health and forward condition. It cannot be "cured"—unless, that is, you provide him with a kindly disposed hen Canary to feed in place of his pedal extremities. Glad to hear the Greenfinch's eyes have returned to a normal condition.

A GOLDFINCH-TWITE COUPLE (Bexhill).—It is quite early yet for hybrid couples to get to business. In my experience the eggs come mostly in July and August—or late in June. You are feeding the birds on sound lines, and I can only suggest that you give the teazle regularly. Shepherd's purse and chickweed should also be freely given. You will find it better to keep the pair in the large cage of which you speak. The cross is certainly a possible one; it has been produced. The hen will probably lay on the cage floor, so the latter should be thickly covered with moss, coker-nut fibre, sawdust, or other suitable material, to prevent the eggs getting damaged.

TWO ITEMS (Birdy).—(1) The nest is that of the Hedge Sparrow, and in my opinion it is not worth while to hand-rear this species—anyway, there are many other birds more desirable as cage pets. If you decide to do so, get "Nutshell" booklet No. 25 from the office of CAGE BIRDS, which will give you very full particulars as to the food when young and when adult. (2) This bird is a young Missel Thrush.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

"Sorely Perplexed."—Norwich Crest died as the result of hemorrhage from the lungs induced by congestion of its vessels.

R. Weir.—Ptomaine poisoning was the cause of your loss; there was rapid putrefaction, slight enlargement of spleen, and acute enteritis. It was of a very acute character to cause death in such a short space of time.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Miss M. C. G.—Cuttthroats are Foreign birds. Please see our Mr. Page's query columns for answer to second part of your letter.

J. P.—Sweet and hot peppers are not sold by chemists; in the ordinary way of business, that is. Colour-food should be bought from those who make it their speciality to supply the right kind, i.e., excelling in colour, etc. It is of no use to buy any kind of pepper that offers, whether pungent (hot) or non-pungent (sweet). Write for particulars of their goods to one or other of the advertisers of colour-foods using our columns; some of them may have agents in your town from whom you could go and purchase.

J. Alfred.—We are much obliged to you for your letter, but for certain reasons we do not think it desirable that the same should be published.

W. Eceb. We will get legal opinion on the point and give you an answer in our next issue.

W. H. Gibb. We regret to say that the photograph sent with account of country ramble was not sufficiently clear to permit of reproduction.

I wish to thank all applicants for Cockatoo and cage advertised in CAGE BIRDS. They were too numerous for me to reply to every one, which says a great deal for the value of CAGE BIRDS to advertise in. (Geo. Hind (Amam).

I must just tell you, writes Mrs. Cooper, of Southsea, that I have been able to dispose of seventeen birds through a single advt. in your splendid paper, "CAGE BIRDS." My husband and I quite look forward to Fridays.

Pleased to inform you, writes Mr. Martin, Castle-Douglas, I am having a record sale for my Crystal Palace Aviaries, through my advts. in your valuable paper, "CAGE BIRDS"; in fact, we have been working overtime to cope with orders. Wishing your paper every success.

To Keep Green Food Fresh for a Week.

Hold a clean piece of white cloth under the tap until it gets soaked with water, then wring out, but not too dry; roll up the green food in the cloth, put on the floor in some dark corner, and it will keep crisp and fresh and not too wet for a week.—Herbert Wm. Hill (Todd's Buildings, Dipton, Co. Durham).

Another Way.

Procure a earthenware flower pot; or a large jam jar will answer nicely. Place in the bottom of this some stable manure four or five inches deep; then place on top a handful of earth. Put your groundsel, dandelion, or any greenstuff in the pot; keep in a cool place and sprinkle morning and evening. It will keep beautifully fresh for any length of time.—A. Delany, Irishtown, Kilkenny.

To Clean Bird Fountains.

Having tried various ways for cleaning bird fountains, I have found the following method the best, and should like to pass the idea on to other bird keepers. Cut a raw potato in small pieces—just small enough to pass through the "lip" of the fountain. Half fill the latter with water and shake it well until all green colour has been removed. Then empty out the water, and the pieces of potato will come out easily. Rinse well. I do not think sand is a safe cleanser for those blue-top water vessels as the glass is so thin.—Miss S. G. Ruby (9, Magdala Terrace, St. Luke's, Cork).

To Keep Britishers in Good Condition.

Boil some ordinary mixed seed for about fifteen minutes, and then dry same and give to birds in egg drawer. I give this to my birds all the year round, and I scarcely ever have any go wrong. I find same useful in steadying fresh-caught birds, as they are always eager for it, and I have reared with this seed, mixed with any ordinary egg food, a number of young Canaries off hens which I could not get to feed. I have reared a number of young Mules and Britishers on this food, and I found my hens feed on this far better than the ordinary egg food and seed.—F. Lloyd (138, Briardale Road, Mossley Hill, Liverpool).

Cheap Nesting Moss.

Here is an idea to make your nesting material run cheap: Get two or three pennyworth of ordinary moss such as is used for making wreaths. This you will be able to obtain at most flower shops. Then thoroughly wash it in a mixture of boiling water and disinfectant (Jeyes' Fluid or Izal). Let it drain well, then spread it out on a sheet of paper and put it in the sun, if possible, turning it every day until dry, when you will have sufficient moss for about twenty nests. You can then add cow hair if necessary.—C. Oates (241, Pitsmoor Road, Sheffield).

To Keep Red Mite from Nest Pans.

Get a pennyworth of carbon and crush it (not too fine), then put some between the pan and lining. It not only prevents mite, but is a good disinfectant. Tried with success.—P. Gedge, 205, Abbott Road, Poplar, E.

Good for the Youngsters.

For rearing big, strong, healthy youngsters, I have found this recipe very good: One cupful of flour, half cupful oatmeal, pinch of salt. Beat an egg into this and add enough cod liver oil to make it into dough. Bake in oven, and when dry grind into powder and store in a tin with tight-fitting lid. Two tablespoonfuls of this added to the usual egg and biscuit will make your young birds grow into big robust birds. It is splendid for moulting your birds also.—R. Middleton (Pegswood).

An Emergency Nest Pan.

To replace a nest pan that may get broken, when you have not another to use, get a flower-pot, about the same size as nest pan, stick in a lining, drop in wire holder, and it is ready for use.—A. B. Church, 8, Park Road, Henley-on-Thames.

DRINKERS FOR CAGES AND AVIARIES.

Being No. 4 of a practical and helpful series dealing with Bird-room Requisites and their Making.

THERE is not a great deal to be said about drinkers, for they are usually made of glass, a substance which can only be successfully worked in a proper factory; however, this series would hardly be complete without a few words upon them.

Personally, the writer never uses the ordinary glass drinkers. He prefers to see a drinker on one side of the cage to exactly match the hopper on the other side, and so he utilises a tin hopper (such as was described in the last article, April 27th issue) with the back removed. Into this then slips a zinc vessel made to fit exactly, and this vessel contains the water.

Sheet zinc can be obtained very cheaply at almost any ironmonger's, and on this should be marked with a sharpened piece of wire the pattern shown in Fig. 1, of course making the central portion (which eventually forms the bottom) just a trifle smaller than the seed hopper, so that it will slip in and out easily. The height of the vessel will have to be ascertained before the marking is done. Having cut this out with a pair of scissors, bend the zinc at right angles to the dotted lines; then if a knob of solder with a little Fluxite be placed at each corner, and a fine flame applied, the solder will "run," and immediately make a good joint.

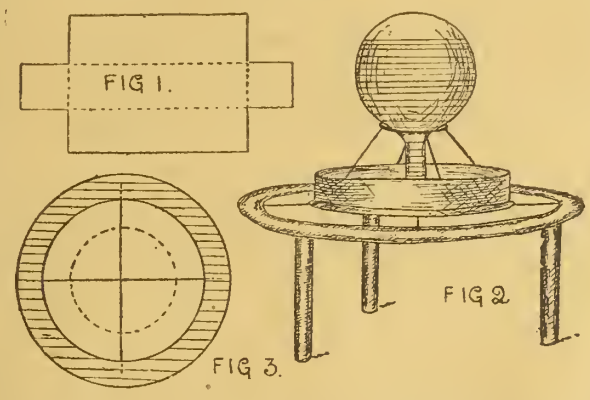
The Destructive Rust.

Tin would do just as well as zinc, but it will have to be coated with a couple of coats of hard bath enamel or it will rust, because what is called "tin" is really thin sheet iron coated with tin, and as soon as the surface wears off the iron is exposed, which very speedily rusts in the presence of oxygen and moisture. The rust will not harm the birds, however; indeed, many people always keep a rusty nail in the drinking water to act as a tonic, but the rust will very soon eat through the drinker, and render it leaky and useless unless it is properly enamelled. With zinc, of course, no enamelling is necessary.

It is wonderful what an effective shampoo Dick sometimes can get in his drinking water, so it is a good plan to give the inner side of the sloping roof, and other parts which are likely to get splashed, a coat of black lacquer, the same as was used for the outside.

If hoppers and drinkers of this pattern are used the appearance of the bird-room will be greatly enhanced, and the little extra trouble will be repaid; but remember that medicines must not be given in metal drinkers.

Fig. 2 shows a neat type of self-supplying drinker, which is suitable for a small aviary or flight cage. As will be seen, it consists of a round-bottomed flask filled with water, supported over a shallow trough also containing water. This is surrounded by a circular perch, and the whole affair stands (like a lame dog) on three legs. This is an interesting drinker in that it seems marvellous that the water in the flask should not sink and fill the trough to overflowing, yet such will not be the case, for it is only when the level of the water in the trough is below the neck of the flask that more will come down from above (a bubble of air rising up into the flask to replace the water). Consequently, even if the birds are all ravenously thirsty, and "booze" away for hours, still there is always a constant supply of fresh water as long as there is any in the flask.



The Stiffest Fence.

The most difficult thing to make in connection with this drinker is the circular perch, and if the fancier could get it done at a wood turner's, so much the better, but if not, the work can be done with a keyhole saw (or a fretsaw) and a small spokeshave, or even a sharp knife. Out of half-inch wood cut a circle of wood 4in. across, and then by drawing another circle ½-in. inside of this, and cutting out the centre portion, we have our ring, which now needs rounding down to make an "oval circular perch." (This sounds Irish, but it really means that a section of the perch is an oval.) If it is rounded roughly with a knife, a coarse sandpaper will soon smooth it nicely.

Now take a red-hot wire, and bore four holes on the inner side of the ring, and into these holes force two wires at right angles to one another, as shown in Fig. 3, and upon this support the water trough may rest, but before this is placed into position the three legs (which should be about four inches long, and could be conveniently made out of odd pieces of straight perching) had better be fitted. Bore three equi-distant holes through the perch, and, by means of glue and thin screws, supply the table with its legs.

The water trough is merely composed of a round tin of suitable size cut down until it is only about one inch in height. The trough will look considerably neater if a circular piece of wire be soldered on to the brim, but this little job won't be found quite as easy as it looks, and, after all, our trough is quite all right without.

A Very Useful Appliance.

The glass round-bottomed flask, which can be bought for 3d. or 4d. at most chemists, should next be purchased, and a circular collar of wire should be made with four straight wires attached leading to the edge of the tin, where they are soldered, as shown in Fig. 2. This will, of course, support the flask in an inverted position, and should be of such a height as to allow the neck of the flask to clear the bottom of the trough by about half an inch. When this has been done, the trough may be securely soldered on to the wires already fitted to support it.

If the trough has been made of tin (as suggested) it will have to be painted with bath enamel to prevent rusting.

To use this drinker, fill the flask completely with water, invert the rest of the contrivance over the flask until the collar rests upon the flask, and then suddenly turn the whole the right side up. The water will, of course, run into the trough until the edge of the neck of the flask is just covered, and no more will come down until a thirsty bird comes for a drink.

N.B.B and M.C. Annual Report.

The handbook and annual report of the National British Bird and Mule Club are to hand. Besides the rules and conditions governing the cup competition, the handbook contains, as usual, the list of British birds eligible to compete for the club's specials. The birds are grouped into their proper families and subfamilies, the Latin name of each bird is given, and whether it is a resident or a winter or summer migrant. A list of Hybrids and possible Hybrids (we notice that the "Greenfinch-Chaffinch" is omitted) is given, with suggested classifications for from six to fourteen classes. The headings here, however, do not agree with the numberings. For "six classes," for instance, only three classes are named; and so on. This does not now fit in with the revised British Bird classification. The club classification for British birds, as given in our issue of April 13, is printed in the handbook. This provides for the proper arrangement of any number of classes from nine to thirty, and entirely avoids the use of confusing terms such as "larger than," etc. Show secretaries should certainly write to Mr. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, London, W., for this list, or keep by them the copy of CAGE BIRDS in which it appeared. The report shows a credit balance of £11 18s. 5d., as against £10 14s. 2d. brought forward, and the Club is to be congratulated upon its continual improvement in this respect.

The Noisy Sedge Warbler.

The Sedge-bird has returned to the marshes and reed beds on the banks of the rivers. He is the most numerous of his family visiting the British Islands during the summer. He stays with us well into the autumn, and may be seen when the reeds have changed to brown and yellow. He is such a persistent singer that one may be certain of hearing his voice at almost any time of the day, and even after sundown; for the least noise starts him performing. The song is a hurried, chattering repetition, and although pleasant to listen to on the wind-swept marshes, is not by any means noted for melody and variety.

Six Eggs in Three Days.

Tall Story of a Hustling Hen Canary.

SIR,—I read in CAGE BIRDS a few weeks ago about a hen Canary laying seven eggs in one clutch. I bought a pair of Canaries three weeks ago, and the hen laid two eggs last Friday, May 17, two on the Saturday, two on the Sunday, and two more up to Tuesday morning, the 21st; total eight; and she is sitting on the lot. It is rather unusual, is it not, to have so many? I have never heard of it before. I should think it is nearly a record.

A. SMITH.

[We have heard of eight and more eggs being laid in one clutch. But we have certainly never before heard of a hen Canary laying two eggs a day on three successive days; a most extraordinary thing.—Editor.]

Aged Parrots Laying in Cages.

SIR,—In answer about a Parrot laying eggs after thirty years, I have known two which laid eggs at twenty and twenty-five years old for the first time, and were very ill just before, and stayed at the bottom of the cage for days. Does anyone know of a Parrot like the one "Polly Grey" a friend of mine has that at twelve months old laid two eggs, and has done so every three months since—perfect eggs all of them—and is now nine years old.

F. B.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Ludlow as to Grey Parrots laying eggs, I should, as a reader of CAGE BIRDS for this last eight years, like to say that when about twenty-two years of age I had the experience of witnessing the same sort of thing. We had a Grey Parrot which was a very fine talker, and one evening it laid an egg on the bottom of the cage. We, of course, took possession of the egg, and to our surprise she laid again the next evening, just as Mr. Woolston's Parrot did, but I am sorry to say she only lived about three weeks after laying these two eggs. She was twenty-four years of age when she died. Like Mr. Ludlow, all the years I have been reading CAGE BIRDS, I have not heard of another case like these two after so many years of cage life.

Roller Canaries at the Crystal Palace Shows of 1912 & 13.

SIR,—In a report of the Leeds Roller C.C. held on Saturday, Jan. 6, 1912, is the following paragraph: "The next item was a letter from Mr. Norris re Palace Show. It was unanimously agreed that the members would uphold the stand taken by the B.R.C.C. and not exhibit there under the present conditions." Mr. J. W. Norris published an apology dated Feb. 9, 1912, in which he says: "I also understand that other arrangements were made by the manager of the show with which I was not acquainted at the time I wrote such letter, and am sorry, etc." Mr. Andrew Percival, hon. sec. of the P.R.C.C. and member of the B.R.C.C., publishes a letter in February, 1912, in which, after alluding to Mr. J. W. Norris's "Open Letter," he says:—"To prevent individuals from exhibiting at the Palace Show is simply boycotting, and is altogether wrong." At the B.R.C.C. general meeting of March, 1912, I am informed Mr. J. W. Norris, as hon. sec. of the B.R.C.C., asked for the guidance of the members present as to his reply to a letter from a member, the member desiring to know if the B.R.C.C vetoed showing Rollers at the Crystal Palace Show of 1913, for if so the member desired to tender his resignation; and the members present decided they had no right to interfere with a member's individual right to show at the Crystal Palace Show, or elsewhere. Since this decision at the general meeting of the B.R.C.C. held in March, 1912, no public announcement respecting it has been made by Mr. J. W. Norris, and I ask him through your columns to do so for the guidance of members who were not present at the general meeting of the B.R.C.C. of March, 1912.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg Food.

SIR,—I was agreeably surprised to find I had been adjudged winner of the much coveted prize in your competition for an essay, on the rearing of young birds without the use of egg-food. I can assure you it will be a pleasure if my essay should prove helpful to fellow-fanciers, and I shall be ready to further enlighten anyone, if possible, who feels disposed to tread the new ground (as you put it in your remarks). I am certain very few will ever return to the old order of things, but will discard for ever the troublesome egg. A trial will convince all of the economy of my method. In the first place it saves much time (besides preventing waste), and cost less in cash. I am confident that the adoption of my method of feeding will reduce the risk to fanciers' stock of an outbreak of the terrible septic fever to the lowest possible minimum. Further, I have proved in cases of wheezing that the feathered patient more quickly recovers when fed on these lines, and treated as advised in CAGE BIRDS. By the way, I never miss reading the columns of Queries and Replies in your valuable paper, as although I have kept birds since 9 years of age (25 years), I have learnt practically all I know about bird culture from CAGE BIRDS, and such grand works as "Our Canaries," and "Cage Bird Hybrids," which I had complete as soon as published, besides many other books compiled by your experts, and costing very little. I hope shortly to put other ideas before your readers, through the advertising columns, which I hope will prove equally interesting. I have a process for preparing the nut food, so that it can be given the birds without further cooking, and I shall be pleased to send a small sample to fanciers on receipt of 1d. stamp.

Nightingales at 7s. 6d. each.

SIR,—I read with especial interest in this week's CAGE BIRDS the letter of Hubert D. Astley, Esq., with reference to the selling of freshly arrived migrants, such as Nightingales, at 7s. 6d. apiece. I quite agree with this gentleman's views where such is the case, but it is not fair to assume that all such birds that are advertised at this low figure are fresh-caught ones, as the following will show. On Thursday last I purchased from one of the advertisers in question a cock Nightingale, and the bird I received turned out to be the best bird I have ever had in my possession—and I have had a few one time and another—and this bird commenced singing the following evening, and has continued to sing each day and night since, which is abundant evidence to prove that it is no "freshly-caught migrant"; in fact, he is singing quite loudly as I write these few lines. I also know of a still further instance. When I applied for a 'Gale from an advertiser now offering them at the low figure mentioned by Mr. Astley, he informed me, at the time of intended purchase, that the Nightingale advertised was exactly the same as our English Nightingale, only they were imported from the Continent.

S. H. L.

Sir,—I am quite in sympathy with Mr. H. D. Astley on this matter, as, apart from the cruelty or illegality of the business, it is a great loss to the country generally—to agriculturists, bird-fanciers, catchers, nature-lovers, and all, simply because what birds are captured are captured at the wrong time. Assuming that 5,000 of them are trapped and disposed of before breeding, then that means a loss of at least 20,000 on what would have been the season's results; but if the trapping were delayed till after breeding time, if the 5,000 were taken, a good margin of increase would still be left over, and so their numbers would steadily increase year by year. Any bird fancier would like to keep a good singing Nightingale, I am sure, but the present way of going about it is the wrong way, and, as I have tried to show, a deplorable loss to all, because these birds, in addition to their charm of song, are great destroyers of insects, etc., and do no harm in any way whatever.

Another Talking Canary.

SIR,—Seeing a previous record of a talking Canary, I should like to let readers know that I have a Norwich cock Canary that can say a few words quite distinctly, whistle a few notes of a tune, etc. It has the Canary song also, The Canary is just over twelve months; we had it at the age of six weeks. It has picked up the words from a Green Parrot we have. If you care to mention this in your paper, you may do so, but please do not give name or address, as we do not want any callers.

"Mocking Bird Food."

SIR,—Regarding the "Mocking Bird food" mentioned in letter from Mr. Jas. A. Blow, published in your issue of 11th inst., and of which you expressed the desire to know the ingredients, I have taken the liberty of enclosing herewith a leaf from a pamphlet of one of the manufacturers of this food. This gives the ingredients, but, as they express it elsewhere in their pamphlet, they "reserve the quantities."

JAMES R. MATHEWS.

New York.

A START FROM THE BOTTOM RUNG.

Pleasure for People with "Short Purses."

SIR,—I started on the lowest rung of the ladder with a few Waxbills, being anxious to work my way up. I think that is the best way for those who contemplate going in for foreign birds: start with a few hardy sorts. I built a large indoor aviary, simply but strongly constructed, with every convenience for their comfort. At the back I put cokernut shells, cut in two and wired, together with branches of different sizes, so as to suit their feet. In the centre I put a swinging perch, and at either end I suspended from the top a swing consisting of two uprights and a cross-bar, of which they are very fond, and which also affords them good exercise. The bottom I made of four compartments; one for sand, of which I give them plenty, and the other three I fill with good pine sawdust. I am a great believer in sawdust. I find it acts as a disinfectant, and it prevents any smell. It is most interesting to watch the changes of plumage in some species, especially the Weavers and Avadavats, which take place in the spring and autumn. One advantage of keeping the birds I have mentioned is the simple feeding, millet and canary seeds being the staple food. I keep a good supply in the aviary, also plenty of spray millet, with ants' eggs for the Weaver and any of the others who wish to partake of them. Often I give a small quantity of mixed seed, similar to that I give my Finches, but without much hemp. I also give them plenty of flowering grass, and this can be got nearly all the year round. I fix it in the front, and they amuse themselves by pulling it through the wire netting, for I find that birds like "something to do," and the pulling of the grass through seems to afford them a lot of pleasure. One thing needful is plenty of water for drinking and bathing, especially the latter, I have never seen birds take to the water like mine; they seem to revel in it. The strange part is that directly I put the bath in all the small ones wait till the Weaver has had his bath, and then they have their turn; but never before him. I have spent hours watching them, especially on Sundays, and their lively movements and their bright plumage and engaging ways make them most interesting pets. Of course, if one goes in for the rarer sort, a long purse is required, but the cheaper ones are within the range of most people, and they can be bought any time during the year if kept indoors. I have had good luck with mine. I have had a St. Helena Finch for six years, and he is fit for show at any time. I recommend an indoor aviary, length 5ft., height 4ft., and 2ft. wide. Anyone handy with tools can easily make it. I first made the frame and then covered it with thin boards, which I obtained cut to order through an advt. in CAGE BIRDS. The front I covered with fine mesh wire netting, with a stay in the centre, from right to left; that made it firmer, and also acted as a rest for the perches. I put a good-sized door at each end. The bath I put inside on a round tray, so that they can splash about without making the cage very wet. A cage that size would well accommodate fourteen birds of the smaller sort, and I would suggest pairs of Avadavats (common and Green), St. Helena Finches, Orange Cheeks, Bronze-winged Mannikins, Zebra Finches, and Madagascar Weavers. Cordon Bleus are very pretty, but I find them rather delicate. Of course, there are many others to choose from, but I have found the ones mentioned easy to keep. I have had great pleasure from my indoor birds, and I hope I shall persuade others to take up the hobby of foreign bird-keeping.

A. W. TRUE.

The Bird Trade and the R.S.P.C.A.

SIR,—Seeing "G. G.'s" letter has prompted me to pen this. For reasons which you will appreciate I am not signing my name, but as you have it before you, that is a proof I am not ashamed of it. Just a little friendly advice to all fanciers, dealers and others whom it may concern. Treat the R.S.P.C.A. inspector as I do—be polite, but let him realize you know your business and don't require any help or advice from him. If he persists in being "nosey" show him the door; if he does not go out you will be entitled to throw him out, always realizing (as he well knows) that he is a trespasser. Oh, what can be done in a uniform! Talk of the blind leading the blind. As the recent prosecution of the Spa Road dealer proved; two inspectors did not know a Goldfinch when they saw it, or they were wilfully untruthful when they said he had a number in stock, as he proved he had none. Those who "know," realize this society, like most others of its kind, is out for the "shekels." Talk about pot-hunting exhibitors, they are not in it with these good people, who boast that even a failure to get a conviction brings the subscriptions in from sympathetic old ladies who are the backbone of the society. We must not forget the R.S.P.C.A. was mostly concerned in prevention of cruelty to horses. Now that the motor has superseded horses, this society is, like the poor veterinary surgeon, hard put to it to keep alive at all, so they have had to find a fresh channel for their energies, and they have picked the weakest and poorest section of fanciers and dealers to start with. I may say, in conclusion, that a talk with an ex. R.S.P.C.A. official is very instructive, if not edifying.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

When Fixing up Your Aviary.

Some Things to Bear in Mind.

Sir,—In planning a new aviary the first essential from the aviculturist's point of view is to find a good position, facing south if possible, with a wall of a house for a background to build against. If he has this, there is one side of the shelter without further trouble; if he hasn't, the shelter should be built of zinc or corrugated iron lined with wood, which insures a good even temperature. The roof should, of course, slant down to carry off the rain into a gutter at the bottom.

The floor is best made of cement to keep rats and mice out. It can be formed quite easily with a good foundation of rubbish (stones, glass, etc.), filled in with smaller ashes and tarred over. Besides being a preventive against vermin, this makes a floor which can be easily cleaned, and is warm and healthy for the feathered inmates. The shelter should be well lighted with one or two windows, according to its size. A sliding or hinged door should connect the shed with the flight; also, there should be an opening or window to give passage for the birds, if the door is required shut. This arrangement will enable the aviarist to separate some of his birds when required, or to shut them off from the open flight in winter.

For the flight, half-inch mesh wire netting should be used, as this will keep out Sparrows, and will also enable the aviarist to keep small birds as well as large. Again, as a protection against vermin, the wire should be buried a foot or so down, and run along outwards to prevent burrowing underneath. The wire, of course, is fixed to wooden supports and cross-pieces. If expense allows, rods or thin sheets of iron would be better, as wood will rot away in time. The exterior should be painted over with black paint (Brunswick black) to show up the interior and enable the birds to be better seen.

The size of the aviary must, of course, be according to the individual's desire, but a good-sized aviary of 20ft. long and about 6ft. wide should comfortably hold seven or eight pairs of birds, provided they are not too large, with a chance of their breeding. Branches of trees hung from the roof, placed in corners, or in pots, are the best perches for the shelter. The flight may be planted with various kinds of thick and bushy evergreen shrubs, which are adapted for shelter and nesting purposes. A few rose trees, if planted in the flight, will afford a supply of green-fly (aphides) to the birds, which they will greatly enjoy. One end of the flight should be grassed, and will keep the birds in health with the insects which abound in it. Food and water receptacles are better, perhaps, placed in the shelter, though if the roof be extended beyond the shed a foot or two into the flight, they may be placed under this. Care must be taken that they are placed nowhere near a perch, as soiled food or water is most harmful. Open food pans are the best, as the birds can see their seed, and scattering can be prevented by an overcurving rim. Small fountains, with shallow bowls attached, are the best to ensure clean water. Nesting contrivances of every kind (cokernut husks, boxes, logs, old hats) may be fixed up in shelter and flight. The floor of the shed should be covered with sand.

A BIRD LOVER.

Money-making with Canaries in the U.S.A.

Sir,—Could any of your readers tell me why British Finches moult a lighter plumage here? Is it because of the high altitude (we are more than a mile above sea level)? I have two Goldies that have moulted nearly white. Their young are natural plumage for the first year, but after the first year they also get lighter. The old pair are four years old, and I have had seven rounds of eggs from them so far, and have raised twenty-three to date. I am unable to do anything with Bullies, but have raised several fine Goldfinch-Canary Mules. My best results are with Canaries, as I rear from 800 to 1,200 per season, so you see it keeps me busy; but it pays well, as it nets me from 1,600 to 2,400 dollars per year.

The Breeding of Chaffinches in an Aviary.

Results of Interesting Experiments.

Sir,—Seeing a letter under the above heading in your interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS, I write to let you know that early in June last year I had a pair of Chaffinches which built a nest in a white earthenware nest pan placed in the centre division of a good-sized Crystal Palace aviary which stood on a table in our morning room window. The hen laid four eggs in the nest and sat as tight as a Canary. Two young were hatched, another chick was dead in shell, and the fourth egg clear. As soon as the first chick hatched out, which was midday of the fourteenth day from start of sitting, the hen picked it up in her beak and flew with it to the seed box. She then deposited it on the floor of the cage, took some seed, and returned to her nest, leaving the young chick on the floor. I picked it up and put it under a Canary, but she was a bad feeder and starved it. The next morning early I was in the morning room, but unfortunately not early enough, as the second young one was out on the cage floor dead. The mother was a Canary-reared Chaffinch, and the cock bird I have had in my possession since 1904, so that he must be turned eight years old. He is again this spring in first-rate breeding condition, so I have tried him with two different Canary hens. The first one used to keep as far away from him as she could, and as she was young and inexperienced, I took her away and gave him a large yellow Norwich hen for partner. He made a great fuss of her at first, and they appeared for half a day to be getting on famously. She started to build her nest, but, alas! by evening of the first day, whilst I was out of the room, he nearly scalped her, so, of course, there was a separation. The aforesaid Chaffie hen now is paired to a cock British Goldfinch, who has proved a most attentive partner, feeding the hen whilst she sits on her eggs and singing and swaggering himself about as if very proud of himself. I had great hopes of getting a Hybrid from this pair, but two days have passed beyond the proper time without any successful result from the first two eggs. I consider she has two more days to sit before I give up hope, as I do not interfere with her eggs after she starts laying. This pair is in the smaller division of same aviary, and the nest this time is in a wooden nest box. As we have a nest of a pair of wild Chaffies in our garden, quite close to the house (it is built between a rose tree and honeysuckle climbing together up the pillar of the pergola), I found one young hatched this morning, which I have carefully extracted and placed, as an experiment, in the nest of my Chaffie and Goldie to see if she would feed it. When she left the nest I popped the young wild one in, and the broken egg shell on side of nest, and am delighted to say she is feeding the young one well all the day, and the Goldie is stuffing her.

Can the Fronts of Breeding Cages be Improved?

The Views of a Member of Cage Birds League.

Sir,—Being about one of the first members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, I have watched its steady progress from the commencement to a great success indeed. The paragraph in last week's issue desiring all members and new beginners to look well after their feathered pets is excellent, and I should like to also give the same advice. Respecting the matter of keeping them clean, I have thought a great many years that there is a great opening for an improvement in the wire fronts of breeding cages, both for Canaries and British. I should myself like the cages out more often than they are done, but I generally feel a little backward owing to the trouble, so to speak, with the wire fronts, taking out and refitting them. I think the whole front of a cage could be much improved, and made easy to manipulate, say, for example, with a full slot hinge, so that the whole front could be easily opened, like the lid of any box, etc., and replaced, to fasten with a suitable catch. I feel sure it would make the cleaning out and re-lining, etc., a greater pleasure. There are many ways, no doubt, already with cage fronts, but as yet not one to my satisfaction, and I do think there is an opening for an improvement in that direction. My best wishes are with all members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Great credit is due to Mr. Fulljames for his efforts and his interest in so vast a combination at home and abroad. Let us all give him our best possible assistance, as opportunity comes our way.

Store Cages and Clap Nets.

Sir,—In thanking Mr. E. Telson for his kind information re store cages, etc., might I ask him how he would use 9-yard nets? I only catch for amusement, and the Linnet is a favourite of mine. How many call birds, number of brace birds, and if Chaffinches will drop in the nets, as I am afraid I should not have a cock Chaffinch in song in the autumn. Can he give me any information on pegging Chaffinches? When does it commence and finish?

E. GRANTHAM.

The Fixing of Limed Twigs on Hedge-rows.

Sir,—Respecting sockets for limed twigs, to fit on the hedge. I enclose two twigs, the best that any one can give you. These twigs are just the right sort for small birds. Put them on the hedge at a nice angle so the bird's wing will strike the twig when it begins to flutter. Do not put them too tightly on to the hedge; just have them so as they will fall when the bird begins to flutter. If the twig is too tight on the hedge and the bird rises straight up, it will only leave two or three feathers and get off, while if your twig is not too tight it will fall with the bird, and when the twig falls with the bird it always strikes it on the wing, then you have the bird safe.

The Clashing of Shows.

A Federation of Societies for South Wales and Monmouth Formed.

Sir,—The much-talked-of meeting came off at Swansea on Whit Monday for forming a federation of societies in South Wales and Monmouth, for the purpose of the prevention of the clashing of shows and other important reforms. It was unanimously decided to form the Federation. There were seventeen delegates present, and all were enthusiastic and unanimous in such formation. Mr. Longden (Swansea C.B.S.) was appointed chairman for the year, and Mr. Gordon M. Lucas, 48, Nosser Street, Maisycoed, Pontypridd, was appointed secretary. All the sections were represented at the meeting, which speaks well for the future working of this important body. A committee of seven were appointed, namely: Messrs. W. J. Davies (Treharris), F. C. Williams (Swansea), A. Guppy (Cardiff), E. James (Treorchy), Bevan (Mumbles), S. Gascoigne (Llanelly), and S. George (Swansea). This committee will meet at the Victoria Hotel, Pontypridd, on June 15, at 4.30, to draft rules, etc. Societies are earnestly invited to become affiliated to the Federation and send representatives to the meeting at Pontypridd, where they will be able to hear of the intentions and advantages to be gained by being affiliated. The meeting at Swansea was, no doubt, the most important to societies ever held in Wales, and the results should be far reaching and advantageous. Dates fixed by societies were given, and we noticed that two societies held their shows on the same date: Penrhrweeiber and Swansea Mixed, but as these societies were not represented, nothing could be done to try to prevent what must prove disastrous. These societies have no one to blame but themselves, and we were sorry their representatives were not present, as no doubt if they were an understanding could have been arrived at. Thus the first chance of doing some good by this Fed. was neglected by the indifference of these societies. We are therefore extremely sorry that they should not have taken advantage of what we consider a very important meeting.

The One Book Absolutely Indispensable to Bird-keepers is

IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season: an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character: Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A noted fancier says of this book, "It makes bird-breeding easy."

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

First Feather Shows will soon be in full swing, and many of these interesting events will result in a financial loss through outside fanciers not being acquainted with THE DATE AND PLACE OF HOLDING THE SHOW.

In order to aid Societies holding F.F. Shows to secure a large attendance of visitors, we are prepared to ADVERTISE THEM UNDER A SPECIAL HEADING AT LOW RATES.

For 6d. per Insertion we will publish the date of show; place of holding; and the Secretary's name and address.

For 1/- per Insertion we will publish, in addition to the above, the time the show is open; the price of admission; and print the name of the Society and the Secretary's name and address in black type.

This publicity will be valuable, and to encourage it we will give SPECIAL PRIZES.

For every 5/- spent in advertising F. F. Shows we will give a Special Prize of a magnificently mounted coloured plate that will last a lifetime.

Societies taking advantage of this offer will ensure financially successful

Hybrids with Alien Parents.

Sir,—I agree that Mr. T. Bowler's suggestion would assist, could we get a correct solution as to what is a Hybrid and what is a Mule. I have heard so many differ on these two points that I now feel the time has arrived when it should be thoroughly thrashed out, and I now ask one or two of our leading judges to kindly explain, and that all judges shall abide by their decision. We see a class provided, viz., "Mule, any variety," and find two or three Hybrids entered and accepted to compete, and some of our well-known fanciers say this "Mule, any variety," class includes all crosses. More often than not, show officials provide two or three of these classes, not really considering what crosses they are catering for, and a great number, to my belief, are judged on these lines. Possibly time will not permit the comparing of the accepted entries with the classes; but where does the exhibitor come in under these conditions? I note on the frontispiece of a recent issue two noted Canary Hybrids. If this distinction was mentioned, I see no fear of all classes getting filled, as I maintain there are good specimens of Canary Mules ofttimes kept at home through the owner seeing that he cannot hope to do more than just get in the tickets under the conditions already mentioned. I take it this correspondence ought to clear up what is, to my mind, great dissatisfaction among the exhibitors of Canary-Goldfinch (British) mules and British Hybrids. I endorse Mr. Morris's remarks, as from his previous writings I believe him to be practical on the Hybrid problem.

A "Balloon" Canary.

Sir,—I have been a breeder of Scotch Fancy Canaries and Yorkshires for the last twenty years and a reader of your most valuable and interesting paper, but in all those years' experience I have never come across what I term a "Balloon" Canary, and should like to hear if ever anyone has had the same experience, and if they can account for such a freak. Yorkshires are my fancy just now, and having paired a yellow cock and buff hen, three eggs were laid, and all hatched. The young did well till the fourth day, when one died; the other two did well for six days, then one of them got a little dark in colour, but was being fed all right. It seemed to go back; then it revived again, but never looked like getting any larger. The feathers commenced to burst out all right until the ninth day. In the morning it was all right and had been newly fed, but to my astonishment at one o'clock in the afternoon, when looking at them in the nest, the bird was blown up from the back of the head to the root of the tail. It looked like a little "balloon." The bird lived till the following afternoon, but never was able to open its mouth. On holding it up to a strong sunshine you could see right through it. Its mate is now on the perch and doing well. I have taken the liberty of sending it to you for inspection. I have shown it to a few fanciers, who are all surprised, and have never seen the like before. I am feeding on egg, boiled rape, sponge biscuit, and crushed hemp, with plain canary in seed box.

H. R. MACMILLAN.

BONNYRIGG C.B.S.

Meeting held Foresters' Arms, May 25. Mr. Alex Jardine, President, in the chair. Classification for First Feather show was gone into, and it was agreed to have two classes for Scotch Fancy, two for Bred., two for Nor., and a Mule class; entries to be in, if possible, by 29th June.—Jas. Hamilton, Sec.

GATESHEAD C.B.A.

Committee meeting, May 22. Arrangements for Nest Feather show, date later. Decided to have egg food making competition for members, for which Mr. R. Tinkale will give a medal. Mr. Lindale made reference to the death of the late Mr. T. Taylor, and it was decided to confirm the Secretary's action in sending a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Taylor.—J. Lavison.

ARDWICK AND MANCHESTER DIST. C.B.A.

General meeting held May 21. Mr. W. Robinson presided over a fair attendance of members. Mr. A. E. Long gave a paper on Foreign Birds, dealing with the various kinds of Humming Birds, Hornbills, Toucans, Scarlet Tanagers, Hoopoes, etc., describing the construction of nests, number and markings of eggs, feeding, and the general management of each variety. Many useful hints were given as to the conditioning of the birds. Afterwards many questions were asked Mr. Long, and answered in a very straightforward way. A very interesting night was brought to a close by a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, Mr. Long replying, also promising to give us a paper later on the most popular varieties of our British Birds.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (OPEN DERBY) O.A.

McClure (Glasgow), R. Thom., C. Wood, J. Maxwell (Dundee), T. Brown (Duns), J. Farquhar (Musselburgh), J. Gladstone (Spittal), J. Morrison (Helensburgh), W. Rodgers (Colinton), W. Thornton (Blackhall), W. Wilson (Portobello), A. Allardice (Wishaw), R. Wright (Greenock). We publish our final list of new members at an early date. Will fanciers please oblige by accounting for tickets in their possession? A number of old members have not yet responded, and we make a special appeal to them to again add their names to our roll.—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Cairns Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, May 21, Mr. J. Charlton presiding over a fair attendance. Messrs. John Hardie, Geo. Wilson and Jas. Reid were proposed and admitted as new members. The following well-known judges have been appointed for the annual show, Dec. 7: Nor., Mr. J. Holmes, Edinburgh; Bord., Mr. Henry Bennett, Kelso; Scotch Fancy, Mr. John Dalgleish, Edinburgh; Brit. and Fer., Mr. R. Bald, Bathgate. President Charlton gave his report as delegate to Scottish National smoker. Classification of First Feather show, July 13, at 3 p.m., was fully discussed. Decided, to have thirteen classes. Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). Admission tickets 2d. each. Chairman pointed out that this was question night; about 12 questions were written and put in the hat, which the members themselves answered, causing great merriment and instruction. Annual subscriptions are now overdue.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

DENTON C.B.S.

An Interesting Lecture on Norwich.

Meeting, May 13th. A lecture was given by Mr. Robinson (Manchester), on the Norwich Canary. A pretty fair number of fanciers were present, and some very good tips were learned by all. Mr. Robinson said the Norwich Canary that is winning at present is not what he likes. They are more like Lancashires; they are too long, and going away from the Norwich altogether. Mr. Robinson advised the Buffinch type. In choosing birds, he said, get a cock as big as possible, good half-inch rise above the eye, that is one of the main points; also go for quality and size. Hen: Typical bird, not big, nice pipy tail, not too much feather. It is type that is wanted, not feather. What feather there is should be silky. He strongly believes in double buffing. He is breeding at present off cocks and hen the parents of which were double buffs. Get birds with little feather, it gives wedging. He doesn't believe in double yellow; double yellow leucthens the feather, double buff widens the feather. He had bred clear yellow from double buffs. In double buffs more buffs result than yellows. You must have green blood before double buffing. The birds you select for double buffing must have hardly any feather. Don't inbreed, especially if you are a novice. A novice generally goes too far. If we do too much inbreeding we are sure to lose all. Inbreeding, too far, will prove fatal. If inbreeding at all do away with the ino ting, and you will not lose colour. Whatever you do don't double buff with inbred birds, or you lose both colour and blood. When you go to a room to buy, buy what you go for, not what they want you to have. You don't want Lancashires, but the real Norwich type, and go in for it. The type is sure to come back again. It is not Norwich they are breeding for nowadays. Get birds with good stout necks and good round bodies. Don't forget the half-inch rise above the eye. Remedy for moulting hens: Get yolk of egg and put damp it, and feed the young brood about half per day; at the same time put a little common salt in the hen's drinking water. It will throw her off her broodiness. Then no doubt she will turn her attentions to feeding. For hand feeding turn the nib of a pen, and it will answer as a good spoon. The last thing at night Mr. Robinson always gives milk sop, or rice pudding, so that their throats are full the last thing. He has great faith in rice pudding, both for young and old. All the young have left the nest he always mixes his egg food rather sloppy. If you have a bird with rasping diarrhœa give cold tea, and feed white millet and put it in the egg food. Don't give young birds water till about eight weeks old; then put tincture of gentian in the water. When young are in the flight get equal parts of Italian meal, white millet, and German rape, ground together in a mill, and give them a little daily. It is a good thing to keep their bowels open Spratts' cod liver oil food is good for the young after they have left their parents. They may be hurried up on mealing till time comes for colour feeding. For colour feeding he used Fox's granulated biscuits and colour food (one part cod, quarter part hot pepper). Maw seed is a good pick-me-up, but young birds generally eat too much. To stop inflammation make the food sloppy, and put a pinch of cayenne pepper in it, also a pinch of salt, and a bit of sugar in egg-food. For green-food give dandelion two days, then chickweed and watercress. Don't forget to give a pinch of cayenne pepper. After the breeding is over clean all breeders well out with paraffin oil, and common salt. Put pitch-pine sawdust in the bottom of cages, and screen your windows before the moult gets going. When you are colour feeding take away seed till they have eaten up. At the end of the moult give a piece of cabbage leaf to clear their bowels. If you find any youngsters with slipped heels the best remedy is to paint the foot with tincture of arnica. Areca powder is a fine thing for worms. If you get your birds on cod liver oil food early in February you will have no trouble to bring them in condition for the breeding time. Several questions were asked and very satisfactory answers were given. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Robinson was proposed by Mr. Walker, and seconded by W. Howard. Decided to have a first feather show the second Saturday in July. Mr. Robinson, judge; hoping all members and friends who were unable to attend last meeting will make a note of same.—W. Hopwood, Sec.

ROSSENDALE C.B.F.S.

Committee meeting held at Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads, May 21, Mr. Heys presiding. Arrangements were made for Mr. L. E. Watkins to give us a lecture on the Roller on June 4, at 7.30. Members and the general public have a hearty invitation to attend.—Ingham Taylor, hon. sec.

NOTTINGHAM AND NOTTS O.S.

Meeting held June 15th, at Mechanics' Institute, R. Rhodes, Esq., in the chair. Decided to hold a nest feather show July 6th, in the above-mentioned hall. A well-lighted room has been secured, and we trust all members will do their utmost to make it a success. Points will count at this show for specials to be awarded at a later show. Will all members try to attend our next meeting June 11th, to fix up schedule, judges, and points competition? Three new members were elected, and another proposed. All fanciers should join the society now to enable them to exhibit at this show. Subscriptions are now due, and should be paid to the sec.—J. G. Royce, Assist.-Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER CANARY CLUB.

Monthly meeting Old Bear's Head, Corporation Street, Manchester, May 25th. A good muster of members was present: Mr. G. Wareing (Bury) was in the chair. Decided, to give patronage to the Wigan Roller Society. A members' show was decided upon, and arrangements will be notified later. The annual contest will be held at the Old Bear's Head, Manchester, on Jan. 17 and 18 next. Also decided, to engage a German judge for next annual contest. After ordinary business, Mr. Massey (Bolton) gave a lecture on the "Training of the Roller Canary," and, during the course of it, gave some very valuable and instructive hints. A large number of questions were asked and ably answered by Mr. Massey, who was thanked for his lecture.—Andrew Percival, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Council meeting, May 25, at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. F. Armstrong, President, in the chair. A member of Hebden Bridge and Calder Valley was reported to the Union for non-payment of his subscriptions, and the Council decided to suspend from the Union until such time as he pays all dues and demands to the Society. Mr. W. Errington having offered four valuable prizes to members of the Union who gain most points at Union shows with birds fed on his XL colour-food, the Council accepted this offer with thanks. Letters from P. Illingworth, Esq., M.P., and J. M. Robertson, Esq., M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, in respect to a claim for loss of birds in transit to Ireland, were read to the meeting, and these giving little hope of a successful issue being achieved in the case, the Council decided to go no further in the matter. The only safeguard which fanciers seem to have in sending birds away, is to insure them against loss or damage in transit. Mr. P. Jowett, of Gt. Horton, having applied for reinstatement as a novice, he having previously taken a 1st prize in a Small Linnet class, the Council decided to reinstate him as a novice. Sandy Lane applied for permission to withdraw from holding an open show this year, and this was granted on condition that they pay their share of judges' fees, this method allowing them to retain the same date for their show another year. Messrs. L. Dykes, E. Clegg, W. Hellas, A. Brown, J. W. Kaberry, H. C. Crossley, and W. Wharton were elected as the sub-committee for the ensuing year. The question of four gold medals for the intermediate competition was disposed of by the majority of societies deciding that the medals should be given to the amateurs, all members of the Union who have not won more than three first prizes in open competition being eligible to compete for same. The majority of societies were also in favour of all financial questions being left off the ballot paper, and that any recommendations of a financial nature should be dealt with in Committee, the sub-committee to be subservient to the Council on all questions of finance. It was decided that equal tenders be obtained for the printing of Union handbooks, and the following firms were nominated. Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodhouse, Messrs. Brown, L. Hodgson, and Fur and Feather. Societies holding an open show would greatly oblige by arranging their schedules for insertion in the Union Handbook, as soon as the specialist clubs have granted patronage. Will the secretary of Spen Valley kindly communicate with the Union Secretary as soon as possible.—H. Hill, Secretary.

A Brief for the Bonnie Border Fancy.

By H. STEPHENS (Forest Gate).

Birds that go well through their first moult generally turn out strong hardy birds, whilst those in which the moult is prolonged have not the same stamina.

When the birds are through the moult it will be necessary to weed out those that you do not wish to keep, and an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS will soon find you a purchaser of your surplus stock. A point I would emphasize is that no birds should be sold until they have completed their first moult. It is not fair to the purchasers, who in many cases buy the birds for songsters, and having made no study whatever of the birds, are not acquainted with the management necessary during this most trying time of a bird's life.

Getting Birds Ready for the Show.

Now if you purpose showing, your birds must be accustomed to the show cage. This can easily be accomplished by training them to run in and out from the time they leave their parents. The show cage for Borders, used by the members of the Border Fancy C.C. is an all-black enamelled one, 14 inches long by 5¼ inches wide, by 9¾ inches high at each end, with dome reaching to height of 11½ inches over the centre of length.

About a week before the birds are sent to the shows they must be washed. This is the most ticklish job the young fancier has to undertake, but if it is tackled with confidence it is a task easily surmounted. We hear of novices getting older fanciers to wash their birds. This is only like half doing the job, and is a mistake. Besides, is it fair to the other novices in competition who wash their own? If one wants to be a full fledged fancier, then he must have self reliance. Let him attend one or two washing competitions in connection with the local society, and then tackle the job himself.

Procure the necessary utensils, viz., three basins, a couple of small sponges, a badger hair shaving brush, a few pieces of clean soft cloth for wrapping the birds in, and a drying cage. A drying cage is easily made by getting a fair sized box, say 20 inches by 10 inches, by 8 inches, knocking out the bottom, and substituting a piece of flannel stretched across, and then fixing two slides to allow a piece of glass to slide in and out where the lid would have been. Cut a door in the top (late side of box), for putting the birds in, and one in the end so as to run the birds out when ready without handling them. Commence with a bird of small value, and with a little practice you will become an adept at the art.

How to Wash the Bird.

After you have everything ready, your warm water in the three basins, and soap worked into a lather, take hold of the bird to be washed firmly between the thumb and first finger, with the body and tail over the palm of the hand. Soak it well with the water from No. 1 basin, and then lather it from the back of the neck downwards to the tail, taking care to use the brush the way of the feathers. Spread one wing over the thumb and well wash it, and then the other over the third and fourth fingers. By letting the tail lie in the palm of the hand, running up the wrist, it can be easily washed. Now turn the bird over and proceed the same way down its front. Lastly, do the head, being careful to get all the dirt from the bird's nostrils, and don't brush across the neck feathers unless you want a "bearded Canary."

You will find the bird dislikes its head washed very much, especially when the soap gets into its nose and eyes, so the quicker it is done consistent with thoroughness the better. Then rinse the bird well with water from No. 2 basin and lastly well rinse with clear water from No. 3 basin over No. 2. By this method the last water (No. 3) is always kept clean.

Wrap the bird in one of the pieces of cloth, letting the air get to its head, and put it in front of the fire with head farthest away. In about ten minutes' time, when the bird has a little more life in it, take it out of the cloth and place it in drying cage which you have placed in front of the fire with the flannel side facing it. A candle placed at the glass side of the cage lightens up the cage and the bird in a very short time commences preening itself. When it is fairly dry run it into the clean cage ready for it.

How much more satisfied is a fancier when his first prize winner is a bird he has bred moulted and washed himself. The way to achieve success is by judicious pairing to establish a good strain and aiming persistently at producing the ideal bird, giving the birds proper attention and remembering that cleanliness is a true essential.

No. 594.
An Easy Way to Grate Hard-Boiled Eggs.

Sent in by C. J. Munday, 37, Leat Street, Tiverton, Devon.

If a perforated zinc grater is used for mincing the egg and bread, it is a good deal of "fag" to rub the ingredients through the small holes in the zinc. A much quicker and easier method is to make a small box frame with neither bottom nor top to it, about half the size of the zinc in the grater. Next cut a piece of wood to fit slackly in the frame, as sketch. Now put the frame on the top of the zinc, and put your egg, cut in quarters (or as much as convenient for the size of the frame at a time), in the frame. Put the piece of wood on the top of the egg, and press fairly hard with the forefinger, at the same time rubbing about the frame on the top of the zinc. It will be found that the egg will be rubbed through in a very short time and much more easily as well.—C. J. Munday.

No. 595.
A Neat Perch-Holder.

Sent in by E. James, 13, Lord Street, Earlestown, Lancashire.

The following idea will be found very useful to secure perches to the backs of breeding and box cages, and will allow them to be taken out easily for cleaning purposes. Bend a piece of wire like A, then solder a cross piece to this at B, about ¼in. from C. Make holes in back of cage where perches are required, push holder up to cross piece, then bend the wire at back, and the holder is fast and secure. A groove must be made in the end of the perch to go on the holder, also one for front.—E. James.

HUNWICK LANE ENDS (Durham).

Singing held May 27th at the Helmington Inn: 34 birds competed, and some extra good birds were sung. Everything went well, and not a grumble was heard. Results: 1st and 2nd divided between Franks and Newcastle; 3rd, Franks; 4th, Bailes. Judge, Mr. Joe Gardener; sec., Mr. Lee. After the contest a grand concert was given by the fanciers, and a pleasant evening was spent by all. Fanciers, don't forget the contest on June 1st at Witton Gilbert, £2 cash given.—G. Reed.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

Linnet singing held Northumberland Arms, May 25th, when Mr. Hancock gave three valuable prizes. Thirty-one birds competed, and some very good singing was heard. 1st, J. Briggs; 2nd, Gilbray; 3rd, Welch. Judge, Mr. J. Robson; timekeeper, F. Wilkinson.

LANCASHIRE AFFILIATION L.C.

Affiliated Linnet contest at Blackburn; 54 birds entered, and some very good singing was done. The record for time singing was well broken by Mr. Poole's bird, which did 315 secs. out of a possible 330, and according to the judges sang the full 5½ minutes. There was another record in the entry of 54 birds. After the contest the secretary put before the members the application of Westhoughton Club to get a date for a contest. Two dates were fixed, June 8th, and in August, if they agree to the terms. Will members of the affiliation kindly note that the last affiliated contest is held at the Queen's Arms, Atherton, June 1st, when the secretary will settle with all clubs re the guarantee, and elect officers for next season. All clubs must send five birds to this contest or forfeit all monies held by the Affiliation.—J. McAllister, Sec.

Fanciers Enjoying the Country.

BIRD LIFE AROUND DONCASTER AND DISTRICT.

Members of the Doncaster and Dis. C.B.S. had an enjoyable ramble on May 19, Potterie Carr being selected. The weather was ideal for the occasion, and the party was guided by our old friend, Mr. T. Truman. It was soon evident we were to receive a great surprise, for we found bird life in abundance and breeding in full swing. In one hour's nesting observation we were able to account for thirty-five nests and twenty youngsters, including Chaffinches, Greenfinches, Linnets, Whitethroats, Blackbirds, Thrushes, Wrens, and a Partridge, returning home after a delightful outing. We should be pleased to be accompanied by other fanciers and friends in the district on our next ramble, June 2; the district chosen is Wadworth and neighbourhood, starting from the Clock at 1.30 and Balby Terminus at 2 p.m.—G. Bescoby secretary.

LEITH O.S. SEE WILD BIRDS RUNG.

Eighteen members, accompanied by a few friends of the above society, journeyed to Musselburgh on May 25 to enjoy an afternoon in the country. They left the society's headquarters at three o'clock in two brakes, going by Seafield and along by the side of the "silvery sea," passing the Marine Garden on the left, and on through Portobello, passing by the way the genial Mr. Matthews, who was standing in his shop door. We soon reached Musselburgh Bridge, where we were met by Mr. John Allan, who was doing the journey on his "bike," and he showed us the way to the estate which we were privileged to see over, about three miles outside the town. Mr. Sykes had preceded us on the road, and we picked him up about 100 yards from the estate entrance, where we left the brakes and commenced the ramble proper. Entering by the lodge gate, we were joined by the lodge-keeper who was to conduct us over the grounds. We had also the privilege of the company of Mr. Steele, of Dalkeith, the well-known expert on British birds, who was there on behalf of Aberdeen University. We were not long in finding a nest of Greenfinches with young about eight days old. Only one bird was rung here. Close by was a Pheasant sitting on a clutch of eggs, and although the company was standing within one yard of it, it never showed the least sign of fear. The next nest found was also a Greenie's with three young, which were all rung by Mr. Steele. A nest belonging to an Oxeye Tit was found inside an old stone cannon ball, the entrance being so small that a penny completely covered it. A Spotted Flycatcher's egg was here shown to the company. We had here a grand view of the mansion house, which is a handsome structure built in the old baronial style and very old. On the lawn in front were a lot of Mandarin Ducks, and they looked very pretty basking in the bright sunshine. Striding like a sentinel among them was a Crane. Somebody suggested that Mr. Steele should ring its leg, but someone whispered "Neck!" The party were shown an interesting gardening feat, it being the grafting of a mistletoe branch with a pear tree. A Robin's nest was the next found, with young; the nest was very artfully concealed on the side of a tree. A Mavis was next found, with four young about ten days old; the ringing process was here executed again. A Willow Warbler's nest with six eggs was also found. We next were privileged to visit a part of the well-laid-out gardens, and standing here and there were a lot of clay figures, which looked very comical. At this juncture a halt was called and a council of war held, as time was getting on, to see how much further we should go, when it was decided that we might visit the old entrenchments made by the English before the battle of Pinkie on Sept. 10, 1547, and afterwards made use of by Mary Queen of Scots on June 15, 1567, a stone marking the spot where Queen Mary surrendered. Afterwards, in companies of threes and fours, we started on our three miles walk back to Musselburgh Arms, where we spent a social hour in song and story, and before leaving, hearty votes of thanks were accorded to Mr. Sykes, Mr. Steele, and Mr. Whitelaw for their kindness in conducting the party. The outing all over was voted a complete success, and it was suggested to have another at an early date, of which due intimation will be given in the Fancy Press.—Geo. Brown, sec.

LEYTON C.B.A. VISITS EPPING FOREST.

The above association went for their annual ramble on Saturday, May 18. The main party assembled at Loughton Station at three o'clock. After waiting for several trains, which brought a few late-comers, a start was made at 3.30. We were not long before we were right among the birds. The first call was for two Herons, which were seen flying overhead. Soon after a Blackbird's nest was spied, with the old bird on, and several Blackbirds' and Thrushes' nests were found in quick succession. The next find was very interesting—a nest of four Chaffinches about eight or nine days old, and as we had Mr. Talbot, the photographer, with us, the accompanying photo was taken. Scarcely more than a dozen yards away a Linnet's nest with four eggs was found, and this also was photographed. The next find was a Bullfinch's nest with two eggs. Soon after this a nest was seen high up in the fork of a tree, which looked like a large bundle with a hole in the side. Someone remarked that it would want some getting at. "Get out," said Mr. King, and, promptly taking off his coat, commenced to swarm up the straight trunk of the tree without a branch to get hold of for at least fifteen feet up. When he arrived at the nest, it was only to find it empty, although it had been occupied quite recently. Several more Chaffinch nests were found, one with three young about the same age as those photographed, also another Linnet's nest with two eggs. We tried hard to find a Whitethroat's nest, but were not successful, only finding old ones. This is the first year we have not found this variety. As feeding time was getting near, we now made straight tracks for the "Owl," where we were met by several other members and friends, including our worthy president, Mr. S. C. Rhodes, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Clarke. After the photographer's business was over, we all adjourned to the large hall at the rear of the "Owl," to do justice to the good fare provided by the hostess, Mrs. Langdon, while her daughters Miss Grace and Miss Hilda attended to the table most diligently. The feeding being over, we next turned to jollification; songs were given by Miss Grace Langdon, Miss Hellens, Mr. W. Hellens, "Phil Carr's Comedy Boys," who came over specially to entertain, Mr. Talbot, Mr. Pettet, and several others whose names we did not catch, including some friends of Mrs. Langdon. In moving a vote of thanks to the artistes, our president, who occupied the chair, remarked that he knew everyone present would be sorry to hear that our old friend, Mr. C. R. Carr, was prevented from joining the ramble through illness, and requested his son, Mr. Phil Carr, to convey to him our sympathy, and wished him a speedy recovery. A vote of thanks was given to the organisers of the ramble, Mr. J. S. Clarke and Messrs. Forse and Son, to which Mr. Clarke suitably responded. A vote of thanks to the chairman then closed one of the most enjoyable evenings we have ever spent. On the way to Loughton Station we heard the Gales singing lustily.—Forse and Son, hon. secs.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A. HAS A GOOD TIME.

Annual ramble, May 19, when the following fanciers formed a merry party:—Messrs. A. Flook, G. Pinyoun, E. Holley, C. Pearson, W. Swaysland, D. Dean, A. Bignell, A. Goble, R. C. Gibb, F. Dandridge, A. Plummer, E. Cadman, W. Cadman, and Will H. Gibb, hon. sec. We took train to Barcombe, and under the guidance of Mr. O. Plummer strolled to Littleworth, Kernals Bank, and via Cinder Hill to the Five Bells, Chorley, where a substantial spread awaited us. After dinner, Mr. W. Swaysland, in the chair, thanked Messrs. O. Plummer and C. Pearson, who had charge of the arrangements, and expressed the wish that these rambles would become an annual affair, as they tended to increase the friendship and good feeling between members, as well as providing interesting studies of nature. (Applause.) Messrs. Pearson and Plummer responded, and after facing the camera we started for Marstakes Common, where we rambled at will. Later we set out for Lewes via Beveridge, Hamsey, Cooksbridge, and Offam, and caught the 5.30 train to Brighton, having had a most enjoyable day. The following were amongst the finds recorded:—Greenfinches—twelve nests in one hedgerow; Chiff Chaffs—three nests with five young in two and eggs; Lesser Whitethroat—one nest of five eggs; Whitethroat—two nests with five young and three young; Chaffinch—six nests, two with young; Hedge Sparrows—four nests, one with four young; Wood Pigeons—one nest with two young; Nightingale—one nest, three eggs; Blackbirds—many with eggs, one just hatching, hens refusing to leave; Robin—two nests in tree stump, with eggs; Thrush—several with eggs, one with young; Wrens—many nests, but no eggs; Missel Thrush—one nest of three young nearly fledged; Bullfinch—three nests of five eggs; Linnets—three nests, one with eggs. Birds seen included Green Woodpecker, Lapwing, Long Tail Tits, Yellow Bunting, Blue Tits, Red Back Shrike, Spotted Fly Catcher, flock of Wood Pigeons, and Cuckoo. Birds heard: Cuckoo, Nightingale, Black Cap, Goldfinches.—Will H. Gibb, hon. sec.

The Young Naturalist.

*Peter's Pet.

A miser named Peter had a tame Jackdaw, of which he was very fond. Fearing he might be robbed, he hid his gold in tarpaulin bags in his fierce watch-dog's kennel. The Jackdaw and the dog were great friends, and finding a slit is one of the bags the Jackdaw extracted all the gold. The old man had a fright on finding the bag empty, but turning an old cucumber frame over some days later he found all the gold buried in the soil, so the bird had to go into a cage for his home again.—Copied and sent by Wm. Sharples (age 15), 16, Dixon Street, Waterhead, Oldham.

*How a Magpie Made a Nuisance of Himself.

Just outside a house a Magpie lived in a cage, and round the corner a cab rank was stationed. Now the Magpie had learnt how to whistle like a cab whistle, and every now and again the bird would give the cab whistle, and the drivers used to race round there to be first, but they were very puzzled when they could not see anyone blowing the whistle.—Taken from the "Children's Encyclopædia," and sent by F. L. McCreary (age 14), 11, Harlescott Road, Waverley Park, S.E.

The Clever Parrot.

I was on a visit to my cousin's house this Easter. They have a fine Grey Parrot, which was brought to them from West Africa. When I knocked at the door a voice called "Come in," and of course I walked in. There was no one in the kitchen, only the Parrot, and when it saw me it said "Hullo, Jacko," and then it laughed. I think it is a very laughable Parrot. It calls it "Jacko," and says "Come on, Jacko," and also laughs and imitates anyone with a very bad cough. He is a beautiful whistler. He says "Whistle for Chaaa Jacko," which is the little native girl's name to whom he belonged before being brought here. He has a pot egg in his cage. He holds it in his foot and talks to it; indeed, it is laughable to hear him.—Sent by Ernest Walker (age 9), 90, Southport Road, Ormskirk.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

☛ 14 Days' Free Trial. ☚

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

PLAIN FACTS

about what Foods have done ARE WORTH A DEAL MORE THAN PROMISES

Of what they will do.

A Few Facts Received Recently:—

Alexandria, Egypt, 14/5/12.
Miss B. is very pleased with the prompt way Messrs. Trower and Co. executed the very smallest order.

Torquay, 21/4/12.
Mrs. E. will be much obliged if Messrs. Trower will send her by return 2lb. Cecto. Messrs. T. may be interested to know that Mrs. E. has a Japanese Robin that has been fed on Cecto for years.

West Norwood, 23/4/12.
K. writes:—"I thank you for your letter re Egbisco and for book enclosed, and write to tell you that I had my doubts about being able to successfully rear with this alone, but I have reared two nests, and have others coming on. I shall never return to the traditional Egg and Biscuit. You are at liberty to use this if so desired."

Edinburgh, 23/4/12.
Kindly send me two tins Egbisco Food; there is nothing like it.—A.S.

Malton, 3/5/12.
Your last order gave every satisfaction.—W.C.

Rothesay, 28/4/12.
Please send 1lb. of your famous Cecto, which I have proved to be "the real Mackay." I got a lb. of it a month ago for my Lesser Whitethroat. It has wrought such a miracle on it, it is not the same bird at all.—A. W.

Dublin, 30/5/12.
Please forward immediately to above address a 2/- tin of your Egbisco. I am obtaining very good results from same, and birds feed better with it than with anything else I have used.—C. K

Glasgow, 31/5/12.
I am highly pleased with Cecto.—R. G.

Wainfleet, St. Marys, 4/6/12.
I am sending for another 1/- tin of your grand Egbisco. I have found it the best of food for Canaries, young and old.—T. B.

West Hampstead, 3/6/12.
I am very pleased with all the seed and sand you sent me before. My birds have kept very healthy so far this season.—A. P. P.

Maidenhead, 14/4/12.
I am writing to you, recommending your Bird Food, which they call Softbilo. I picked up a Thrush, and only gave him two packets, when he began to sing, and I have used it ever since. It is one of the best foods for Blackbirds and Thrushes I have ever used, and this is the best singing Thrush I have ever heard. I have recommended your Softbilo to dozens.—E. H.

CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds, 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send posteard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

OUR MEDAL SCHEME EXPLAINED.

The Associate Idea Appreciated.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

A Word re New Membership Conditions.

I have been asked how the new membership terms affect members who have already joined our League. They will not affect them at all. The subscription of existing members will remain the same, namely, one shilling annually. If, however, by reason of the non-payment of their renewal subscription within one month after its having fallen due, they drop out of the LEAGUE, it will cost them two shillings and sixpence to rejoin as new members. This is the only rule which CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has, and I think it will be admitted that it is not an unreasonable one. It would be of course, out of the question to continue to spend money and time in reminding members by post-card that their renewal subscriptions were overdue, and their names will be taken off the books of the LEAGUE if their membership be not renewed within one month from the proper date.

And the Medals.

The idea of granting gold, silver, or bronze medals to societies for competition at their shows is intended to replace last year's method of awarding special prizes up to half the amount of the subscriptions of the whole of the members of the society to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The gold and the silver medals will be suitable for wearing on the watch-chain, and the bronze medals are each in a neat case. It is hoped that the winning of a LEAGUE MEDAL will be the ambition of every member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The competition that will arise should materially benefit the societies which are entitled to offer the medals for competition, for, of course, any member of the LEAGUE will be eligible to compete when they are offered at open shows, whether or not he may be a member of the society holding the show, and a substantial increase in the entrance fees cannot fail to result.

Very many societies, even with their present membership to the League will be entitled to the medals for their next show, and some will have very considerable option as to the class of medals they may offer in their schedule. For instance, the Sheffield O.S., with its forty-four LEAGUE members, is now entitled to one gold, and two silver or bronze, or eight silver and bronze, and these may be offered as specials in any way the society may choose. Even if the paid memberships of a society to the League amount only to five shillings, it will be entitled to one silver or one bronze, and every further five shillings will ensure another one of either kind.

Secretaries of societies should make particular note of our Medal Scheme, and should take care that the medals to which they are entitled are allotted in their schedules to the best advantage of their own society. Members of cage bird societies should bring the matter to the attention of their secretaries, and ask them to see that full advantage is taken of our offer.

I shall be pleased to forward to any secretary a number of our leaflets explaining the Aims and Objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and giving full particulars of terms of membership, etc.

Obituary.

It is with deep regret that I hear of the sad bereavement which has befallen one of the earliest of our members, Mr. E. Bardsley, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the loss of his wife, who has passed away after a long illness, and was interred on May 27th. The sympathy of all LEAGUE members will be extended to Mr. Bardsley in his sorrow.

Associates Joining in Numbers.

It was scarcely to be expected that an immediate result would follow the announcement that it had been decided to establish an Associate body of bird lovers as part of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and it is therefore all the more pleasing to be able to announce that a large number of readers of our organ, CAGE BIRDS, have already obtained the necessary five signatures to the coupons besides their own, and have been enrolled on our Associate List. Practically every Associate joining has accompanied his application with a letter of appreciation. The following letter from Mr. John Moss (Senghenydd) is an example of many.

As a bird-lover and dealer for many years, I take pleasure in sending you the six coupons, duly signed, which will entitle me to be registered as an Associate Member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. A few of us about here are all bird-lovers, and we seldom see anything about our Fancy excepting what we read in our good paper, CAGE BIRDS. I can honestly say that myself and friends have taken CAGE BIRDS from the first number. I have got the promise of all my friends and fellow fanciers to do all they can to forward our hobby to the utmost, and I thank you and the LEAGUE for the splendid offer you are making. I shall be very glad to distribute leaflets or any other literature you may send me.—JOHN MOSS.

Full particulars of "How to become an Associate" will be found in another column, and I hope readers will do all that they can to bring the idea to the notice of their friends.

To Glasgow Readers.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, Local Hon. Sec. to the LEAGUE for Glasgow, has changed his address to 38, McNeil St., South Side. Mr. Stevenson will supply to any applicants our leaflets setting forth the Aims and Objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Mr. W. Ayers, 28, York Street, Jarrow, has been appointed secretary of Jarrow, Hebburn, and Dist. C.B.S.

Mr. C. Bell has been appointed assistant hon. sec. to the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.A., writes Mr. R. B. Wright, the sec.

We have engaged Mr. J. C. Barnes to judge at our open show, Nov 15 and 16, writes Mr. J. M. Mitchell, hon. sec., Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S.

Mr. H. R. Meager, Kelso, North Road, Parkstone, writes that he has been appointed, hon. sec. of the Bournemouth and Dis. C.B.A., in the place of Mr. W. O. Brooke.

Mr. A. Holden (Gateshead) and Mr. J. Stanger (Pelton Fell) have been elected to judge at our open show, Oct. 5, writes Mr. W. Tomlinson, hon. sec., Chopwell C.B.S.

Mr. W. T. Mattinson, 32, Orchard Street, Great Harwood, writes that he has again been appointed secretary of the Great Harwood and Dist. C.B.S. in the place of Mr. A. Bentley.

Owing to the resignation of Mr. D. Holliday, late secretary of the Morley and Dis. C.B.S., all communicants should address letters to Mr. J. Rhodes, sec. pro tem., 75, High Street, Morley, near Leeds.

We have engaged Mr. J. W. Cleminson (Preston) to judge Norwich section, and Mr. E. Brunskill (Southport) for Border section. This makes four judges in all, write Messrs. Metcalf and Deacon, hon. secs., Liverpool O.S.

Manningham C.B.A. ramble to Fewston takes place June 15, writes Mr. H. Grange, sec., 44, Silk Street, Manningham. Meet Manningham Station, 8.10; train to Otley. Fanciers invited. If the weather is fine, the outing will be very enjoyable.

Mr. A. E. Brown, 66, Clare Street, Merthyr Tydfil, sec. of Pentre-bach and Dis. F.S., writes that Mr. George Gardner, of London, will judge the cage bird section. Mr. Gardner is a well-known judge of cage birds, and we hope a good entry will result.

Members of the Northern Yorkshire C.C., please note, writes Mr. Tindall, sec., that the date for the table show has been altered from the 12th to Tuesday, the 11th of June, owing to the original date clashing with the egg-food making competition of the Gateshead and Dis. C.B.S.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers.—Independent Testimony.—CAGE BIRDS Critique on Hybrid Section, Horticultural Hall Show, 1911:—"Dark Goldie (21), 1st, Shellam, magnificent Jonque, ablaze with colour and shining like plate glass. Dark Linuet (18), 1st Shellam, another topper for colour and quality, absolutely red hot, plumago like silk; 2nd and 4th, Pope, two very massive fine-coloured birds in beautiful condition. A.O.V. Dark (26), 1st, McQuiston, one of the best Buff Greenies we have seen, marvel for colour and sheen. Bullfinch Hybrid (9), 1st, Shellam, Canary Bullie, marvellously fiery colour, plumage like silk. A.O.V., 2nd, McQuiston, most charming Goldie Redpoll, beauty for colour and condition; 3rd, Ramsden, gem of a Greenfinch Redpoll, about the best we have seen for colour and quality." All the birds mentioned were colour fed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers, and the entry forms were signed to this effect. To get colour and quality, use only Ramsden's Pure Peppers.—(Advt.).

We are asked to state that Mr. Hy. Wilson (Hetton-le-Hole) has removed to 2, Wynard Street, Dawdon Colliery, Seaham Harbour.

I have removed from Elm Place, Leith, to 69, Dalmeny Street, Leith, writes Mr. J. Allan, sec. of Scottish B.B. and M.C. Secs of shows, please note. Subscriptions are now due.

The second monthly show of the Ilford and County F. and F.S. will ho held June 18 at Santa Claus Hall, Seven Kings, instead of on June 11, as previously arranged, writes Mr. J. H. Priestman, hon. sec.

At Cefnybedd, Breconshire, Mr. T. L. Sheen recently put an old bowler hat on a gooseberry tree in his garden to frighten away the birds. A week later a bird (species not stated) built a nest in the hat, and the mother is now rearing a hatch of six young.

We have received from Mr. W. T. Tulloch (33, Hylton Road, Sunderland) a model of a new style of wire cage front he is now fitting. It is an ingenious idea, the wire front being easily removable and at the same time safe and strong.

Societies who have not already applied, and who are desirous of having the patronage of the Northern Yorkshire C.C., should do so as early as possible to the secretary, Mr. R. Tindale, 141, Stanton Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The Clapham and Dist. C.B.A. annual outing to Ranmore Common is now decided on, writes Mr. Coe, hon. sec. The train leaves Victoria Saturday, June 8, at 9 a.m., and London Bridge (L.B.S.C.R.) at 9.20 a.m. for Boxhill. Meeting place at Railway Hotel, Boxhill.

The programme of members' shows of the Shipley O.S. is to hand from the secretary, Mr. A. Tillotson, 24, Commercial Street. There are to be two first feather shows, each with eleven classes—June 22, Mr. Broadley judge, and July 20, Mr. Sutcliffe. Three old bird shows will be held, with twenty-three classes each, five of these being for novices. Dates and judges:—Nov. 6, Mr. Cowgill; Dec. 11, Mr. Chittenden; Jan. 15, Mr. Mundell.

The first of a series of rambles of the Sheffield O.S. is to be held on Sunday next, June 9, via Wharncliffe and Grenoside Woods, writes Mr. T. Bishop. Arrangements have been made for tea at the Norfolk Arms, Grenoside, at 1s. 3d. each. A hearty invitation is given to all fanciers and friends to join in what promises to be a most delightful outing and enjoyable occasion. The party will leave the Park Hotel, Hillsborough, at two o'clock.

We have received from Mr. T. Stanley (Handsworth) samples of the nut (pine kernels) and biscuit food he is putting upon the market. It strikes us as a very palatable and attractive food, while there is seemingly no question as to its high nutritive value, and Mr. Stanley's own experience goes to show that it is a most reliable food with which to rear young birds; further, it is ready for use, and does not go sour. Those interested in egg substitutes should turn up Mr. Stanley's advertisement.

Mr. G. Lawton, of 159, Werrington Road, Bucknall, writes that he has been elected sec. (pro tem.) for Hanley and Dis. C.B.S. in place of Mr. Llewellyn, who is shortly sailing for Canada. The society is sorry to lose such an ardent and enthusiastic member, and we wish him good luck in his new quarters. Mr. H. Tams, of Longton, has been engaged to judge the first feather show, held July 6. Four open classes have been provided for members of North Staffordshire societies. Schedules may be obtained from any of the members.

A remarkable and instantaneous success has been achieved by "Phosto," the latest food for Canaries and all cage birds. Its merits as a means of ensuring vigorous stock birds, fertile eggs, and strong, healthy young birds, have long been known to, and appreciated by, poultry-breeders. The credit of bringing it to the notice of bird-keepers belongs to Mr. C. E. Silk (of Emsworth), one of our oldest and most respected fanciers and judges. He states that though he was shy at trying "Phosto," he found that after he commenced using it his hens fed better than ever before, he lost no young birds, and that the latter were exceptionally well-nourished and vigorous. He also found that this food assisted the birds through the moult. The testimony of this expert has been fully confirmed by fanciers who have tried "Phosto" since it was advertised in our columns; note this week's advertisement, in which two remarkable letters appear. After reading these, we think all fanciers will be anxious to try "Phosto" in their rooms. Mention CAGE BIRDS when writing to the Phosto Co., Emsworth, Hants., for your supply.

Southern Norwich P.C. Patronage.

Will societies that have not yet applied for patronage kindly do so at once, as the club will be allotting the shows for 1912 by ballot papers this month, writes Mr. F. S. Matthes, hon. sec., 34, Rotherhithe New Road, S.E.

Green-marked Yorks. at the Shows

Societies who have not already applied and who are desirous of having the patronage of the National Green-marked Yorks C.C. at their coming shows, should make application early as possible to the sec., Mr. E. Clegg, Victoria School House, Dewsbury.

A 23-year-old Redpoll.

A Redpoll at Renton, Dumbartonshire, has just died after being confined in a cage for the last twenty-three years. This is considered to be a record in longevity for this species. The lady who kept it vouches for its age from the fact that, on the day on which her daughter was born twenty-three years ago, it was taken from a nest, and had lived in a cage ever since.

A Pure White Wagtail.

For several days past we have seen, quite close to the house, a perfectly white Wagtail with a yellow bill, writes "E. T.," to the "Spectator." It comes with an ordinary Pied Wagtail. It has no black or grey anywhere on it.

Parrots at Liberty.

Winter and summer, daily for the last three years, a Parrot has been visiting this garden several times a day, writes "Curious," of Stoke, Devonport, to the "Cornishman." We place Parrot food for it on the lawn in front of the house, and it evidently appreciates it. (A week or two ago we saw a large green bird, either a Parrot or a Parrakeet, at Killivose, near Truro, says the Editor in a footnote.)

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Records of eggs and young were taken at the meeting of the Paisley, Tannahill O.S., held June 1, writes the sec., Mr. J. Stewart, when nine members reported fifty-nine young and thirty-four eggs under incubation.

Mr. A. J. Notley, sec. of Hetton-le-Hole C.B.S., writes that members are doing very badly, three's and four's being about the usual results. In consequence, the society will not hold a first feather show this season.

Varied Luck at Grantham.

Grantham fanciers are having varied luck in breeding results, writes Mr. W. Ratcliff. Some have one or two very promising youngsters which look like doing well for their owners. The following results are up to last Monday:—Lockton, 15; Allen, 26; Waite, 19; Parsons, 6 Mules, 25 Canaries; Cragg, 3; Turner, 2 Mules, 4 Canaries; Ratcliff, 20; Bond, 14; Ward, 20; Muxlow, 3; Lowther, 3.

Progress at Sunderland.

The following are results of the breeding season for some of our members, writes Mr. J. Jeffery, sec., Sunderland C.B.A.:—Messrs. Swan, 40, comprising Crests, Lancs., Yorks., and Borders; Rawson, 20, Nor.; Copeland, 18, Bor.; Waters, 13 Sihs., 1 Mule; Riseborough, 10 Yorks., 5 Nor., 5 Liz.; Hunt, 3 Nor., 3 Bor.; Smith, 6 Nor.; Pitt, 5 Mules, 1 Nor.; T. Davison, 44 Bor., 2 Yorks., 1 Crest; Peacock, 7 Liz., 18 Bor.; Proctor, 3 Nor.; Graham, 7 Nor. and Yorks.; J. M. Walker, 6 Bor., 2 Yorks.; A. Walker, 7 Bor.

In Nottinghamshire.

Having an hour to spare on Saturday night, writes Mr. Bernard Gabhitass, I thought I might learn something from the birdy men of Sutton. I found a good number of members of the Eastfield Side C.B.S. in the club room at the Masons' Arms, and I had only to mention "birds" when all gave attention. R. Nuttall, the sec. (of Nuttall Bros.) said we have not done very well this year up to now, having only reared five young ones, but are hoping for better luck in the next round. Hall Bros. have four on the sticks; C. Allsopp has twenty-one doing well; S. Wooley, 25; Burton, 4 (an old stager this); S. Hawksley, the sec. of Mansfield C.B.S., has reared 16; Caunt and Keeling, 18; H. Handley, 20 (all Crests); J. S. Norwood, 15; A. Spencer, 20; H. Booth, 9; W. Owen, 14; C. Waldram, 18. This society has a good number of fanciers on their books, totalling 43. The members all work together for the good of the society, and with a little more time they will be at the top of the tree.

'PHOSTO'

THE MARVELLOUS

PHOSPHATIC FOOD

For Canaries and Cage Birds.

TWO RECENT OPINIONS—

May 29th, 1912.

"It has given excellent results. I have had 18 chicks hatched out, and not lost one. The hens commence to feed as soon as the chicks are hatched. Never had such stuff before, and I have been a breeder for six years, and have tried all sorts of food, etc. I have a hen that would not feed her first brood. The second brood I gave her "Phosto," and she is feeding grand. Please forward another tin, for which I enclose 2s. 6d. I would not be without it now.—J. Warwick, 32, High Lever Road, North Kensington."

May 30th, 1912.

"I cannot speak too highly about "Phosto" for Canaries. I now have some 5 weeks old larger than their parents. These have been fed on "Phosto."—H. B. Bambridge, Dental Surgeon, Brixham, Devon."

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR IT.

If he does not yet stock it he very soon will, meantime write direct.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

The Sweetest Songster We Have.

By THOS. JACKSON (Dunfermline).

This Scottish Birdlover considers the Skylark our "sweetest songster," and gives an interesting account of his feathered favourite.

THE Skylark is, in my opinion, the sweetest songster we have got. How grand it is on a summer morning to take a walk into the country and hear him in his natural state. As he rises from the ground he immediately breaks into song and soars upwards until only a very small speck is to be seen, and when coming down he continues his beautiful singing until the ground is reached. Old Larks caught and caged very seldom become free singers, although I have known them come into song the year following their capture. A young Lark taken from the nest and hand-reared becomes, however, the tamest of all our British birds, and, if a cock, he is sure to start singing early after moulting.

Why this Curious Difference?

I have always been a lover of the Lark, and generally keep one or more, and last year I had the pleasure of getting two out of the same nest, and both have turned out to be cocks. I selected the two biggest birds in the nest; this guess at the sex proved correct, and they turned out beauties. Both were very light when I took them, but, after moulting, one has turned out to be the blackest Lark I have ever seen—the same opinion being expressed by local fanciers who have had a look at him. Fanciers denounce hemp seed as a feather darkener, but the young birds I possess moulted differently under the same feeding conditions—the one very light and the other black. I fed them on ground hemp seed and a well-known packet soft-bill food, and I gave them plenty of sand to dust in, and a fresh piece of turf as often as it could be got. For an old bird, the same method of feeding, with such additions as ants' eggs, dried flies, a small piece of minced meat, and any small worms he may find in the turf, will keep him in splendid condition. A good supply of sand is necessary for him to properly attend to his toilet, although I find he prefers ashes, which can be given occasionally.

Outward Guides to the Sex.

Regarding the sex, a variety of points go to determine the cock from the hen, and the following will serve as a fairly safe guide: The male is always the bigger bird in every way, especially in the length and spread of wing. He has a larger, bolder eye, a long back toe, and also a white feather in each side of the tail, while the spreckling (marking) on the breast goes up nearer the bill, and he has more white on the belly than has the hen. By following these points one will not go far away in selecting a cock.

A Happy Marriage.

From a drawing. [By D. R. F. Davidson.

The Aim of the Hybrid Breeder.

The love-making of the cock Siskin and hen Redpoll has run smoothly, her lady-ship has built the home and laid the eggs, and when "caught" by our artist is anticipating a share of the dainty her husband has in his beak.

Breeding Attempts that Failed.

As to the breeding of the Skylark in confinement, I have heard and read a great deal concerning it, but the birds do not always appear to care much about it, judging from the experience of a friend, who has been trying hard for the last six years in every possible way, by giving the birds their natural food and as nearly as possible their natural surroundings. He has had a special room fitted up for them, and his labours last year were rewarded by eggs. The pair made a nest in the usual way, and the hen seemed to be keen on sitting, but the cock apparently would not allow her, continually pecking at her. My friend removed the cock, thinking that if she was not annoyed by him she might sit; but it proved of no avail. She would not incubate the eggs, and she kept on calling for her husband. The male bird, I may say, is a first-rate songster.

When nesting, the Lark prefers a grass field, and generally selects a thick clump to breed in. The nest, which is not easily seen, usually contains four eggs of a very dark brown colour. The young are reared quickly, as the parents feed very assiduously—chiefly on big night moths they find sleeping among the grass, caterpillars, and a variety of other small insects, small snails, etc.

Young Larks often leave the nest before they are thoroughly feathered, and get scattered here and there through the field, but they are never neglected by the old birds in the matter of food. The parents give a "chirp" and get an answer from the young ones, wherever they may be in the field.

Black-Beetles Poison!

I have heard it said, it may interest readers to know, that a black-beetle is deadly poison for a young Lark, and that when the parent birds find their young caged (or netted) they bring them a beetle to eat! For the truth(?) of this I cannot vouch, for, although I have boxed a lot myself, I have never had an experience of that nature.

A nest of young Larks just when the latter are feathering is very difficult to distinguish from the surrounding grass. The old birds make a sort of "mouse run" to approach their home, so that a person not acquainted with this would look a long time before he found the nest. They do not appear to be a bit shy, judging by the places and positions in which I have known them to build, as to where they make their nest—sometimes not many yards from the public road.

SOME USEFUL "TIPS" ON REARING THE YOUNG BIRDS.

By JEFFERY JEFFERIS (Southall).

SOMETIMES at the age of about seven weeks you may have one or two of the youngsters go "thick," generally due to indigestion, and the best remedy is milk-sop. Put such birds in a cage by themselves, and give them nothing but this; no other food, and not even water, for a day or so, when generally they will be all right, and you can return them to their ordinary cage and diet. The way to make this sop is with a fairly stale piece of bread; boil a little milk and pour it boiling over the bread. Let it cool, and then just lift the bread out off the milk, at the same time slightly squeezing some of the milk out so that it is not too sloppy. If you find the droppings of any of the youngsters watery, a pinch of maw seed will generally put this right, if given in time. Of course bread and milk has this tendency, but I mean when on their ordinary diet.

The Water Cure.

Always keep plenty of good sharp grit in the cage for them, as young and old both want this: in fact it constitutes their "teeth," and without it they cannot properly digest their food. Another item that often causes trouble is the young birds drinking too much water. Now if you just make the water pink with Parrish's Chemical Food this will stop them drinking too much and transform what they do drink into a capital tonic for them. In speaking of young birds going "thick," this must not be confused with sleeping, as all young birds, for the first few weeks will sleep after having had a good feed.

Returning to the hen, at times she will want to go to nest again when the youngsters are barely a fortnight old and will start plucking them. Now this plucking greatly retards the growth of a young bird, if nothing worse. In this case the best course to adopt is to put the young, nest and all, into a nursery cage and hang this on the front of the breeding cage so that she can feed through the wires. Then you can give her a fresh nest and return the cock bird, if he has been away, and he, too, will possibly help in feeding the brood. Then things will go on all right, the hen going to nest again, and the youngsters gradually learning to do for themselves.

Mixing and Using Color-Food.

We now come to the moulting period, and if the fancier has a variety that wants colour-feeding, colour-fed they must be. Now there are several good peppers on the market, and I have found that the best results are got by using a mixture as follows: 1lb. of tasteless, or sweet, pepper, 2oz. of hot Natal, 4oz. of soft sugar, and 2oz. of the best olive oil. Put these ingredients into a bowl and thoroughly blend them; then put into an earthenware jar, tie down air tight and keep in a cool dry place.

To one egg and an equal bulk of powdered biscuit, begin with half a teaspoonful of colour food, gradually increasing this until you get to two heaped up teaspoonfuls. You will get a good colour if you feed at this strength to the end of the moult. You must gradually take them off the colour-food and not stop it all at once. When your birds are about half-way through, put a piece of sulphate of iron in their drinking water (about the size of a split pea), three times per week. This helps to fix the colour, and is a good tonic. You will as a rule, find the first round youngsters begin to moult at about twelve weeks, the second round at ten weeks, and the third round at about eight weeks: so you must get them on to the feed before these ages. Do not forget to supply them with a bath two or three times a week, as this greatly assists them to cast the old feathers, and also to tighten up the new ones.

I always moult my birds two in each cage (that is, the youngsters), as I find by so doing they eat up the colour food better. A heaped up teaspoonful between two birds is quite enough per day, and they will not want much else except canary seed, which must always be supplied. I have never had any trouble to get the birds to eat the colour-food by this method, and I do not believe in taking the seed hopper away. Do not give young birds any green food after leaving their parents, until they have completed the moult. A good thing to put a gloss on their plumage is to add one teaspoonful of the best crushed linseed to the egg, biscuit and colour-food previously described. This should be done when the birds are nearly through, not earlier—when they only have their neck and head to finish is about the time.

The End of the Season.

You must break up your pairs by the end of July as they finish off their respective broods, as at this time the old birds will begin to drop into the moult. At this period of the season you must keep a sharp look out for red mite, and keep them down as much as possible. Carbolic is a good thing to paint the outside crevices of the cages with, but do not put this where the birds can get any, or the result will be disastrous to the bird as well as the red mite. Keep the cages as clean as possible, as if you have any specimens you would like to show it will do away with the necessity for washing them too early. In conclusion, always remember that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well.

New York's Use for Sparrows!

The Americans have found an ingenious way of meeting the present high cost of living, according to the "Standard." The pest of Sparrows, which have caused great damage in New York City and vicinity for several years past, has been turned into a "blessing." The little feathered depredators are now being captured wholesale and sold to hotels and restaurants, which serve them up as "reed birds." No complaints have been made about the deception, for even gourmets have pronounced the Sparrow to be as palatable as Quail.

The Tiniest of all British Birds.

A Delightful Account of the Golden Crested Wren.

By that excellent naturalist MATTHEW BARR, (Walsden, Lancs.)

IN a hoary old yew tree, one of a number on either side of a beautiful avenue—beautiful with age—that led up to an old historic mansion house in the West of Scotland, the Golden Crested Wren was cradled. His parents also for many generations had been born in that broad avenue. It was an ideal place, the sombre yew trees providing a safe and secure position for their nests; and the noble clumps of pretty flowering and sweet smelling shrubs provided abundance of food in the hordes of small insects that were attracted thither by the sweet juices they contained.

Under the Parental Wing.

Gold Crest was one of the second brood of the year, and when he left the nest, along with the rest of his sisters and brothers, they had their parents to look after them, to warn them of, and to guard them from any passing danger; more so than if they had been of an earlier brood, their parents having no inclination to resume house-keeping again that year. Gold Crest remembers how his parents made him and his brothers sit all in a row on a convenient branch to be fed, before they had acquired strength in their own wings; and how the young family, when their parents were away searching for green-fly, and other dainties of the insect world, used to while away the time by pecking at the leaves, and on making dashes at any small insect that alighted within reach. When they got stronger and able to fly well, they began to follow their parents about the trees in the avenue. Later on, when the leaves of the trees had assumed their autumn tints of russet and golden brown, when the life-giving sap was no longer rising in the branches, and leaves were fast losing their hold, and began twirling round and round before they reached the ground, Gold Crest's family joined in company with other birds of the same race, and numbers of the Tit species (chiefly Coal and Blue Tits), believing in safety in numbers, and commenced to travel about the country. What a delightful time was that, and how Gold Crest enjoyed it, as they all flew from tree to tree, and scrambled amongst the branches in search of food, at times chasing one another for a little diversion! Of all the places the pine woods were their favourite haunts. Myriads of insects were to be found hiding in the rough bark of the trees and amidst the dangling pine needles. The young birds were expert hunters now, the older birds had taught them so well, and they had proved themselves capable pupils.

Travels and Trials.

In the mellow days of autumn and throughout the dreary months of winter, the merry band were to be observed in localities where they had never been seen during the green days of summer. And people that saw them marvelled to see such small birds, and loved to watch their motions in the fruit bushes of their orchards. When the frost came and the snow fell Gold Crest and his companions found food harder to find; they had to be still more active. The light of day was so short they had no time to play; they had to work with a feverish anxiety to live, and in the evening it was so bitterly cold. When night overtook them, as long as they could find the shelter of some evergreen bush, by huddling together under its friendly shelter they kept nice and warm. But it was a different story if they had to sleep in the open hedgerow; it was so miserable. After sleeping in such a situation through one very cold frosty night, Gold Crest awoke at break of day very stiff and awfully cold, but he was luckier than some of his little friends, for on looking about he saw them down on the earth below, with the feathers of their bodies puffed out. He got such a fright that Gold Crest and his remaining friends flew away from this sad spot as quickly as they were able.

The weather shortly after this sad event became a little milder, and gradually the light of day got longer, and the sun stronger and warmer, and the country-side under these genial influences became greener and brighter. Gold Crest's spirits rose, and he began to sing. He made but a sorry attempt at first, but by constantly practising, and listening to the singing of the older birds, he gradually became proficient, and he was quite proud of himself when he could begin with the high pitched note of his own, and then let it die away in a whisper.

The Coming of Spring.

Now spring had come, and trees and bushes were showing little points of green at the ends of their twigs and branches where the leaves had been encased awaiting the voice of summer to call them forth.

Little Tiny, who had lost her mate in the early part of winter, had met with and joined her fortunes with the roving band of which Gold Crest made one. Gold Crest and Tiny had become quite friendly; she was such an amiable wee bird at roosting time, that they used to sit close together, and preen with their bills each other's feathers. When the spring came, other male birds made advances to her but she would have none of them, and drove them away with vicious pecks. Gold Crest had no battles to fight for his lady-love. When the little flock dispersed, she took him away with her to the wood that had been her home the year before—a pine wood full of feathery spruce trees with an undergrowth of trailing brambles studded with clumps of ferns, the crozier-like fronds peeping up amidst the withered leaves of the past summer, the wood sloping down the hill side to the brook that ran rippling past, full of clear and sparkling water. Gold Crest thought it was a very pretty place; he was very happy, and sang all day in the fulness of his heart.

Preparing for a Family.

In April their thoughts turned to nest building. After viewing many situations, they chose one of the branches of a tall spruce about twenty feet from the ground. The tree stood apart by itself in an open glade where it got full share of the sunshine. There they began to fashion their little home about a foot from the point of the branch. Little Tiny did most of the building herself, seldom alighting on the ground for any of the material; moss and lichens she got from the trunks and branches of the trees. The wind helped, too, by carrying upwards, when in a frolic, little bits of fur from the rabbits, wool from the sheep, and very small feathers from the plumage of the different feathered inhabitants of the wood, all caught and held by the rough bark of the trees. She began by weaving bits of moss in and out amongst a few small twigs of the branch that had been selected, till she had something fashioned like the handle of a little basket. Then she commenced and made the outer shell of the body, lining it afterwards with fur, wool, and hundreds of feathers, till it was soft and warm.

Many were the journeys she had before it was finished. Gold Crest accompanied her as she went for and brought building material, but he did very little of the work himself. Now and then he would condescend to carry a bit, more in imitation than with any earnestness of purpose. He seemingly thought his whole duty lay in singing to cheer her in her labours. It took them a few weeks to construct the nest; they were in no hurry. But at last it was finished, and then it hung suspended from the under side of the branch, for all the world like a basket.

One day little Tiny laid her first egg—white, with coffee-coloured spots mostly at the thick end. Next day she laid another, and one each following day till she had the bottom of the nest covered. Still she kept on laying, till she had eleven eggs. What a number for so small a bird! With no room in the bottom of the nest, she had to deposit a few eggs on the top of the others, and she was so careful and cautious that none of them were broken or damaged in any way.

Useful Small Appliances for the Bird-room.

The concluding article of a very practical series dealing with Bird-room Requisites and their Making. The previous instalments appeared in our issues of Dec. 16 (Cages), April 13 (Wire Fronts), April 27 (Seed Hoppers), and June 1 (Drinkers).

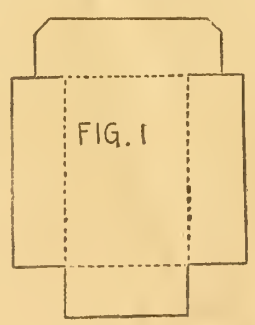
IN this, the concluding article, the writer proposes to deal with the making of egg-drawers, finger drawers, and one or two other little appliances which are so useful in the bird-room. We shall again find that syrup and cocoa tins are useful for other things besides holding syrup and cocoa.

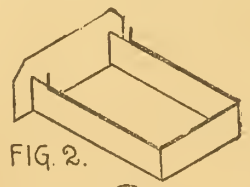
Let us begin at once with the egg-drawer. Egg drawers are cheap, certainly, but if we require a dozen it will cost us a couple of shillings, whereas if we make them, and a dozen can be easily made in the course of an evening, it will cost us nothing. I think we can, therefore, safely consider it worth while. Having flattened out the tin as described before, mark out the pattern shown in Fig. 1, making it of a convenient size. (My own measure 2in. long by 1½in. wide by ½in. deep). Then cut it out with a strong pair of scissors and bend it up at the dotted lines. Place a knob of solder at each corner, having smeared a little Fluxite over the parts to be joined, and melt with a blow-pipe. The solder, as well as making a neat joint, will round off the corners, and thus facilitate cleaning.

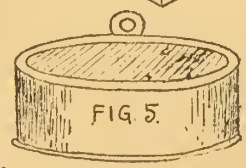
Humouring the Birds.

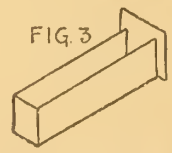
Now many birds like to perch upon the edge of the drawer whilst feeding, and so it will be advantageous to rim our egg-drawers round with bird cage wire, soldered on, and at about a quarter of an inch from the back; this wire should be bent up at right angles so as the sliding door can hold it firmly in place (see Fig. 2). A neat little handle of tin can then be soldered on to the back, and after having received a coat of either lacquer or enamel, the egg-drawer will be complete.

The finger drawers can be made in exactly the same way, only of course considerably narrower, being of such a width as to fit easily between the wires of the cage. Fig 3 shows the completed drawer. These are, of course, useful for giving special little tit-bits.









We will now deal with a rack for holding nesting materials. This rack is my own invention, and I find it also very useful for giving chickweed and other green food, which it is difficult to tuck firmly between the wires. Fig. 4 shows the idea. It is really a large brooch made entirely from two pieces of cage-wire hinged together by means of two loops. Each piece is bent into the shape of the letter "S" as shown. The green food (or nesting material) is laid upon one of the "S"s and the other part of the affair brought over and by means of a simple little catch, the two pieces are locked together with the green food held firmly between. The whole contrivance is then hung on to the cage, or else lightly wedged between the wires.

The advantages are many, the first being that the job of giving green food is so quickly accomplished; secondly, it cannot be dragged into the cage to be dropped on to the floor to get stale and unfit for the bird's "clockwork"; thirdly, it can be made in about one minute forty-five and three-quarter seconds and out of material which is sure to be in every bird-room.

Fig. 5 shows a home-made nest-pan. It is the upper half of a treacle tin, and it is fitted with a bottom made of perforated zinc. The chief advantage of this pan is that it is very light, and well ventilated, and will not vibrate when the bird settles on her nest.

I have now done my best to explain the making of practically everything that the average fancier will require in his bird-room, and I think I can safely say that there is not a single article that need cause anyone to fear that it is too difficult to make. Many pleasant evenings may be spent in a small workshop or even at the kitchen table, manufacturing all sorts of appliances for our pets, and I am inclined to think that many a shilling may be saved in this way, and as spare shillings are none too plentiful with many of us, I trust that these few hints may be found of use to a number of fanciers.

Do the Thrush and Blackbird Interbreed?

What promised to be an interesting case of natural hybridism has ended rather tamely, says "Country Life." We were informed last year that a Blackbird and Thrush for several successive seasons had mated and nested in the garden of a Glasgow suburban house. Early this spring information arrived that the alliance was resumed. It would appear that the birds had paired too early, because they forsook the nest; and the owner of the garden very obligingly forwarded to us the nest with three eggs in it. It was obviously a Blackbird's nest and the eggs those of a Blackbird; but in order to make assurance doubly sure, the nest and eggs were sent to Mr. Ogilvie-Grant, of the Natural History Museum, who confirmed the statement. The sender, of course, accepted a decision so authoritative; but she writes that of the young in previous seasons some had speckled breasts and some had not, and her description of the hen bird is extremely like that of a Thrush. It is, however, absolutely impossible that a Thrush should lay eggs coloured like those of a Blackbird. The birds have paired again, and it is promised that if the eggs are hatched off the alleged hybrids will be forwarded. It will be interesting, although the explanation seems obvious that the hen Blackbird, always more lightly coloured than her mate, is in this case exceptionally so.

OUR TIMELY HINTS.

USEFUL "TIPS" FOR ALL BIRD-KEEPERS.

Four prizes of two and sixpence each (cash), or our books to value, at option of winner, are given weekly to the senders of the best four Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POST-CARDS, with sender's name and address at foot, and reach us by Monday's post.

Moulting Young Canaries.

Now that the season for moulting of young Canaries is approaching, the following will be found a valuable hint:—Allow half a teaspoonful of egg food per bird, mixed as follows every other day (if colour feeding, every third day): To one egg, add four Osborne biscuits and a teaspoonful of treacle, with three drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. It is an excellcut conditioner, helps the young birds to shed their feathers quickly, and keeps their bowels in action.—Seut by W. Lidgett (Newark).

"Newskin" for Cracked Eggs.

A very useful article for the bird room is "Newskin," the liquid court plaster. I have used it for cracked or sore feet, also for eggs, cracked or with tiny holes. A few drops paiuted over repairs the damage, and often resuits in a valuable bird where otherwise the egg would have beeu thrown away as useless.—F. J. Fitzpatrick (Dublin).

Bad and Good Examples.

My heu of erect and good position, paired to a crouching cock, copied his habit and lost her former upright position. The moral is: Never allow a crouching bird in sight of youngsters. Erect and good positioned birds should be kept in their view, as birds are copyists, like the boy who, seeing a soldier for the first time, straightens himself up, sticks his chest out, and imitates him for years to come, with beneficial results.—J. H. Chambers (Manchester).

Bird Lime for Catching Mice.

Get some brown paper cut in squares and cover it with bird-lime. Put a bit of seed iu the centre, and then place in the runs. I have found this very successful; try it and see.—Mrs. Watson (Sheffield).

When Boiling Eggs.

Probably most fanciers use Irish eggs for making egg food, as these are much cheaper than English, and just as good for the purpose. It is very annoying, though, to find that, when they are put in the boiling water, they generally crack and lose a good deal of the white. This simple remedy will prevent it: Take a sharp needle and pierce the egg at the thick end. When it is put in the water it allows the air to leave the egg without cracking it. A dozen eggs can be boiled at a time, as they will keep good a considerable time.—Wm. Hainsworth 11, Nevett Street, Prestou.

To Prevent Red Mite.

Get some good white lead, boiled oil, and turpentine. Mix well, shade it with Prussian Blue. If a green shade is wanted, add a little Lemon Chrome. Then paint the cage well inside (sand trays also), then varnish with copal varnish. Use perchos suspended on wires; also use earthenwaro nest pans, and you will never be troubled with red mite.—W. Hibbert (Manchester).

Burnt Bone as a Shell-former.

To ensure a cheap and constant supply of grit for the cage or aviary, save the bone from tho weekly joint, and last thing at night put it iuto the heart of a bright red fire. Next morning you will be "grate-full" to find a splendid commodity to form the shells containing our hoped-for winners.—Mrs. Nellie Pluck (Cargo Fleet).

The Uses of Wormwood.

For getting Canaries and Hybrid pairs into strong breeding condition, I use a herb called "wormwood," which can be purchased at any good herbalist's in tho dry state. Put a few pieces in a tea cup and pour boiling water over it, when it will look like strong tea. Only give two drops at the time in the drinking glass, as it is very bitter, and the birds may not like it at first if too strong. I have found this a good preventive of egg binding, and it soon brings the birds in vigorous breeding form, especially Bullfinches.—J. Drewett (Claygate).

When Changing Birds.

Changing birds from flight cages is often attended with serious injury to wings, claws, etc.; but this can be overcome if you notice the position of the bird you wish to transfer. Cover the cage with some thick material, and you may then place your hand upon the bird without any trouble. This prevents consternation amongst the other occupants. I have always found this a safe way, and have never had an "accident"—such as slipping out of the cage and broken limbs or feathers—as the birds are motionless when in the dark.—R. Yates (Hull).

To Lark Fanciers.

I havo found what I think is the best way to rear young Larks. First you want a good cock Lark in good condition, a cage about 2ft. long, 18in. high, 16in. from back to front. Put the young birds in the cage with the old bird. Be sure it is a cock, for I have found that a hen will uot feed them; give plenty of ordinary Lark food and also some small worms and slugs. Keep him supplied with pleuty of food, or he will give them sand off the cage floor. If you look after him he will look after the young birds and rear a dozen or more in a season.—S. Nicholas (c.o. Mr. A. Shaw, Scropton Road, Tutbury, Staffs.).

Old Wire Fronts as New.

All wire fronts, after being in use for a time, turn black or rusty. A good way of doing them up is to give them a goed wash in soapy water, dry them well, and then give them a coat of aluminium paint. It is rust and damp proof, and it makes them look like new. It does not peel off like ordinary paint or enamel. A sixpenny tin of Falcon aluminium paint will do about thirty fronts, and can be got at any paint shop.—R. Tayler (Fryer's Terrace, Burradon Colliery, Northumberland).

Bone-powder for the Youngsters.

Procure a green marrow bone from any butcher and take a fine saw and saw it in as many places as you can, so as to make as much bone dust as possible. Then place the dust iu egg pots iu the flight cage for the young birds to feed on. Exhibitors will find it splendid, as it forms both bone and muscle. The marrow can also be used to give to both old and young birds between the wires of cages, as it is a very good thing for them all the year round. Fanciers will find they will get strong, healthy birds by adopting the above method. I might say I owe my success to the hints I get from CAGE BIRDS.—S. Fairey (45, Colenso Street, West Hartlepool).

CODNOR PARK AND EASTWOOD C.B.S. MIDST FLOWERS & BIRDS

The members of the above society went for their first ramble on May 28, and had a most enjoyable time. Being favoured by the weather clerk with a glorious day, we were soon at it. Meeting at one of our headquarters, the Three Tuns, Eastwood, we made a start at 10.30 a.m., after getting refreshed by the good things our worthy president had provided for us. We were guided by Mr. J. Martin, who made an ideal guide, for in less than fifteen minutes we were amongst the thick wood, the first attraction being the Swans on the large lake, then the Dipper. The next find was a Chaffinch nest with three eggs. Then we had a most lovely sight, for the rhododendrons were out in full bloom. We were in for a good time after leaving the blooms, for nests were in abundance—Blackbirds', Thrushes', Greenfinches', Chaffinches', Wrens', etc.; they either had eggs or young. After a two hours' ramble, our guide suggested a halt under a grand old oak tree, but we soon made another start on our way, for we had about six miles farther to go, and nothing but woods and fields to traverse. After having another two hours' ramble we were all getting about ready for refreshments, so we made tracks homewards, and this proved to be our best time, for we were amongst the Linnets now, and their song was grand. We made a halt under a very high hedge to listen to one that was pouring out its song. We were now nearing home again, after six hours' good rambling, and we were ready to do justice to the good things provided by our worthy president. The feeding being over, we next turned to jollification, and right well we all enjoyed ourselves. The outing was voted a complete success, and we hope to arrange another at au early date.—J. H. Mitchell, hon. secretary.

THE LATEST SUCCESS OF SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Another decided success was the verdict of the members and friends who journey to Ridgeway on June 1 on the second ramble of the season. The weather at the start was beautiful. We soon got amongst the fields, and here we were delighted by the song of the Larks, which were very numerous, and the sight of the Plovers as they skimmed the fields in their graceful flight. The route taken by our friend Mr. Curley, who acted as guide, was full of interest. Birds abounded on every side, and their songs made one long sweet melody. The scenery, too, was magnificent, the fourteen miles we travelled being one panorama of hills and dales, covered with innumerable woods, in which bluebell and fern grew in abundance. The journey was much enjoyed—even a thunderstorm which came on as we neared the village! At our host's house we did full justice to the good things provided. During tea the subject of non-feeding hens was mentioned, and the remark was passed that though the hens refused to feed, their owners didn't. On our return journey, passing through the village, we took to the fields and woods, and for miles we never saw the road. Nests were very plentiful, and several interesting finds were made. The Cuckoo was both seen and heard, two of them passing right over us. Nearing Haisborough Farm an interesting time was spent in searching some gorse bushes. Mr. Jackson made the first find, a Yellowhammer's nest with three eggs. Then the writer found another Yellowhammer's nest with two young about four days old and one addled egg, also a nest of five young Linnets about ten days old, in grand condition. Mr. Wagg then found a Blackie's nest with four eggs and a Throstle's with four fine young. Such sights as these cheered those members who had left some half-starved young at home, and wishes such as this were expressed: "Oh, if only my best Buff hen would feed like this." The day was now getting old, the birds were singing against each other, and in the distance the Wood Pigeons could be heard cooing—everything in harmony with the scene. With the sound of Nature's voices in our ears and sights that will live for many a day in our minds, we arrived home, having had auother enjoyable ramble.—J. Woolhouse, assist. sec.

EDINBURGH N.C. & M.B.S. FIND THEMSELVES IN GOOD COMPANY

About sixteen members and friends journeyed to Musselburgh, where they were met by Mr. Crossley Sykes. The destination was a very fine estate about three miles from the towu, but having a good deal of time to spare Mr. Sykes took tho party up the River Esk for a distance of four miles, explaining as he went along the different places he had seen certain species of birds frequent. One particular spot he pointed out was where Wagtails were caught every winter. On leaving the river we saw the start of the famous dykes which shut off the Duke of Buccleuch's grounds, and are known as "the Duke's Dykes." We were then interested in the nurseries of a famous Edinburgh seedsman, the estate being sited. We were met by the lodge keeper, who at once took the party into the very midst of bird life. We were very much indebted for the assistance of two boys belonging to the estate, who knew every corner, and showed the party nests by the dozen. They made excellent guides, as they seemed to know exactly where to lay their hands on every nest for miles around. Each nest we found was described by Mr. Sykes, who seems to know everything in connection with wild bird-life. He informed me that when not in his bird room he was out in the woods studying the ways and haunts of birds. The weather was ideal, aud every one of the party enjoyed the outing, which I am sure proved very instructive.—John Welsh, sec.

OLDHAM C.B.A.

Annual ramble, May 26, to Broadbottoms. About sixteen fanciers and friends arrived at destination in grand time, and commenced our search for the different species of birds and their nests in good earnest. We had a very good leader in Mr. Gibsou, who, I may say, proved himself to be the "right man on the right spot." During our afternoon's ramble we came across somo very nice nests We were all very sorry that Mr. Cocker could not accept our invitation to be with us; I am sorry to state he was too ill.—J. Cope, sec.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT (Miss M. M. Acroyd).—Thanks for letter. Glad to hear bird is improving, and hope you will soon have her quite well.

NORWICH HEN MOPY (A.E.B.).—Keep the hen caged separately until she is more active, when you may place her in a flight cage where she can get plenty of exercise to recuperate before the moulting season. Give her a staple of plain canary seed. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet and teazle. For the first fortnight give on each alternate day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, well strewn with maw seed, and afterwards give this, or its equivalent in egg food, once a week only. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food daily, but avoid dandelion. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and add 10 drops of lemon juice for three days, and afterwards add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week, or fortnight, if necessary.

CANARY WITH ASTHMA (Novice).—Candidly, I'm afraid there is no cure for the bird, which I imagine from your letter, is a chronic subject. See that it is kept from all direct draughts, or extreme fluctuations of temperature, but at same time in a bright, well-ventilated place where the air is free from dust. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day add a pinch of rape separately, and on the alternate days for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a good spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken in water two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight after. If not then well, write again, referring to this reply, and I will advise you further.

RETURNING COCKS AND EGG SETTING (Mrs. Whitehead).—(1) You did quite right to remove the cock. Unless the hen starts nesting again in earnest do not return him until the young are leaving the nest, when they will be quite safe to put in a nursery cage and hang on the front of the breeding cage, in case the cock should maltreat them. If the hen starts nesting earlier there will be nothing for it but to return cock earlier, but watch him closely for a few hours, and if he molests the young transfer them to a nursery cage, and hang so that the old birds can comfortably reach to feed the young through the wires. (2) These two do not seem to have been in breeding condition when previously mated, in which case copulation would be very unlikely to take place, and the egg now laid so long after separation—and also, probably, the first two laid after putting birds together again—will be unfertile. Of course, this may be a stray egg, and not an item in a normal clutch. If birds are now in good condition you might certainly try mating them again, but the eggs already laid are not worth troubling to incubate.

EGG DRYING UP (No Luck).—This subject is fully dealt with in an article in the current year's CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. The fault is not so much with your treatment as the abnormal condition of the ovary and ovidnet of the hen. Try the following treatment for the remainder of this season, when preparing to nest. Give plain canary seed and a liberal supply of chickweed daily as the sole dietary for a week, and during this time add 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water every second day. After this still give a regular supply of canary seed as staple, and every second day give in addition half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape, with, on the alternate days, a similar quantity of seed mixture, for which you will find prescription in reply to "C. E. B.," on May 25th. Every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk with four drops of syrup of hypophosphites dropped on it, and sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure seed. Continue to give a free supply of chickweed or dandelion daily. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, half as much sulphate of iron, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a fortnight. At the end of the fortnight stop the bread and milk, and go on with the usual egg food two or three times a week.

WEAK LEGS AND EGGS (Tabs).—(1) The cock must have made some little progress, or he would not start to sing. Continue treating generally as advised in last reply, but give the gentian tonic each alternate week for two months, and in the first month you might also try painting the feet and legs with a small feather dipped in Friar's Balsam. Recovery will probably be very slow, so you need to exercise patience. (2) The eggs drying up is almost, if not quite, invariably due to imperfect shell structure. If this hen goes to nest again strew the cage with a little pounded old mortar, in addition to the usual cuttlefish, and when about laying add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinker each day. You would find this trouble dealt with in an article in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

SWOLLEN FOOT (E. J. U.).—Bathe the foot for a few minutes morning and evening, until better, in a lukewarm solution of extract of wych hazel—say a teaspoonful of extract in a saucerful of water. Dry gently and then paint leg and foot with the full strength of the extract. Give a rather plain seed diet, and avoid all tit-bits rich in fats and oils. A morsel of bread and milk well sprinkled with maw may be given about every second day for a week or so, and a liberal supply of chickweed daily will be beneficial. Dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda in the water every second day for a week.

YOUNG BIRDS SLEEPING (Amateur).—It is quite natural for young birds to sleep a good portion of the time during the first few weeks of their lives, just as is the case with all other young creatures. If your birds have intervals of activity after a period of repose, you need not be anxious about them. You should gradually drop off the egg food now, or you might with advantage substitute a little bread and milk for a week or so. Give a pinch of maw with it each time. Do not give a large quantity of very succulent greenstuff, but give a few half ripened plantain stalks, seed stalks of shepherd's purse, and just under ripe dandelion heads. Watch the droppings, and if birds become constipated give a spray of tender groundsel tops.

TWO HENS (Amadis).—The death of the hen was undoubtedly due to acute inflammation of the oviduct, brought on by the prolapsus, which in turn would result from the passage of the imperfect egg you found. It is doubtful if you could have done much to save or relieve the bird, even if you had brought her indoors. The second hen which refuses to mate will probably not do so this season, unless turning her into the aviary with a cock should bring her forward. I fancy she is rather a weakling, and consequently not a promising subject to breed with in any case. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a little egg-food well sprinkled with equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed every second day for two or three weeks, and a little mixed seed on the alternate days. Give a liberal supply of dandelion and chickweed daily. The just ripening heads of dandelion would be excellent, and just as good as the leaves. Dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water every second day for a week, and afterwards add to it six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for another week.

YOUNG DYING (J. S.).—You do not say whether the hen started nesting again when she ceased feeding the young, but even if she did the cock in most similar cases would have gone on feeding the young. I rather suspect there was some disturbing element, which they resented. Had you been giving a new nest, or did the young refuse to be fed? You need to vary the food a little more next time when the young are ten or twelve days old. Interfere as little as possible; do not begin to give hemp until the young are ten days old, so that it may come in as a variant at this time, and see that the kernel is sweet and sound. You may also offer at this stage a bath, in which a little common salt has been dissolved, and add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece to the drinking water for one-half of each day for a few days. For the rest see detailed replies to "F. E. N." and "D. E.," on May 25th. You should get Part V. of "Our Canaries" for full information of feeding in all circumstances.

UTILISING ATTIC (Birdroom).—Beyond being rather low-roofed, which would make the place rather inconvenient for a person of average height to move about, there is no reason why the attic should not make a very efficient bird-room, and Yorkshires should thrive there quite well without any heat, as you say, being provided by artificial means. If you got Part X. of "Our Canaries," you might get some good ideas from a plate therein showing what can be done in this way with such a place as you describe. For ventilation you should certainly make the skylight to open with hinges at the top side, and a strut at the bottom to regulate the extent of opening. The sash of skylight should be fitted into a frame about three inches deep across the lowest side, on to which the sash closes, and angularly shaped sides to fit closely. Then, either make a row of small apertures across the lowest sides, or let in a strip of perforated zinc, which will provide an outlet for heated and foul air when the sash cannot be left open. An ingress may be made in the foot of the door. See that the skylight is covered underneath with securely fixed wire netting. An outdoor birdroom such as you propose would also do admirably for Canaries, but you should fill in the space between the walls with sawdust or wool waste. There would be little to choose between it and the attic, save that in building it you could easily make it a more comfortable size. The birds would flourish quite as well without artificial heat here as in the attic. The south aspect would be preferable. There is nothing whatever to choose in the hardihood of the Norwich and Yorkshire.

INJURED TOE (Norwich).—The rough sketch you give in your letter clearly shows four toes, in addition to the upstanding hind toe. I suppose this is a slip of the pen; otherwise the upstanding toe is superfluous, and merely an unnatural defect. In this case the only rational treatment is to amputate it, with proper precautions to preserve the utmost cleanliness possible until the wound has quite healed. If not an abnormality, it is either dislocated, in which case you should see the displaced joint at the "ball" of the foot, or the sinews are relaxed. If this bird gets the perch fairly well it would be best to leave all mechanical contrivances alone. Try painting the toe right down to centre of foot with tincture of iodine twice a week for a month, and give perches that it can quite comfortably grip with normal foot, slightly flattened on top, and slightly roughened to give the bird a good purchase on them when gripping. Report result in a month, referring to this reply.

TOES STICK OUT (J. C.).—See that the bird has well fitting perches, and make one of the ordinary size which the bird can grip comfortably, and the other slightly thicker than an ordinary pen-holder, and nearly round. Catch the bird and sparingly paint the feet with a small feather dipped in Friar's Balsam once every second day for a week, if necessary. Stop painting when the toes come down and grip perch. You did wrong to spray the bird, if you mean that you saturated the plumage. If they refuse to bathe, just a little puff or two from a spray may be given them when the bath is about being offered, but they should in no sense be drenched. The object should be to slightly bedew the plumage and thereby incite the birds to complete their bath voluntarily. If they still refuse to do so let them go unwashed until another time. The health of many birds will withstand a drenching with a spray, but, also, that of very many birds will not.

SEED MIXTURE FOR YOUNG (Nutshell).—As an occasional treat the mixture you name in moderate quantities will be beneficial to growing young, but for regular or even very frequent use no mixture containing an appreciable amount of linseed is quite safe for Canaries. It may stimulate them and appear to do good for a time, but eventually is certain to upset them. The dietary given in House's "Manual" or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," with such variation as named in reply to "Amateur," is the safest and best. A perfectly satisfactory method of using bread crumbs with egg is to take a piece of ordinary household bread at such a degree of staleness that the soft part will crumble into nice soft crumbs readily when rubbed through the fingers. Crumble sufficient bread into a cup or basin, add the egg well broken up with a fork, and mix the whole thoroughly with a circular, blending motion of the fork against side of basin. It is rather too early yet to give colour food regularly. Give a little about twice a week, until the birds show signs of starting to moult. If the birds will not take it, you probably do not make it sufficiently palatable.

NO RESULTS (A Reader of CAGE BIRDS).—You might have seen quite a number of replies on this subject in the last month or so, most of which would apply fully to your case. I am afraid this pair of birds are scarcely worth keeping over another season, unless the following treatment should effect a radical change in them. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give a small teaspoonful of egg food, in which you have well mixed two or three finely chopped mealworms, and sprinkle it with a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle seed. Give a liberal supply of dandelion, and seedy chickweed and shepherd's purse, and also two or three just ripening heads of dandelion each day. Continue this feeding for a month unless the birds settle down and go to nest in less than that time, when you would, of course, reduce the dietary when the hen began to sit. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day.

HUSKY VOICE (Printerdom, Walworth).—There is nothing remarkable in a cock not singing whilst rearing young, but if he really tries to sing and produces no sound, then he is troubled with loss of voice, and the husky voice when he calls points in this direction. The cause is practically certain to be exposure to cold draughts, damp, or sudden extremes of heat and cold. The first step in treatment is to remove any or all of these causes. You cannot very well treat the bird whilst he is helping to rear young. You might mix four drops of cod liver oil emulsion in the egg food every morning. This will help to relieve him, and do no harm to the young. When the young are taken away, if the hen is not ready to begin nesting again, cage the cock separately, and in addition to the usual diet give a morsel of bread and milk with three drops cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days in the first week add to the water 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, six of glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece. In the second week omit the lemon juice and potash, and substitute instead six drops of oxymel of squills and two of eucalyptus oil. Shake this well in the water

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

WHAT BIRD? (T.).—Sorry, but the species to which your description might apply are almost legion. It reads like one of the Hyphantornine group; send me the description again when it is in colour, as it is impossible to attempt to name it at present—seeing the bird one might hit the mark pretty nearly, but in out of colour plumage many species are very much alike.

WHAT ARE THEY? (J. Winterbottom).—They are Budgerigars, and Budgerigars are Parrakeets, though they are commonly known by the former name. The Nutshell should solve all your difficulties, but if you are in doubt on any point repeat query.

BUDGERIGAR PLUCKING ITSELF (F.C.C.).—You absolutely give me no details whatever, save the fact of plucking. Send me full particulars of how the bird is kept, and what it is fed on, then I hope to be in a position to help you. In the meantime give it as much seeding grass as it will eat, and let it have all the light and air possible without draught. You should also get our Nutshell "Budgerigars"—2½d. post free, from our Manager.

PIPING BULLFINCH (S. A.).—The bird got a shock while out of its cage, from which it should gradually recover. It is not a case calling for drugs, etc.; simply keep the bird quiet, and leave Nature to do its work. I should continue the treatment you had been giving it previous to the mishap, and be as quiet in your movements as possible when attending to it, at the same time do not let the bird miss anything in your manner and attention to it, simply avoid doing anything likely to scare it. If there is no improvement in, say, two or three weeks, please repeat query.

WHAT BIRD? (H.T.G.).—I do not think the bird can possibly be from the Congo district, but I take it to be a Brotogerys; in fact, the Orange-winged Parrakeet (B. chiriri), here is the proper description of it (you will see in what points it differs from your sketch). Prevailing colour green, lighter below; bastard wing and outer greater coverts deep yellow, primary coverts deep blue; beak fleshy horn colour, feet brownish, iris dark brown. I am keeping your sketch by me, and I expect to be at museum during the week, and will have out the skins, though the authorities in the birdroom would show you the skins of a given group at any time and without carrying the bird up, and you should recognise the correct one at a glance—yours may be a young bird. Re the Rosellas, occasionally such mishaps occur.

BREEDING RIBBON FINCHES (Twiz).—With such space, three pairs ought to agree, but put up another half-dozen nest receptacles, say, two more Hartz cages and four boxes, about 6 inches square at base by about 9 inches high, with an elliptical entrance hole near the top. There are not many finches that are gregarious, and will breed together in any numbers (that is of one species). You would get most pleasure out of the aviary by putting in pairs of Zebra, Bib, Ruficauda, Long-tail Grass and Spice Finches, Silverbills, Bronze Mannikins, and Avadavats; parting with two pairs of your Ribbon Finches. If you do this you must increase your nest receptacles pro rata, there should be two of these to each pair of birds. Give plenty of green food, such as seeding and flowering grass, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc., and when young are about due supply dry or live ants' eggs. You cannot hurry matters, the season lasts right on to November, so there's plenty of time, and foreign species usually take a little time to settle down.

BULBULS FOR SONG (C. J. Bennett).—The Red-eared Bulbul has not much song, but its few flute-like notes are very pleasing. It must be borne in mind that with all songsters the capacity of individual specimens varies considerably, and that sometimes they take some little time before coming into song. In a cage they lack the inducements of courting and pairing, and it is at this season that the males of wild species pour out, with full abandon, their melody. The White-eared, the Persian, and the Syrian Bulbuls are the best songsters. (Note—the White-eared and White-cheeked are two different species.) Diet: Insectile mixture (soft food), seed (canary, millet, hemp and oats), ripe fruit, and some live insects. Being restless, active birds, they need a roomy cage. The Green Bulbul's or Fruitsuckers make grand cage birds, are fearless, soon become tame and confiding, are excellent mimics of other birds' songs, but have some harsh notes. The Gold-fronted Fruitsucker is bright grass-green, with black mask, forehead golden yellow and moustachial streaks of turquoise-blue. Diet: Fruit, insectile mixture, milk sop and insects.

MEXICAN JAY AND FRUITSUCKER (A.W.S.).—(1) Bathe its feet daily in hot (not hot enough for discomfort) water, and, after, by gentle pressure removing any pus there may be in the sores, anoint with a little antiseptic ointment every other day till relief is given. Take out the straight perches and substitute for these a twiggy branch. Supply as much fruit as it will eat. (2) Give this bird two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the bill, you must catch it a time or two and treat its legs, same as the Jay's, and also give it a twiggy branch in lieu of stiff perches. Diet: Ripe soft fruit in variety, syrup sop (condensed milk, Mellin's food, honey and crumbled sponge-cake, mixed together with boiling water), soft food, and some live insects. Induce it to take exercise—cage should be roomy for such active birds.

AN AILING MYNAH (Mrs. F. A. T.).—Your description is pretty near that of the Lesser Hill Mynah, and it is, I presume, that species. I expect the perches in your cage are ordinary ones, and all one thickness, which do not give the toes proper exercise. The better plan would be to take them all out but one, and to put in a twiggy branch at one end of the cage. The diet for this species is soft food, which should be rich in ants' eggs, fruit and insects, and as their natural diet is fruit and insects, tempt it with every kind available; mince up some banana into cubes, say about one quarter inch, and mix this with the soft food mixture, also add to the soft food a little minced cooked meal two or three times weekly. While it is ailing, procure some live ants' eggs (can be purchased now—see advert. column), and mix these with the soft food; also offer it a little milk pudding when you have any, preferably rice. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (two tablespoonfuls) for one day, repeating the dose after an interval of two days; in between, add 5 drops of brandy to the daily supply of drinking water, and at the end of the week put half-a-teaspoonful of Bynophosphates in lieu of the brandy in the water for two or three weeks—a metal drinker must not be used. Vary the mealworms with any beetles, spiders, smooth caterpillars, grasshoppers, etc., you can capture for it—it should have a liberal supply of live food. Continue to bathe the feet in warm water, and if there is any sign of pus in the swellings, it must be released by gentle pressure after careful lancing, rubbing in a little Elliman's embrocation after the bathing; but if you have to use the lance, after well cleansing, anoint with a little antiseptic ointment. This bird should have a roomy cage, and all the light and air possible without draught, and on warm summer days stand it outdoors in some unexposed position. Report progress in two or three weeks.

BREEDING CUT-THROATS (M.C.G.).—Cut-throats and Ribbon Finches are names referring to the same bird. This rather pleasing, but sometimes pugnacious, African species, simply requires to be turned into an aviary and left to themselves. Sooner or later they will settle down and breed. You will see when sitting has commenced, it usually lasts thirteen days. Towards the end of this period supply soft food, ants' eggs and green food ad lib—nothing else will be required. The parent birds usually rear the young without trouble. Canary, white and spray millet, and green food are the ordinary "bill of fare." See also reply to "Twiz."

A YOUNG GREY PARROT (L.P.H.).—You do not say how you have been feeding, and thus handicaps my reply to a considerable extent. There must be no sudden change of diet, but wean it gradually on the following: Boiled maize—boil till soft, strain off all water and lightly dust with flowers of sulphur—this must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour. Also supply ripe fruit, and keep a tin of the following mixture: Canary and white millet seed, with a little crushed hemp and crushed oats, in the cage, and as the bird takes to this gradually lessen and finally cease giving the boiled maize and sop. One drop each of Condy's Fluid and brandy should be sufficient for the quantity you name, but if the bird is fairly fit, or, say, in a week's time, substitute three drops of Bynophosphates for the above. You can also give as a change the following sop—stale crust of household bread, sprinkle with sugar, put 10 drops of Bynophosphates on the crust, pour over as much hot water as it will absorb—the crust should be well moistened, but not saturated with the water. Our nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, should help you.

WHAT PARROT? (G. B. Lynn).—It is not a Rock Parrot, your description (providing tail is short and not merely cut so, for exigencies of importation) fits that of the Senegal Parrot, an African species. Value depends on condition; if it is a Senegal, it should be worth a couple of pounds, or, when in talking and in good feather, a little more. I gather the plumage of body below the breast is orange—you do not mention colour of beak, that of the Senegal is blackish, and the feet dusky-brown. Give it a seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet; one pint oats; half a pint each hemp, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, and a gill of grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in cage. Also ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, with water for drinking and bathing. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage.

AUSTRALIAN FINCHES (T. W. E.).—As regards what you term "bringing on," when your birds are really fit, tight, and settled down in their quarters, they will go to nest readily enough. During such fine weather as we are now experiencing give them all the light and air possible without draught. Give green food ad lib, seeding (flowering) grass, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc. As regards seeds, canary, mixed millet (white and Indian), and a continuous supply of millet sprays, is about all you can give, and the same applies to the other birds you name; all are Australians. I should advise you, though, not to put other birds with the Gouldians, let them have the whole cage. The size of cage you name will answer admirably, but have the sliding partition a solid one. The ordinary Budgerigars' husk will meet the case, the hole should be on the top, and the husk hung up for the hole to face the light. Bichenos are fragile and difficult to establish, sexes similar in plumage, and with all others this frequently applies—too infinitesimal to describe without objects, but if ages were about equal choose a richly coloured specimen and one a little duller and smaller. The Long-tail is fawn colour, with silver-grey head and a large black bib. The Ruficauda (Rufous-tailed) is greyish-olive to rosy-brown, with the side of face and forehead vermilion (the hen has less red on her face) the under surface is much spotted with white. The Masked is fawn and fawn-brown, with a black mask. The Bicheno is a beautifully marked little bird, with a variegated garment of black, brown and white. They would all be probable breeders.

GOULDIANS IN BAD PLUMAGE (Gould).—Give the bird one dose of the magnesia as advised in our previous reply; unless the skin gets very hard discontinue the use of the vaseline, spray it with chilled water on bright warm days, putting a little quassia solution into the water you use. In spite of cleanliness and care, parasites get into cages; carefully examine yours for mites, etc., and if they are in the cage you must get rid of them by scalding out the cage, and washing the bird with quassia solution. Give them as much green food as they will eat (especially seeding grass), and you must leave the rest to nature, except for putting half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates every other day into the drinking water. Going out of doors (not during periods of cold winds), whenever the weather is warm and genial, will help greatly. Give them all the air and light you can without exposing them to draught. Re the others, they would be better caged in pairs than flying together, and the same treatment must be carried out. I do not suppose any attempt at nesting will be made while they are in poor feather.

BUDGERIGARS (G.W.L.).—Three-quarter inch mesh wire netting will confine Budgerigars, but Avadavats will get through anything larger than half-inch mesh. You will be well advised not to mix Budgerigars and Finches, as though they may agree together for a time, it will mean ultimate loss. You could keep with Budgerigars in an aviary of suitable size, pairs of Cockatiels, Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds, and Ring-necked Parrakeets, and if you keep the flight furnished with turf and growing cereals, this, with the brilliant plumage of the birds, would be very picturesque and pleasing.

GREY SINGING FINCH (M. G. L.).—(1) Yes, the Grey Singing Finch is a trifle smaller than the green species, and its song is soft and pleasing. A good bird, for individuals vary, has quite a sustained song, much milder than that of a Canary. (2) The Bronze-wing Mannikin has very little song; in fact, little more than a call note. The St. Helena Seed-eater is a good songster, much like a Canary's, but not so loud, to me it is far superior, for it has the melody of wild unadulterated nature. (3) All three have bred in confinement, and will rear their young on the ordinary diet, plus a little soft food; some pairs run on seed alone.

AVIARY QUERIES (Cordon).—I do not think you need have confined them to the shelter unless you are in the far north; the recent cold weather has not adversely affected any of my birds, including Cordons. (1) I think you may safely asumes that there are eggs in the nest, if by your remarks I am to infer that one or other of the birds is continually in the nest. (2) Yes. (3) The range of dietary you name should be ample to meet their need, but I consider it would be better moistened with hot water than milk. If the caterpillars are smooth ones, they are suitable for the birds, spiders, small beetles, live ants' eggs, are all excellent for many of the Finch tribe at this period. (4) It is quite probable you will have some young Cordons; keep up a continuous supply of millet sprays while they are feeding young, and the parent birds will capture many small winged insects in the aviary. Incubation lasts twelve to thirteen days.

AVIARY QUERIES (An Amateur).—Most certainly the extra yard extension will be a help; turf it over, also sow a few canary seeds, oats, etc., in each corner of the plot. This extension will enable the birds to take a rain bath and the Budgergiars to take a natural one by rolling about in the grass, which during the dry weather you should water through the rose of a water can. Hang up small barrels and husks under the roof both of inner and outer compartments, with their openings towards the light. You could put in the following: one pair each of Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds and Cockatcels. The treatment given in our Nutshell "Budgerigars" will suffice for the whole of the above, save that you must supply strips of bark and leaves for the Lovebirds to line their nests with. Give them a living branch, and let them strip it themselves when they show a desire to go to nest. If you follow my advice you will confine yourself to Parrakeets and not include any Finch-like birds. You must so arange that there is no draught between the inner and outer compartments.

SICK AMAZON ("Amazon").—Diet the bird as under, but keep a tin of seed mixture in the cage. Cease giving tea and milk at once; this is the cause of all the trouble. Offer it, or leave in the cage, chemical food and water in equal parts. Give it boiled maize, and twice a week soak into this 10 drops of Dinneford's Magnesia (boiled maize only keeps fresh one day). Get a hottle of glyco-thymoline and bathe the bird's nostrils daily with a portion of this diluted with an equal bulk of water. The bird's system has been altogether upset with tea, milk, etc., and it will take a little time to right matters. You can give the other items of diet you name, but bread and butter in very limited quantity. I have named Parrish's Chemical instead of the phosphates mentioned in previous reply, as this will make the water tea-like in colour. There should be at least a 3-inch circle on top of cage left uncovered at night for ventilation—the sides to be covered all night. Continue to put it in the porch whenever the winds are not cold. Treat thus for say a month, and then report progress, unless, of course, the bird becomes worse, in which case write at once.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

THE CASE OF A LINNET (J. B., Frizington).—The plumage will not grow until the moulting season comes round, I am sure, no matter what treatment you try. Still, there is no reason why the bird should not sing as well as ever. Your feeding, however, is not at all good. The seed sample you send contains a lot of millet, which is useless for Linnets, and too much linseed, while I can find no teazle. Why not get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet (only 2½d. post free) and feed on the lines laid down therein, being particular to gather seeding shepherds purse and give it plentifully, varying it with chickweed and flowering groundsel tops. These things are easily obtainable everywhere and are invaluable for bringing the birds into song and high condition—far superior to watercress. Just try a fresh diet for a week or two and you will find it work wonders.

NOT SEEN PAIRING (Beginner).—With regard to the feeding, you cannot better that given in the "Nutshell" booklet. If the Linnet is nervous, you should put the breeding cage a fair height up in a quiet corner and disturb the pair as little as possible. As you have seen the Linnet feeding the Canary, there surely can't be much wrong and I shall be surprised if you don't get fertile eggs. That you have not seen the couple in the actual act of pairing, counts for nothing. I have had fertile eggs from more than one pair which did not even seem on good terms; I had, in fact, to put the slide between them in the day-time, they were so "nasty" one to the other. I wish you a full nest of Mules. I presume the Linnet is "up" and in full song.

LITTLE STRANGERS (Bexhill).—As matters have gone so far, you can only trust to luck and the hen Canary to pull you through. If the young birds ever reach the stage of being able to feed themselves get them on to the usual insectile mixture given to small Softbills, mixing it, at first, with the egg and biscuit. Should he interested in knowing what happens, if you don't mind writing me.

CHAFFINCH-CANARY MULES (A Norwich Reader).—I have never seen a bird I was satisfied could be considered a Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid; neither has one been shown, within, that is, my own experience. I don't think the cross an impossible one, and I hope you have succeeded in producing the genuine article. It is impossible to "value" birds of this nature without seeing them, as much dpends on the sex (a hen would be comparatively valueless); further, a good deal depends on the buyer. The best plan is to exhibit the birds; then, if held to be genuine, you'll soon have plenty of offers to pick and choose from, and no difficulty in finding a buyer at a good figure.

A SKYLARK (W. Cawson).—The best thing you can do is to invest in a small bottle of extract of malt and hypophosphites (in combination), and moisten his soft-food with a little of this daily over a period of 12 to 14 days. It will, I think, vastly improve the bird's condition. I presume, of course, that you are housing him under correct conditions.

A VARIETY (Novice).—This cage will not comfortably hold more than six small birds. I suggest Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Redpoll, Twite, and Siskin. The Bullie is hardly a songster, but very attractive in all other respects. You could substitute a Chaffinch for the Twite, but this species, unless house-moulted, is usually not particularly steady. Try this seed mixture: teazle and canary three parts each, summer rape one part, linseed and charlock half-part each, by measure. Give hemp and sunflower in a separate dish. You should obtain much very valuable help at trifling cost by investing in a few "Nutshell" booklets (see advts.); they are just the very thing for beginners.

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A THRUSH (E. Dear).—Your bird should be given the treatment advised W. Cawson this week. Evidently he is not in very grand condition. Judging by your letter, I think you would be able to improve upon his present diet if you read our "Nutshell" booklets on the Song Thrush (only 2½d. post free).

TWO SAMPLES (J.A.).—Both are German rape of good average quality, the sample marked No. 1 being rather larger than usual. I failed to detect the presence of "mustard" (charlock) in either.

THREE SAMPLES (T.K.).—The hemp is probably a mixture of two kinds (large and small), but it is good, the kernal being white and "milky." Unfortunately you did not mark the boxes of rape, and I can't tell which is No. 1 and which No. 2. One sample, however, is very bad, being full of dust and mite (this is obvious even to the naked eye), while I feel sure it contains charlock. Don't use it. The other is fairly good rape seed, quite fit for use.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. J. Nicholson.—Your bird died from internal hemorrhage, brought about by rupture of one of the blood vessels supplying the lungs. A congested state of the lungs is responsible for such an accident when the blood pressure is at high tension. This condition can occur from fright, a most likely cause in your case.

Henry James.—I regret to tell you that your bird succumbed to septic fever. The little nodules you describe as cysts are typical of the disease, and are always present in the chronic type of this affection. Disinfection and isolation are your only hope.

A. B. Brown.—There was existing disease (fatty degeneration of the liver). Death, however, occurred from impoverishment caused by anaemia, resulting from this disease.

R. B.—Peritonitis complicated with pneumonia due to infection from the oviduct. The lungs were black, and it is easy to understand the symptoms described.

T. Langton.—Ptomaine poisoning, or poisoning by the formation of toxic substances developed in the food. Try a little Condy's in the drinking water every day, and ensure thorough cleanliness in the preparation of the food.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. Hooke.—A copy of the Wild Bird Act for any district can be obtained by sending two penny stamps to Messrs. Wyman, Ltd., printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C. State district (or county) when applying.

G. D.—Any ironmonger can obtain "Fluxite" for you. Try one or other of the bigger shops in your city. We have seen it on sale in London at a great number of ironmongers' shops.

E. Bannister.—Your letter is not one that we can publish. It does not mend matters, and, further, only serves to throw all dealers under suspicion, which would not be justifiable. We are always ready to investigate complaints if our rules are complied with.

G. Drury.—Back numbers of CAGE BIRDS can be obtained, price 1½d., post free, if less than two years old. Special (double) issues are, of course, extra; birthday numbers 4d., others 3d.

C. H. Hill.—We note your kind promise.

S. J. Riley. You must on no account turn squirrels into the aviary with your small foreign birds; that is, if you value the well-being of the latter.

H. S.—Although the pepper will not have lost its colouring properties, we think you might reasonably complain about the method of packing. A tin would have been best; failing this, greaseproof paper. Well mix one fluid ounce of best olive oil into each pound of the pepper.

Ten Canary Eggs in One Clutch.

Sir,—I thought it might interest your readers to know I have a Norwich hen which has laid ten eggs in one clutch, all being of normal size. I have been a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS since I began bird-keeping four years ago, and have gained practically all my knowledge on birdy matters from its columns.

P. HUNT.

A Help when Hand-feeding.

Sir,—Perhaps some of your readers would be glad to know of a method to feed young birds when the hen Canary proves a non-feeder. Let them procure from a chemist an ordinary half-ounce glass syringe with rather a wide nozzle at end. Remove the cork at top and take the piston right out. Then pack the food into the barrel, replace piston and insert the point of the syringe in the bird's mouth; gently force down the piston, and there you are.

Coarse Oatmeal a Good Canary Food.

Sir,—In reply to Miss Geddes in last week's "C.B. Twitterings," I have used very coarse Scotch oatmeal for feeding Canaries for some years with every success, also in weaning the young. I use summer rape three parts, Scotch oatmeal one part, maw seed half a part. They do well on this; the hemp seed is so hard to get always right that I have almost discarded it. I also give pine kernels powdered in a mortar with sweet arrowroot biscuit as a change to the ordinary egg food, it is greatly relished by old and young.

A Cage Bird Society for Ushaw Moor (Durham).

Sir,—A very successful meeting was held in the Ushaw Moor Workmen's Club on May 26 to form a cage bird society for the members. About fifteen names were given in for membership. The officers elected were:—Chairman, Mr. T. Hansom; vice-chairman, Mr. R. Walker; treasurer, Mr. H. Russell; assist. sec., Mr. A. Teasdale; sec., Mr. H. Briggs (Auton Style, Bearpark, Durham). The next meeting will be held on June 9 at 11 a.m., in the Workmen's Club to draw up rules, etc. The subscription was fixed at 2s. 6d. per annum. Any member of the club interested in cage birds is cordially invited to join.

H. BRIGGS.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg Food.

The Views of a Believer in Eggs.

Sir,—I was greatly surprised on reading Mr. Stanley's letter in last week's issue re the rearing of young Canaries without the use of egg food. If he has invented something better and cheaper than egg food, the blessings of Canary breeders will be upon him. But I doubt it, because in my opinion (and I have been amongst birds twenty-seven years) egg food is the food par excellence for the rearing of the young brood. We know for a fact that the chick for the first few hours of its existence lives upon the yolk of the egg in which it was born, showing that, according to nature, the yolk of the egg is the first essential in the life of the young bird. I do not say that young birds cannot be reared without the use of egg. I know they can. I have a hen Canary now that is rearing her second nest without. But she is exceptional. She would sooner feed on milk sop than egg and bread, and she has nine bonny youngsters to her credit. Milk sop is a good substitute, if you can get your birds to feed with it. But in my opinion the birds find it more difficult to form into pellets than egg food, and the task of feeding is therefore not so easy. I have used milk sop with good results, both in the breeding season and as a titbit, ever since I first saw it mentioned in CAGE BIRDS by that grand old fancier, Sam Drake. Egg food is supposed to be very troublesome to make, but it is nothing of the kind if you go about it right. I can make enough for fifty young birds in three minutes. I use no machine. My method is this: I boil three eggs for five minutes (no longer) and grate them on a large flat penny grater. Three thick slices of stale bread are grated in the same way; three tablespoonfuls of fine sugar, and there you are. Grate the eggs first, then your bread will keep the grater always sweet and clean. I put the lot in a small mug and stir with a fork, and I am sure that my egg food will need some beating; anyway, my birds eat it all up. As for wheezing in birds, this is an affection of the throat (a cold or chill), and I fail to see where Mr Stanley's food can beat milk sop sweetened with honey. Cover the cage with a piece of flannel, and nothing in the world will beat that for wheezing, I think. And nothing is more easily made than milk sop. As for septic fever, I have had no experience of this and do not want to. But I know that birds have their diseases and ailments just like humans, and I cannot see where food either causes it or cures it. If fanciers feed their birds on the best seed and see to it being sweet, keep all utensils clean, and the bottom of the cages well sanded, they need have no dread of septic fever. By following the above method I have this season from twenty-one hens and six cocks sixty-five youngsters, and only two of my hens have their second brood. My young are as bonnie as one could wish to see, and this I attribute to feeding on milk sop after removal from their parents. I have not tried nuts as I know for a fact that egg food is invincible and no trouble to make, and during the last six years I have bred and brought through the moult well over 600 Canaries.

JOHN CANNING.

Sir,—Since my letter of last week, some fanciers have written asking for the same particulars as were given in my essay. I shall be glad if you will mention that I cannot write it out for them. I presume they can obtain copies of CAGE BIRDS containing the essay. Also please state that fanciers should not risk giving anything in the shape of nuts to their birds, as one fancier sent me some foreign hard nuts which had been supplied to him for pine kernels, but I was unacquainted with them, and I certainly would not have liked to eat them.

T. STANLEY.

Roller Canaries at the 1912-13 Palace Show.

Sir,—In reference to Dr. Arnold E. Read's letter re the above, as one who thought the hatchet was buried, and who was not able to attend the general meeting, I trust that Mr. J. W. Norris will, with his usual guidance, ignore it. My opinion of the latter part of Dr. Read's letter, in asking Mr. J. W. Norris to reply, is that it is not quite so much for his fellow-members' guidance as that he wishes him to admit through CAGE BIRDS that the fact of him (Dr. Read) showing at the Palace was by no means taking advantage of those members who stood by their committees and kept their birds at home.

A. T.

More "Balloon" Canaries.

Sir,—Mr. H. R. MacMillan is not alone with his "balloon" Canary. I had one in 1909, when about fourteen days old, and one last year when three weeks. Mr. W. Sharpland told me he has seen such cases before. I am of the same opinion as the writer as to cause.

C. PEARSON.

Sir,—Seeing Mr. MacMillan's account of his "balloon" Canary, I thought it might interest him to know I had one last year from a Roller, in my outside aviary. It was all right until eight days old, and lived in the "balloon" state two days. The hen fed her young so much on green food, I thought that might have caused it. As I had never heard of a bird being like it before, I was very interested when reading that Mr. MacMillan had one this year.

Young Bred from a Hen Linnet Mule.

Sir,—As a reader of your unbeatable paper CAGE BIRDS, I write to inform you that I have at present a hen Linnet Mule with three young which are all doing well. Seeing the hen carrying feathers and showing every desire to nest, I placed her with a Yorkshire cock in a breeding cage. This was on May 4, and on May 11 she laid her first egg, finishing with a clutch of five eggs. I let the hen incubate the eggs by herself, and the three young hatched out on Monday, May 27, one egg being clear and the other dried up. At first I gave the hen yolk of egg to feed the young with, but this was not touched, so I tried several other methods, including soaked seeds, but with the same result. At last I tried boiling the seed for twenty minutes, and then drying it on a cloth before use, and the hen fed the young well on this. I thought I would write you about it, as in the cases of Mules breeding that I have read of in CAGE BIRDS it has been with a cock Mule and hen Canary. I may say this is my second year as a breeder, and all my knowledge is due to reading the "Nutshell Series," CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and CAGE BIRDS. I wish your publications every success.

The Popular Parrot and Its Treatment.

A Letter Filled with Useful All-round Advice.

Sir,—All Parrots take cold easily in our English climate, and therefore require to be kept in a warm room during the winter. They must always have coarse gravel (grit) given to them, and clean water for drinking and bathing purposes. Should a Parrot refuse to take a bath in summer time, he should have tepid water sprinkled over him, and then be placed in the sun to dry. Like Canaries, Parrots should not be exposed to draughts. Damp is bad for them, too, and the cage should always be dried after the bird has had a bath. Damp will give a Parrot rheumatism or cramp. The food of birds in captivity should in some way resemble the food they would choose for themselves when in a natural state. Fruit, grain, and nuts the Parrot would find in his native clime, and in captivity he should have some ripe fruit and a few nuts, but grain should be his staple diet. When newly imported, let the bird have Indian corn boiled and given cold. Once a day the Parrot will look for his sop, to which he likes to have a little sugar added. Meat should never be given, but a little bread or potato will not hurt. No food must be allowed to remain in the Parrot's cage to become sour. The Grey Parrot is perhaps the greatest favourite. The grey colour of the eyes of the young bird changes as it grows older into a straw colour. Grey Parrots eat maize, oats, and wheat, as well as different bird seeds (sunflower is much liked), various nuts, potato, fruit, and a little sop. Green food, such as chickweed, is also good for Parrots, and they like to have harvest grains (wheat, etc., in the ear) given to them on the stalk. The best way to take care of our pets and to guard them from disease is to study their particular requirements and see that they are filled.

The Slaughter of Swallows Abroad.

Sir,—I notice that the Rev. D. Cooper-Hunt, British Chaplain at Bex, has recently been commenting in the "Spectator" on the fact that the Swallow has disappeared almost entirely from countries in the North where it at one time used to abound. He gives as a possible reason the wholesale way in which the Italians kill by electric wires these birds upon their entrance into their country en route for the South, and vice versa. Tired with their long flight, they alight, he writes, on these wires, when they are electrocuted and fall down dead. Such a question as their destruction should be made an international question, and a stop should be put to this wholesale massacre. The Swallow is the only bird that lives upon the wing, and keeps down the fly pest (more especially mosquito), and is therefore man's greatest friend; for malaria has been undoubtedly traced to the mosquito. And if those in authority amongst our rulers would exercise their influence with the Italian Government, no doubt this evil would be remedied.

DEVONIAN.

Should they be Given Separate Classes?

Sir,—I have read Mr. Morris's letter re the above, and, having been away from home, I regret I could not reply before. I am rather astonished at his remarks, and I will deal with him and answer his questions to the best of my ability. In the first place, Mr. Morris doubts very much if I could select or distinguish a German Bullfinch hen from a Britisher. I can only say this is entirely a matter of opinion, and I do not know whether Mr. Morris is an authority or not neither do I care; but he must allow other people to have an idea besides himself. I am more than aroused when he states: "Mr. Archer and his partner are in a position to purchase these remarkable specimens, and would rather exhibit them in classes which contained their smaller relations. I would like to ask: Is this a matter of jealousy? What has it to do with the matter referred to? I could have understood it if it had anything to do with the subject. I believe in a true spirit, and for myself I do not care which classes we exhibit in, but I would rather exhibit in foreign classes if such were possible; but my point is that at present they are not. Mr. Morris also says "he would like to ask Mr. Archer if he is a breeder as well as an exhibitor." My reply is, "Yes, certainly I am a breeder, and during these last six years I have done nothing else whilst I have been in the Fancy, only try to breed these remarkable birds, but, like many others, have been unsuccessful." I cannot understand such piffle, for at our place at Huddersfield I think we have one of the most ideal places for the purpose, and at present I am busy trying all I know to get one or two good crosses as I have about a dozen British paired up. I would also tell Mr. Morris that I was invited by the Editor to give an opinion. I did this most willingly, and I received a reply from him thanking me for same. Had it not been for this, I should have said nothing, as I have quite sufficient to do with the different organisations with which I am connected. The British bird and Hybrid Fancy needs encouragement, and if you, Mr. Morris, will be more to the point and less personal, the better you will shine. Mr. Morris also says: "I think Mr Archer's chief interest in the Fancy is that of exhibiting and winning, no matter whether it be with Hybrids, British (Normal), or Albinos. Well, sir, all I can say is he must have some very funny notions. As for what I am and what I have done, I will leave other people to judge, for self-praise is no recommendation. I will say one thing, and that is absolutely true: I wrote my letter solely because I thought it would help. In conclusion, I may say that I joined the British bird Fancy to put something into it, and not to take away, and if I could help or benefit the same at any time, I shall always be glad to do so. I do not know Mr. Morris personally, but I advise him if he cannot speak of men as he finds them, not to speak at all. It doesn't do to "think" at this day; we must be sure. I hope we shall all remember that "United we stand, divided we fall." I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

Bird Catching: A Caution and Some Sound Advice.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. E. Grantham's request for information as to catching Linnets with 9-yard nets, I have used 9 and 12-yard nets, and I always used them in the same way as any smaller size, only I use two rubber elastics on my front staffs instead of one. In catching Linnets six call birds are plenty—three each side—and two brace birds. Let your brace birds be hens, and see that the brace is not too tight and not too slack. If you train your birds to sit on the stick you stand a better chance of success in catching big flights. Always see that your brace birds have water; cut a small hole in the ground to put a tin drinker in, so that it will not get knocked over when pulling. Please do not tie a brace bird by the leg. As regards Chaffinches, you do not want a Finch in song for catching with nets, but if you have not got a bird that will "pink" well you do not stand much chance in catching others in nets. The Chaffinch is a very cute bird; he will often deceive you when dropping into nets; he will drop short and rise again, and once you are on the wrong side of him he will not come near the net again unless he should get in with a lot more Finches. Now, I should like to inform you that pegging is not allowed, as it is only of any use during the breeding season from March 1 to Sept. 1. I should advise you not to do it, for it is not sportsmanlike, and you are laying yourself open to a fine of £25 or six months' imprisonment. I do not think any bird fancier who loves birds would use this method. When the catching season was over I turned to my Canaries for breeding, which I have found good sport. I have nobody to show me anything; I only know what I have got out of books and CAGE BIRDS, which I look forward to every week. If you can take a hint, you should buy the best birds that your pocket can afford, and go in for a good hobby that you can enjoy yourself at. I hope you will not think I am being personal, but I am speaking from a bird-lover's point of view. Any information I can give you in future I will, but please do not ask about such an unsportsmanlike practice as pegging Chaffinches.

THE STOCK BOOK.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character: Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A Mystery of Clear Eggs.

Sir,—We should be glad if one or other of your readers could explain the meaning of so many clear eggs and of hens lying in the nest. We have fifteen hens doing nothing but lie in the nest. We started the season with thirty pairs of birds, and up to the present time have got nine young birds. We are anxious to know if the hens are too fat, and not in proper condition. The cocks are all singing. We are afraid we are in for a bad season.

Can the Fronts of Breeding Cages be Improved?

Sir,—Seeing a reader writing on cage fronts, I beg leave to offer him my way of fitting them to allow of their being easily cleaned. When making my fronts, I leave the third wire from each end out and then put them in through top of cage, then through punch-bar holes and right down into the bottom front rail. This is all that keeps them in position, and when wanting to clean the cage I draw one of said wires; the other wire then acts as a hinge, on which the front swings open, which allows easy access to the whole cage for repainting, etc. I trust my hint may be of some use to readers.

A Strange Choice.

Hen Bullfinch Fascinated by an Orange Bishop.

Sir,—Reading in Cage Birds of May 11 the article entitled "Mule Breeding Made Easy," I may say that I have for many seasons adopted and advised the plan of hanging the male bird outside in an all-wire cage, or in a show cage, so that when he sings the hen will call and the cock Goldfinch, Linnet, or Greenfinch will copulate. I have had the Goldfinch and then Linnet immediately after copulate with hen Canary; also the Linnet and Greenfinch the same. Last season I had cock Bramblefinch and cock Greenfinch (both had only been caught three weeks) pair off properly with hen Canary. I took Greenfinch away at once, and had one egg full, but it did not hatch. I am trying the same this season, but without success so far. As it was June 1 that I set the hen last season, I do not give up hope. I saw the Bramble try to pair off with hen Bullie a few days ago when she called, as I had cock Bullfinch hanging on front of aviary. I have in the same aviary (outdoors), cock Linnet, cock Goldfinch, cock Greenfinch, cock Bramble, and grand plumaged Orange Bishop in full colour; also hen Canaries and hen Bullfinch. Now appears the surprising part with reference to colour (mentioned in the Rev. F. Richards' interesting article). The said hen Bullfinch, whether attracted by the bright colour of the Orange Bishop or not, has been very anxious to make love to him, going through the usual preliminaries up and down perch and bowing and bringing up food and putting it on perch for the Bishop to pick up. But he does not appear to take on the job (I wish he would). Possibly he does not care for her advances, as I have watched many times, but no response has come from him. The strange thing now happens, as the Bishop has gone into a rapid moult and lost all his bright colour, and with that the Bullie's loving attentions have likewise evaporated! Being now of much more sober colour, I suppose she no longer admires him; anyway, she now takes scarcely any notice, and I think passes him with contempt. It seems a good instance where colour was the chief attraction, and all further hopes in that direction I must give up this season and content myself with trying in future with Goldfinch, Linnet, Bramble, or Greenfinch. Unfortunately, all my many past efforts each season for Hybrids have been unsuccessful. F. J. Weaire.

The Remarkable Experience of a Mule Breeder.

Who Was Its Father?

Sir,—I wish to relate what I consider a strange happening, but perhaps to those older at the game than myself it will not appear strange. With a view to having a Canary hen ready for a Goldfinch, I paired her in the first instance to a Canary cock, and had a nest all right. I took the cock Canary away on the evening of the laying of the third egg, and the cock never saw the hen again. The same hen, about a month or five weeks afterwards, was paired to a Goldfinch, and a nest of four eggs resulted. Only one egg hatched, and a week afterwards my temperature rose to about 200degs. in the shade when I saw that the youngster was a clear bird! It is now about three weeks old, but is not clear now, having a dark splash on the head only. In my own mind it is not a Mule at all, having every appearance of the Canary, the beak (the chief point of distinction, I take it, with a Goldfinch-Canary Mule) is just of the ordinary type of the Canary—not of a Goldfinch type at all. Would your readers kindly inform me through the medium of your paper whether they have had a similar experience? Is it possible for the hen Canary to retain the fertilising germ of the cock Canary so long, or is my bird a Mule. (I ha'e ma doots.) I would be glad to show this doubtful bird to any member of the Western Counties O.S.

Type of Present-day Norwich Plainhead Canaries.

Fanciers of Norwich Take Action and Censure Judges.

Sir,—A meeting was held May 30, by the United Bird Breeding Society (Norwich), at their Club House, to consider the question of the judging of the present-day Norwich Plainhead. The chair was occupied by the President of the society (Mr. F. Cullington), supported by the leading fanciers of Norwich, including Messrs. W. W. Freestone (chairman, Norwich Alliance), Steward, Burrows, Vines, Shearing, Campling (breeder of Queen Mary's Canary), and others, and to hear the opinion of that well-known judge, Mr. Wollard. The chairman remarked that the meeting was called to consider a question that had been before the fanciers for some time past through the remarks of Mr. Wollard made at this club and reported in Cage Birds. As several letters appeared in that journal, it seemed that the same question prevailed at other places as well as Norwich, that is: Are the birds judged to the type laid down as being the ideal? The chairman thanked those present for their attendance. A letter of apology was read from Mr. Jacob Mackley for not being able to attend, but he said it was a step in the right direction, and wished it every success. Mr. Wollard then gave his opinion of the Norwich Plainhead as follows:—

Gentlemen,—It gives me great pleasure to be with you and try and illustrate at your request my views as to the type and quality of the Norwich Plainhead. Well, gentlemen, there seem to be different ideas with some judges as to what constitutes a Norwich Plainhead. One seems satisfied with any bird so long as it is big, with plenty of colour. Another goes in for type, size, and colour; another, big heads and necks—the rest doesn't matter. But, gentlemen, do these things constitute a Norwich Plainhead? I say decidedly not. You will often see Crestbreds of good Norwich type, and if colour fed it improves their quality, but it does not make them into Norwich Plainheads. Type is one thing, but type and quality combined are another; and a Norwich Plainhead is a bird of type, quality, and colour, also a bird of substance, not length, and in judging them you must combine quality with type. Of course, in judging you must always give and take; that is to say, should you have two good birds, and one beats the other just a little in quality, but the other is a little the better in type, they would run a bit close, that is, considering all other points equal. Undoubtedly, the best type bird would win, but should there be a marked difference in the quality of the two birds, it should be the other way. Now, gentlemen, as I have said before, the type I like is the Robin-shaped body, with short full neck, large round head, neither pinched at back nor front, with neither horns nor brows, large full eye, short, neat and clear beak, also clear legs and feet, legs to be short and strong, but not too thick, and when they jump from perch to perch I like to see them show just the joint, no thigh whatever. A bird that doesn't show the joint has the appearance of being crouchy, even if it is not so. I prefer the Robin-shaped body to the Bullfinch, because it is tapered off more behind, and the body behind the perch curves slightly upwards towards root of tail, thereby giving it the appearance at least of possessing a deeper chest and a shorter body. As to the quality, in an ideal specimen none of its feathers should be individually distinguishable, but should be of a downy nature, and look as though one feather covered the whole body. The flights and tail should be short, compact, and well balanced, with V at end of tail, the flights to just meet at the tips and lie on the tail. I like to see the flights and tail in this position, as though they were a fixture, when the bird jumps from perch to perch, as it gives them such a graceful carriage.

After considerable discussion, during which several members described the winners at the late Palace Show, it was unanimously carried that the time had arrived when societies should instruct their judges to act in accordance with the type laid down, as they considered that it was not uniform throughout the shows. It was also carried that the "Norwich Alliance" should take up the question, and Mr. Freestone, the chairman, promised to convene a meeting of the twelve societies in Norwich to instruct their judges to act up to standard.

A Robin which Tamed Itself.

Friends for Four Years.

Sir,—I read the following about a tame Robin in "Country Life," and send it you in the hope that it may interest readers:—A Robin has lived on friendly terms with us for four successive seasons, says the writer, R. Prendergast. He first appeared in the summer of 1909, being then in immature plumage. He and another bird of the same age (they may have been brothers) suddenly established an intimacy with us, settling upon our knees for crumbs, and fighting daily, even upon our very laps, for the monopoly of that part of the garden. In the hushes a Robin of the older generation, bearing the marks of strife in the shape of a cut across his cheek, constantly chased these two. Very likely he considered it his domain, before their advent. They may have been his sons, ousting him from his own territory. At any rate, in the course of the summer, he abdicated in their favour, and one of the youngsters established his supremacy over the other, who soon disappeared also, leaving his successful rival alone in possession of that region, and of the privilege of crumbs on knees. He remained in enjoyment of these until September, when he left us, only to suddenly reappear and resume his familiar habits in the July of 1910, when he returned alone and at once alighted upon our knees, this time in full adult plumage, demanding crumbs. Throughout that summer he was our constant companion, whenever we were in the garden, until he left in the autumn. In the following year he reappeared in June, at once settling down into his old ways as though he had never been away. This instant resumption of former habits has every year proved his identity, as there have never been any preliminaries to his friendship; he has always dropped at once into his previous relations. In 1911 he had a nest, and when the little birds were hatched he would bring them to sit on the branches near, while he flew to and fro with crumbs from our knees to them. He went off in July that year, returning in early August and staying with us until October. This year he came back in March, settling in his old way straight on to our knees as we chanced to sit in the garden, and the supply of cake not being at once to hand, he waited with patient comprehension while it was fetched from the house. Since then he has been with us daily, though we guessed, from his frequent flights in the same direction, that he had a home of his own. One day, when we were in a field near the garden, his familiar form was seen hopping to and fro, and a very slight search revealed the nest in a bank. He betrayed no uneasiness at our discovering it, nor seemed to have any desire to conceal it, and when we sat down a few feet from the nest, spreading the crumbs as usual, he at once appreciated the situation, flying openly backwards and forwards with crumbs for the five children. He carefully provides them with a mixed diet, hunting in the bushes for grubs and caterpillars, pursuing flying game and adroitly catching it on the wing, sometimes breaking off to extract a nice worm from the grass, and managing with wonderful facility to carry all these wriggling dainties tucked away near the root of his bill; sometimes alighting to pick up a final piece of cake with his mouth already full of other articles of diet. He has now become quite brazen in his courage, settling repeatedly upon foot, knee, or shoulder until duly fed, and willingly pecking at a piece of cake held in the hand, nor is he frightened by any noises that may be made near him. We have easily been able to take six consecutive photographs of him while feeding upon our knees.

*Paid Out.

"Oh George, who opened the Canary cage?" "I did! You told me a little bird was whispering to you when I was naughty, so I knew it must be him, as there was no other bird about. I opened it, and the cat ate him. That's what he's got for telling on me!" Sent by Vivian Horwood (age 8), 2 Whitbread Avenue, Bedford.

*A "Moss-Cheeper's" Bravery.

As my father and I were recently walking along an old road near Ayr with our fox-terrier dog, a little Moss-Cheeper darted out from the bank at the road-side, and flying round the dog, pecked at it repeatedly. The brave little bird had to retreat as the dog ran after it and tried to catch it. The reason for the attack was that the Moss-Cheeper had its nest near.—Sent by William Knox (age 13), 8 Castlehill Road, Ayr, Scotland.

A "Moving" Story.

The other day some farm hands were engaged in digging down a hedge next to our garden, when they came across a Blackbird's nest, which I knew of. I waited to see what they would do with it. When one of them saw it with the hen sitting closely he lifted the nest and carried it a distance of twenty yards (with the hen still sitting closely) to a hawthorn bush in our garden where she successfully finished rearing her brood.—Sent by D. T. Williams (age 10 years 1 month), Mason Cottage, St. Clears.

Singing Contests.

WESTHOUGHTON.

Open affiliated contest for time and quality, June 8, at Headquarters, Horse Shoe Inn, Wingates, when all the affiliated Linnet clubs of Lancashire will be expected to send five birds, this being our first contest under affiliation rules. Singing to commence at 2.—J. Woodward, Sec.

CHILTON.

A good company assembled at the Workman's Club, Chilton, June 1, to hear Brown Linnet singing, when 49 birds competed. Result:—1, Stephenson; 2, Burton; 3, Bell; 4, Stephenson. Judge, J. Gardner; timekeeper, C. Stobbs. Match: Cant's Benny Lad beat Cragg's Aldermap House.—W. Fairless, Sec.

SALFORD.

All Manchester and District fanciers are earnestly requested to note that we hold another open contest for time and quality, at The Boathouse Hotel, on June 15, when the following clubs will be well represented:—Westhoughton, Blackburn, Leigh, Wigan, Atherton, Tyldsley. This being one of our special gatherings, we hope all members and friends will visit us. The usual prizes will be given to the added £1 to the entrance fee of 1s. Start at 2 prompt. Whitehaven fanciers kindly note. We give them a hearty invitation: Salford (L. and Y.) nearest station. Weaste cars pass the Hotel.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

TO DURHAM LINNET FANCIERS.

At our last Linnet contest it was decided to make our late judge, Mr. Geo. Reed (Brandon) a small present for his services amongst us. We all know that he is a very hard worker for our hobby; he has judged 100 contests, and is now acting secretary for us. He is always to the front in getting contests up and carrying them through. This will not be a heavy strain upon us, and I know Mr. Reed will be very proud to see that we are still taking an interest in him. I shall be pleased to take subscriptions, no matter how small, at any future contest I attend, or it can be sent to me, which will be thankfully received and acknowledged.—E. Hewitson, 12, Lambton Street, Langley Park, Co. Durham.

KIPPAX.

Open contest held May 25, at Commercial Hotel, when 18 birds entered. 1 (copper kettle), J. Liversedge, jun.; 2 (pair carvers), Mrs. Gamble. Only two birds sung. It was one of the worst contests we have had for singing, and it was our first open sing; the winners only sung 30 seconds, and the 2nd 11 secs. Tappers, W. Perkin and J. Levereedge. Timekeepers, R. Plows and O. Potter. Members' sing, June 1, when 13 birds entered: 1, J. Liversedge, 58 secs.; 2, O. Potter, 35 secs.; 3, A. Tomkin, 30 secs. Timekeepers: T. Hall and O. Potter. Mr. Liversedge's bird is making a name for itself, scoring 82 seconds in an open contest on Whit Tuesday, at Castleford. It has won several firsts and seconds at Kippax. Linnet fanciers should join our club and win some prizes, and help to swell our membership, and see what their birds are worth at contest singing. Entrance fee, 1s., and 2d. per week contribution.—R. Plows, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Tenth annual contest held Prince Albert Inn May 27th, when 13 of the best picked birds in England sang for eight good prizes. A large number of members and friends were present. Mrs. M. A. Saynor added £1 to prize money, Mr. John Smith 7s. 6d., and Mr. Woodhead gave 1 stone of Linnet seed. Judges, E. Wood and C. Lorriman. 1st, A. Binns, copper kettle and 8s. 6d.; 2nd, A. Bryan, half tea set and 7s. 6d.; 3rd, A. Turner, teapot set and 7s.; 4th, T. Chippendale; 5th, W. Lorriman; 6th, J. Smith; 7th, H. Playforth; 8th, P. Madden. After the contest we had an enjoyable afternoon's harmony. Also two contests May 28th, when our hostess gave five good prizes, first contest between 14 picked birds. Judges, H. Hayes and D. Madden. 1st, P. Madden; 2nd, A. Binns; 3rd, W. Hinceon. Second contest between 16 picked birds. Judges, D. Madden and C. Lorriman. 1st, P. Madden; 2nd, G. Backhouse.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

Usual week-end singing contest June 2nd, at Prince Albert Inn. Mrs. M. A. Saynor gave four good prizes for quality singing; 27 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. A. Butler and C. Lorriman. 1st, P. Madden; 2nd and 3rd, divided between A. Binns and Tolly Soloman; 4th, J. Clark.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Contest May 25, at George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street. 53 birds sang for 10 good prizes and specials. Some fairly good time was done. Winners: 1, E. Smith, 91; B. Nelson, 84; W. Nelson, 64; J. Kirk, 62; J. Wainwright, 56; A. Sweeting, 56; A. Sweeting, 55; C. Scott, 55; T. Piper, 48; S. Morley, 41. Also May 26; 36 birds competed in 3 minutes' sing for 3 good prizes, the winner doing well. 1, W. Nelson, 94; C. Scott, 46; W. Ratcliffe, 39. Open sing, May 28. 52 birds entered for 4 minutes' sing, and four good prizes. Linnet fanciers from all surrounding clubs brought their birds. Mr. Driver and Mr. L. Thompson came from Sheffield with five good birds, including Mr. E. Bisby's famous Linnet Bull Dog. The Sheffield birds are the best we have had at Castleford, but our style of singing did not suit them. One of the birds did 42 seconds, the biggest break of the contest. Winners: 1, Nelson, 109; J. Liversidge, 81; E. Smith, 78; W. Nelson, 69. Also June 1; 42 birds sung for four good prizes, when the birds sung very well, most of them doing 60 sec. or more. It was the best average contest this year. Winners: 1, A. Sweeting, 94; B. Nelson, 86; W. Ratcliffe; 79; J. Kirk, 73. Also June 2; 21 birds entered for a 3-minutes' sing, but the birds did not give much satisfaction. They have been doing so much work these holidays they are a bit tired. Winners: 1, W. Nelson, 62; J. Kirk, W. Ratcliffe, 48.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

WITTON GILBERT.

Linnet sing held at Glendenning Arms June 1; 42 birds competed. This, without a doubt, was the best contest ever heard, all birds being in the pink of condition. Mr. Wit. Wilson judged, and his awards were well taken. 1, 2, 4, divided between Hewitson and Bairstow; 3, Ridley. The runners-up were Barker, Witherspoon, and Atie. After the contest a concert was given, and a grand evening was spent by all.—Geo. Reed, Sec.

WARRINGTON.

Open contest held at Mersey Hotel, May 25, when we had a fair entry. 1, 3, J. Wych; 2, J. Webb. Club contest, May 27, for nine good prizes. Some of the birds did a good performance. Two new members were made. Anyone wishing to join can do so by paying up from Whit Sunday. Winners: 1, Green; 2, 3, J. Wych; 4, 7, F. Hughes; 5, J. Webb; 6, Stanway; 8, J. Coan; 9, C. Corbett. Open contests every other Saturday, to commence at 2.30 p.m. Next contest June 14.—F. Hughes, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Affiliated contest for time and quality, May 25, at headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook. 54 birds competed for eight prizes. All the affiliated clubs were present. Quality: 1, J. Green; 2, G. Milligan (Wigan); 3, J. Caswell (Salford); 4, Mrs. Smedley (Salford). Time: 1, 2, Poole (Leigh); 3, W. Cain (Salford); 4, J. McAllister. Judges: Quality, W. Barnes, Dobson. Tapping Time: J. Evans and J. Ashurst, Wigan. Tappers, R. Hayhurst and Parkinson. Minute man, T. A. Hurst. Birdman, C. Dobson. Boothman cup contest, for members only, will be held June 8, singing to commence at 2 o'clock; entrance fee, 6d. per bird.—R. Hayhurst.

LEEDS.

Stead; 5th, T. Stead; 6th, H. Whitfield; 7th, M. Brophy; 8th, H. Robinson; 9th, A. Richardson; 10th, McNabbs; 11th, A. Nicholson; 12th, W. Tarrar; 13th, W. Tarrar; 14th, H. Whitfield; 15th, T. Stead; 16th, C. Ward; 17th, H. Ward; 18th, Nelson. Mr. O. Grady, special prize. Judges, Messrs. A. Jennings, T. Summers, S. Hardcastle. Also May 28th, when 18 birds sang for three prizes given by Mr. Tillotson; some good singing was heard: 1st, T. Stead; 2nd, T. Chadwick; 3rd, shared by T. Chadwick and H. Robinson. Judges, W. Naylor and J. Thompson. Also June 1st, 19 birds sang. 1st, H. Whitfield; 2nd, D. Madden; 3rd shared by J. Hollingworth and T. Chadwick. Also June 2nd, 19 birds. 1st, T. Stead; 2nd, T. Stead; 3rd, T. Chadwick; 4th, H. Whitfield; judges, W. Naylor, A. Jennings.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

First annual contest, May 27, at the Woodman Inn, for 16 good prizes, members only. 28 birds competed, and a splendid afternoon was passed. All the prizes were on show, and many came to see them. First prize was a tea service, and second a flower stand, won by Mr. T. Piper; 3rd, flower stand, Mr. C. Scott; 4th, Mr. B. Nelson, ornaments set, with timepiece. Nearly every member got a prize. On June 1, members' contest. S. Scott 1, Hinchliff 2, Martin 3; Jun 2, open contest, Martin 1, Piper 2 and 3. Open contests will be held every Sunday until further notice. First bird at 1. We have one of the finest windows in the district.—W. Beard, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly contest held Royal George, Brightside Lane, June 1. Mr. C. Hill gave three special prizes for three minutes' time singing. 16 birds entered, and some good singing was heard. 1 and 3, Thompson, 97 and 85 sec.; 2, Driver, 95 sec.; Albert 65 sec.; Thompson, 51 sec.; Griffiths, 49 sec. June 2; Mr. Hill gave three special prizes, 3 minutes' time singing. Only nine birds entered. 1, 3, Thompson, 78 and 55 sec.; 2, Driver, 68 sec.; Albert 42 sec. Contest every Saturday and Sunday. First pair sing at 3. After contest, Driver and Cole sung a match, 1 minute face singing. Driver won with 51 sec., Cole 47 sec.—A. Thompson.

BUSLINGTHORPE.

Quality singing contest held Skinners Arms, Buslingthorpe, May 28, when 29 birds (best in Yorks.) competed for copper kettle and prize money. 1, Sellars; 2, Farra; 3, 4, Clark. Judges, C. Clayton and Green. Also June 1: 1, 3, Ward; 2, Sellars. Judges, Clayton and Heyes. Also June 2: 1, 2, Ward; 3, Kibbler. Judges, Clayton and J. Granger. All members are requested to attend special meeting June 9, at 7 o'clock.—C. Clayton.

LANCASHIRE AFFILIATION.

Linnet contest at Queen's Arms, Atherton, June 1. There was a record entry for this year of 63 birds. Each club in the affiliation was well represented, and some very good singing was done, both for quality and time; in fact, the best all-round singing we have had this year. The usual eight prizes were given, four for time and four for quality. Winners for quality:—W. Barnes (Wigan), W. H. Topping (Blackburn), J. McAllister (Leigh), and J. W. Jones (Leigh). For time:—J. Poole, 157, 1st; F. Kennedy, 138, 2nd; D. Banks, 122, 3rd; J. Poole, 109, 4th. Judges for quality: J. W. Jones, T. Statham, and F. Gilbin. For time: J. Ashurst and J. Evens. Tappers: W. Parkinson and W. Halliwell; timekeeper, F. Kennedy; birdman, E. Holcroft. Will all affiliated and other members kindly note that there is an open Linnet contest for quality and time, at the Horse Shoe Inn, Wingate, Westhoughton, June 8. First pair up at 2 o'clock. Hoping that members will make this a success, being the first open contest.—J. McAllister, Sec.

TWYNYRODYN F.S.

First show held Whit Monday at the Twynyrodyn School Hall, which is admirably suited, being free from draughts, and having good light. This new society can congratulate themselves on their first venture, having 209 entries (all sections) in 18 classes. Mr. W. Evans made an ideal secretary, and was assisted by a good working committee headed by Mr. Joe William as show manager. A large number of fanciers spent an enjoyable day. Mr. J. H. Jones judged, and gave complete satisfaction. Four classes were provided, and the British birds totalled 18 good specimens.

YORKS. (7): 1, W. Evans, buff, good length, nice position, in fine feather; 2, Thos. Lewis, another very decent bird, but slightly frilled; 3, vhc, hc, c, J. Thomas, 3rd good shape and length, not now in the best of feather. A.O.V. CAN. (5): 1 withheld; 2 vhc, c, Farrow, good Green Scotch Fancy, nice position, comes down well with prominent shoulders; 3, Lewis, fair, good bird, but trifle small for a cock; hc, Howell; c, Parry. MULE (5): All Goldie Mules: 1st withheld; 2, G. Davies, excels in size and col.; 3, vhc, c, Tom Williams, trio of good birds, 3rd variegs., natural colour, vhc larger, but not the quality; c, Howells. BRITISH (18): 1, A. Jones, real grand Goldfinch, good size, nice tan and markings, only fault not so square in blaze as we should like; 2, Tom Williams, not quite so large as winner, nice blaze, a good Finch; 3, Joe Parry, yet another good Goldie; extra 3, W. Davies, again a Goldfinch, of really nice quality; vhc, Parry, W. Williams; hc, W. Williams, Wheeler; c, W. Evans.

ROUND THE YOUNG BIRD SHOWS.

LEEDS C.B.S.

First Feather Show held headquarters, June 1. During the judging ordinary business was transacted, and three new members were elected in Messrs. Gaunt, Gath, and Norwood. Mr. Wilson, our genial and enterprising secretary, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. YORK. YELL.: 1, 4, hc, Baldwinson; 2, Sykes; 3, vhc, c, Rhodes. BUFF: 1, 2, 4, Sykes; 3, Baldwinson; vhc, Rhodes; hc, c, Storey. BRIT., GOLD. OR BULLFINCH: 1, 2, Middleton. A.O.V.: 1, 4, Kay; 2 3, Middleton.—J. P. Moir, Assist. Sec.

EASTFIELD SIDE (Sutton-in-Ashfield).

Young bird show held June 1, at headquarters, when a fairly good number of birds were staged. Judge, Mr. G. Marshall.

YELL. NOR.: 1, Caunt and Keeling, nice bird, very promising; 2, J. Waldram, little behind winner, with a good moult will hold its own; 3, J. Leam. BUFF: 1, sp., 2, C. Connah, two real good birds, 1st full of quality and the best buff seen out this year; 3, Allsopp Bros.; vhc, W. Owen; hc, C. Waldram; c, S. Woolley. CREST: 1, J. Norwood, very nice dark crest; 2, Shaw and Booth; 3, vhc, Nuttall Bros. C.B.: 1, Norwood; 2, Shaw and Booth. BRIT.: 1, 2, G. Ward. 1st good Linnet, 2nd a nice sized Goldie. The monthly meeting was held after the show. Decided to have bills printed for July show, and to have our photographs taken, if we can get a man to risk his machine. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Marshall for judging the show.—B. Gabbitass.

BANKFOOT AND DIST. C.B.S.

First Y.B. Show held Red Lion Hotel, June 1. Mr. J. Bailey (Allerton) judged, and his awards were entirely satisfactory. Special for best bird was won by Mr. J. Crowther; sp. best green-marked, Mr. G. Hudson; most points, Mr. J. Crowther; most points with birds other than those counting for competition, was tied for by Messrs. G. Hudson, and C. Bastow. These specials were kindly given by Messrs. S. Dean, S. Crossley, J. Lawson, and C. Bastow. The entry suffered owing to the poor breeding season experienced by the majority of our members, and also by holding the show rather earlier than usual. CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, 3 Crowther; 2, Hudson; 4, Self; vhc, Lawson; hc, c, Bastow. BUFF: 1, Crowther; 2, Hudson; 3, Hardaker; 4, Lawson; vhc, c, Musson; hc, Wilman. EVEN OR UNEVEN MKD. Club Reports.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting, June 1, in Club Hall, when the following new members were enrolled:—W. Clement, J. Mason, G. Stoddart. Mr. W. Brown was elected one of our vice-presidents for our open show October 5. Mr. A. Holden, Gateshead, was elected as judge for the Canary section, and Mr. J. Stranger, Pelton Fell, for the British and Mule sections. Decided that all members try to get as many specials for open show as they could, and report same at next meeting, June 22, in club hall, at 6.—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting, held at Oldham Hall, May 23, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. The following were nominated for membership: Messrs. Wilson, Hamilton; Parker, South Shields; Greenwell, Wallsend-on-Tyne; Little, Percy Main; and Ridley, Blackhill. Applications for patronage received from Newcastle-on-Tyne, Manchester, Halifax, Preston, Rochdale, Llanelly, London C.B.A., Bradford National, Scottish National, and Liverpool O.S. There is still time for further applications, the list closes prior to the July meeting, held 25th prox. Decided to hold a night nest feather show at the June meeting, with the following classification: Yorks., Greens, Self-Yell., Self-Buff, Foul Yell., Foul Buff, Ncr., Green, the same; Bord., Greens, Self or Foul Yell., Self or Foul Buff, Clear Yorks.; Clear Tkd., or uneven mkd. Yell., ditto Buff, Clear Nor. and Bord.; similar classes; A.O.V. Yell. or Buff, and A.S. Brit. 10s. has been allotted for specials, and several members have given seed show cages, etc., for competition. Judges, Norwich, V. H. Deacon; Borders, J. Walker; remainder, J. W. Metcalfe; fee 6d. per cage. Birds to be staged 7.30 p.m. The committee trust the members will turn up in full force; if successful, a further show will be held in July.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

A Lecture on "Yorkshires Past and Present."

A very interesting meeting took place on June 1, when a paper on "Past and Present Yorkshire Breeding" was read by Mr. E. Pretty, and a very instructive discussion took place. I was sorry that only a few members attended, for it is not much encouragement to prepare an address, and then have to deliver it to half-a-dozen, or so. I hope we shall have larger audiences. We are promised a very keen competition for the Cathcart cup, which we hope to have on view in a very short time, so that members may come and bring their friends to see it.—Alfred Mowl, Hon. Sec.

Mr. Pretty's Lecture.

Mr. Pretty remarked that the Yorkshire of the past was a very thin bird, and he doubted very much if it exceeded 6½ins. long. They were birds with a close fitting jacket, and very short feather. The saying was that the ideal bird should pass through a wedding ring. I must say I have yet to see it done. In those days coarse-feathered birds were not known. Although small—at the present day we should call them weeds—they were very graceful little fellows, being bred from the Belgian and Norwich cross. The present day bird appears to be a "go as you please" sort; in fact, I do not know where we are drifting to. Some of our stock birds exceed 8in. in length. A few years back the Yorkshire men had a conference on the length, and made a law that the show bird should not exceed 6½ins. That did not last very long; the breeders got exceeding the length, and the judges gave their awards to the long birds; so you see clubs make standards and judges mutilate them. I think it is quite time something should be done to keep the bird as a Yorkshire, if not, you will very shortly be unable to distinguish the Lancashire with a close fitting jacket from a Yorkshire.

The introduction of the Cinnamon into the Yorkshire has done volumes for the bird. It has given that beautiful silkiness of feather and high colour, also pale birds with fountains of colour under them. The birds of to-day are to be seen with long flat heads. Too much attention has been given to long-sided birds. It is quite time that our judges paid a little more attention to the head properties; that is, a small, round, marble head; in fact, a Belgian head. The Yorkshire being one of the birds known as a position bird, the more you handle it in a show cage the better. A show cage should be hung on the cage door for the bird to hop in and out; this also helps to get the bird into position. They are also trained in cages specially made for the purpose, with peep holes and sliding seed boxes. Some fanciers use a looking glass for the birds to see themselves. I think nothing beats well handling in a show cage. The present day bird is bred from a Lancashire and Belgian cross, but avoid using those with long flat heads. After the lecture several questions were asked, which the lecturer answered very satisfactorily. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Pretty for his most able and instructive discourse. Next meeting on June 15th, when our coming young birds show will be the topic of the evening.—G. G. Stubbs, Official Reporter.

PAISLEY TANNAHILL O.S.

Monthly meeting held in Mr. Lockie's, 2, St. James' Street, June 1, Mr. R. Neil (president) in the chair. Records of eggs and young were taken, and the nine members present reported 34 eggs and 59 young. There will be no metings in July and August. The president intimated his change of residence to 1, Barnes Street, Barrhead.—J. Stewart, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.S.

Fortnightly meeting held May 25, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding over a good attendance. The action of the secretary in sending a letter of condolence to Mrs. Thos. Taylor was confirmed, several members testifying to the worth of our late esteemed member. At the next meeting, June 8, classification will be considered for our open show, Jan. 17 and 18, 1913, when we hope for a full attendance. I shall be glad to hear from anyone willing to guarantee classes, or who will give specials. As the time limit for paying annual subscriptions is rapidly approaching, will members please give it their attention?—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

GRIMSBY AND CLEETHORPES ROLLER C.S.

Monthly meeting held Club Room, May 25. Judges for open show held December 19 and 20 were selected, viz., Messrs. Roebl (London), Wareing (Bury), and Jacquemin (Wolverhampton). We hope by engaging three judges from the most popular centres to secure the support of all fanciers. Our last show was so well spoken of by exhibitors that we are naturally looking forward to an increased number of entries at our next, and it was in anticipation of this that we decided to engage one more judge. Fanciers will know that their exhibits will have the same chance of being heard and judged as they had last year.—F. Mason, Hon. Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

Usual meeting at Deansgate Hotel, May 20th. A very good muster of members and friends met together to listen to a lecture by Mr. Houlton (St. Helen's) on "British Cage Birds." This proved to be, as most of us expected, a very interesting and instructive lecture. Mr. Houlton took us through the Fancy, from the feeding, moulting, etc., to the showing of most British birds. He spoke very highly of sunflower seeds for all Finches. This he said he had been using with great satisfaction for 26 or 27 years, having first got the wrinkle from the fanciers in Scotland.

The small seeds Mr. Houlton thought kept the birds too busy filling their stomachs, leaving them no time to preen themselves. A weed which Mr. Houlton called "red neise" was also very much recommended. This he described as a plant which grew on waste ground, and which bears what appears to be a red flower, something after the shape and style of the spirea, but which on closer examination, proves to be clusters of small seeds. These are relished by most Finches and are a grand conditioner. We were advised to be careful in the use of hemp in the case of the Bullfinch and Siskin. Most other birds could have a fair quantity along with sunflower and other seeds. Baths of cold soft water were strongly recommended for all British birds which would take them; hand washing was not recommended, as it was found that the tendency was to take away the natural gloss from the plumage. For Softbills generally Indian meal, together with dried flies, ants' eggs, dried fruits, such as sultanas, currants, etc., was recommended as a staple diet, this being varied with the different insects, grubs, etc., which might be procurable, together with boiled potato, raw carrot, chickweed, etc., and sweetened with raw sugar. Cockroaches he recommended as a good standby; these may be kept 12 months by being scalded, and dried and stored in canisters. On concluding his lecture, Mr. Houlton was heartily thanked on behalf of the society and friends, by Mr. Atkinson, Mr. Fairhurst and Mr. Richards, and Mr. Houlton replied briefly. Mr. Moorbey was also thanked for his part in arranging the ramble to Mottram. After a reply by Mr Moorbey, we closed a very enjoyable and instructive meeting.—E. H. Fulcher, Assist. Sec. and Treas.

DARLINGTON C. & B.B.F.A.

Meeting held May 29th, at George Hotel, Mr. H. C. Carter in the chair. Decided to hold first feather show June 26th; five classes. Prize money on sliding scale. Decided to pay in full all members' prize money in connection with last annual show. Schedule for next open show was partly revised and held over until next meeting.—A. Walker.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, May 25, President James Muir in the chair. Table show of British birds. Mr. J. Hunter judge. 1, Goldie, 3, Linnet, R. Gardner; 2, J. Muir, Bramblefinch; 4, Greenfinch, J. Marshall. Next meeting June 22, owing to the holidays. Eight new members were elected. Will members please note address.—Walter Clarkson, 130, Victoria Place, Falkirk.

BERMONDSEY AND ROTHERHITHE F.A.

General meeting held at Jolly Gardeners, Rotherhithe New-road, Mr. E. J. Coombes in the chair, supported by a fair number of members. Ten silver medals were handed over to members present. It was decided that next show be for birds any age on June 20th at above. Judge, Mr. Matthes. Medals for first and second best in show. Entries close June 15th.—John Clark, Sec. and Treas.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Monthly meeting and table show held at Mr. Lumley's May 25th, Mr. S. Foster in the chair. Decided to hold a table show June 22nd. Classes: Nor. (buff), Yorks. (yell.), Bord. (buff), and A.O.V. Canary, all to be feather birds, and 1 British (Greenfinch). Mr. W. H. Butler, Stanley, judge. We have booked the Anfield Plain Co-op. Hall for annual show December 22nd. It is the best hall in the district for a cage bird show, being well lighted and very comfortable. We had a grand table show and good turn up of members, all being very eager to secure most points towards the teapot. These table shows are doing a lot of good for the society both financially and in the way the members turn up to the meetings. The table show was judged by Mr. J. Snell, of Stanley, who expects to be leaving England soon to go to New Zealand; his awards gave every satisfaction. LINNET: 1, R. Humphrey; 2, 3, R. Peart. GREENFINCH: 1, Peart; 2, Humphey; 3, J. Williams. GOLDFINCH: 1, Humphrey; 2, Williams; 3, T. Robinson. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Humphrey; 3, Peart. Mr. Humphrey secured a good lead in points, being 12 points above the next to him.—R. Peart, Sec.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

At our next meeting we shall be having entries for the first feather show, and despite the bad luck which some of our members have had with breeding, I am expecting to see a good entry. Will any member not having had a schedule ask, and I will see he gets one.—Jas. Cope, Sec.

HETTON-LE-HOLE C.B.S.

Meeting held June 1, at Crown Inn, Mr. Hy. Wilson in the chair. Decided not to hold a F.F. show this year, as members are doing so badly in the breeding room, threes and fours being about the order. It was also decided to omit three payments in the contributions this year, owing to unpreventable causes. It is to be hoped that all our members make a good finish of the breeding season, if not in quantity, in quality, and so help us to make our annual show a grand success.—A. J. Notley, Sec.

SWINDON F. AND F.A.

Monthly meeting held at Baths, May 29, Mr. H. R. Halliday in the chair. Mr. T. Patterson very kindly judged the table show. New members elected: Messrs. J. H. Simpson, J. Brunker, D. Hoare, S. Tanner and C. Bridgeman. Mr. J. T. Edmonds was elected on the committee in place of Mr. A. D. Winter, who has left the district. Next meeting at Baths, June 26, at 8. Table show of young rabbits. Mr. W. H. Carter, of Shaw, has kindly promised a medal for the best. Mr. H. Smith will judge. Any fancier heartily welcomed.—W. J. Moran, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held at the Nag's Head Cocoa House, Foregate Street, May 28, Mr. F. C. Parker presiding over a fair attendance. Mr. Way, our president, has kindly presented the society with a cup value £2 2s., to be competed for at our annual show. After business, a discussion on the birds was opened, the subjects touched being the colour and colour-feeding, the egg, fertilization, and the forming of the young bird, the members giving their experiences in a most masterly fashion, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the younger members. The secretary then announced that he would receive the collecting books at the next monthly meeting in June. Please note: the new address of the hon. sec. is 25, Francis St., Chester.—R. W. Williams.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

The chief attractions at the monthly meeting held at 6, The Broadway, on Monday evening, were a judging competition and a lecture by Mr. J. Robson, on British birds. Mr. W. H. Stoakley presided, and there were some 50 members and visitors present, including a very good proportion of the fair sex. Four new members were elected, one lady and three gentlemen, and five others were nominated. The sec., Mr. Smith, gave his usual report, and Mr. H. Dixon reported the success of the recent ramble from the point of view of enjoyment, and expressed the hope that more members would take part the next time a similar function was arranged. The schedule and rules for the young stock show, to be held in July, were discussed and passed, and it was announced that the society would have the patronage of the British Roller C.C. at the annual show. Mr. J. Robson was final judge in the judging competition, in which 25 members took part. The result was Mr. E. Gibbs 14 points, Mr. F. Beckett 9, Messrs. A. W. Simpson, G. P. Baker, A. H. Dyke, and L. G. Owen, 6 each; Mr. F. W. Owen, Mrs. Mullins and Mrs. Thynne, 5 each, Mr. T. Brown 3. The winners of special prizes were Mrs. Owen and son, for best bird bred in 1912, and Mr. A. W. Simpson, for best British bird. The chairman then welcomed Mr. Robson for the first time as a vice-president, and said he was sure all those present would be sorry to hear that Mr. Robson's son had recently undergone a somewhat severe operation and equally pleased to know that he was progressing favourably. Mr. Robson, in returning thanks, said he was always pleased to be with the members, and glad to recommend those living in the district to belong to such a well-managed society. At the conclusion of the lecture many questions were asked and most satisfactorily answered, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Robson by acclamation. The feature at the July meeting of the society will be "Questions and Answers," chiefly concerning colour feeding.—H. Smill, Hon. Sec.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held May 28th, Mr. Robinson in chair. Balance-sheet was adopted as being satisfactory, showing a balance of £4 5s. 10d., which shows a great change from last year. The prospects for our first nest feather show, which will be held at our new quarters, the Balmoral Hotel, Rochdale-road, look very bright. Two gold medals will be given, four highest awards to count. Will members please not forget the forthcoming ramble? Mr. Cowgill was selected as judge for November show. Next meeting night June 11th, when entries will be taken for F.F. show.—W. H. Tansey.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

At the monthly meeting of the above society there was again a fair attendance of members. After the ordinary business had been dealt with, members decided to hold first feather show in the Bisley Hotel, July 27, birds to be ready for the judge, Mr. C. Vallans, at 2.30. The annual schedule was carefully considered, and it was decided to add six or seven more classes to the schedule. We hope, therefore, that fanciers will rally round and support our efforts in endeavouring to cater for them. Messrs. Jas. Craig and T. Johnston, Blaydon, were elected members.—Geo. Havver, Sec.

SOUTH COUNTY DUBLIN C.B.A.

General meeting held Tuesday, May 21st, in the Court House, Town Hall, Kingstown. Mr. Reilly occupied the chair, and there was a fair attendance of members. Mr. Ramsey Phillips was unanimously elected president. An alteration was made in the rule dealing with the annual subscription, and a new rule was added concerning the constitution of the committee. The honorary membership list, which was recently opened, was read and received with applause. Owing to the strenuous efforts of the committee, the association has a substantial sum standing to its credit in the bank, and if such good work continues the premier township of Kingstown will undoubtedly be able to boast next November of the first cage bird show ever held in the district. The large concert room in the Town Hall will be at the disposal of the association for the occasion. After other minor matters were discussed, a very successful meeting was brought to a close.—D. Smyth, Hon. Sec.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE. When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

☞ 14 Days' Free Trial. ☜

¶The most sanitary and up-to-date method ever invented.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

HAND-REARED PIPING BULLFINCHES.

for 2½d. That's very cheap; too cheap to be true. But we do not mean that exactly. What we do mean is that "Nutshell" No 11. "The Bullfinch." will show you how to catch these richly coloured Britishers; how to hand-rear the young, how to teach "Bullies" to pipe tunes. The price is 2½d. post free, and you can get the book from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

What a fine ambition for a British bird lover! Too high? Not if you've got "Nutshell" No. 1, "The Goldfinch." This booklet shows you the simplest way to catch your own, how to treat the Goldfinch when caught, how to hand-rear the young; how to distinguish sex; and answers innumerable other "how's." For those who prefer buying to catching, there is a valuable section, and feeding troubles are completely overcome. The exhibition Goldfinch is described, and it is possible, if the hints are followed, for every fancier of British to have a winning Goldie. For full information as to moulting, and the best show and stock cages, you cannot better "Nutshell" No. 1, 2½d. post free from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Wood, Cross-st., Dunstable.

TO Lark fanciers: special select singing cock Skylark, splendid shop attraction, can be heard 200 yards; I will match him to sing any Lark in this country; he is a real loud contest bird, and been trained for that purpose; steady and a fine specimen of a real Dunstable Lark, 2/-; approval anywhere. Hear, and see, what you are buying; no fresh-caught rubbish; secret of feeding free. Hundreds of testimonials unsolicited: George Holt, Dunstable.

THE Skylark is an easily kept species of softbill, and is unequalled as a house bird, provided it receives proper attention. Look here! The feeding of Larks; the taking and feeding of the young; catching and sexing; moulting; hints concerning young birds; the Lark for contest singing; selecting the right bird; getting the right song; training for song and exhibition; these are the contents of "Nutshell" No. 3, "The Skylark," post free 2½d., from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

A. A. A. A. A. A. A. A.

"A" comes first in the alphabet, and with those who keep foreign birds, Avadavats should come first, for their beauty, grace, vivacity, confiding demeanour and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, merit them this distinction. Learn all about them from "Nutshell" No. 16, "Avadavats." It's by Wesley T. Page, a specialist in foreign birds, 2½d. post free, from the Publisher, 3154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our Agents. List on another page.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.
